Rides are not only offered for appointments, they are there to help provide a means of attending gatherings to keep seniors who might not get out as much, stay social. Cohasset often holds lunches at the CEA, sometimes with a theme centering around a holiday.

In addition, the center provides lecture series, technology classes, gourmet cooking classes, chair-yoga, and a variety of club activities such as book clubs and bridge clubs. There are medical programs offered through the CEA as well, including foot care clinics, blood pressure clinics, and a visiting opthamologist who checks and cleans glasses.

Every program at the CEA is geared toward providing the services seniors need. "We want to be known as a town that helps each other," said Bryanton, and if the success the CEA has had over the years is a gauge, then Cohasset surely is.

Forever young

For Thornton Gibbs, it's been a wonderful life

By Robert Slager
RSLAGER@CNC.COM

Father Time gave up on catching Thornton Gibbs a long, long time ago.

"Gibby" can still fill out an easy chair much the same way he once expanded his Wareham Vikings football uniform more than 70 years ago. Perhaps he doesn't move with the same burst of power he once unleashed on hapless defensive linemen, but the shoulders are still broad, the chest sturdy and tight.

There have been some concessions to 89 years of life. His gait flows more slowly. He leans forward to record other voices now. His mind can still cut through diamonds, though, and the memories of a most wonderful life spill like a waterfall over a mighty river.

He remembers his coach, Raymond Eartle, whom he called "a wonderful fellow." He remembers winning more than losing. He recalls his linemates Peter Bourne, Arthur Morrison, Dan Sweeney and Delano Hammond. The quarterback was Elmo Balboni. And that cute little cheerleader was named Bette.

That one was easy. He's been married to her for 67 years.

"We had a pretty good team," he says. "But I'm about the only one left."

Gibby played football all four years during high school, from 1932 to 1935. He played tackle and kicked extra points, and when he wasn't sticking his leather helmet in his pocket, he served as class president every single year. He coached the team in the 1950s while teaching physical education at the school.

He speaks of these days fondly, but he is not trapped in the prison of yesterday. Every day remains an adventure. He still takes school children on tours of historic sites around Wareham, including places such as the 1620 Tavern and the Kendrick House. As he shares local history with others, he seems unaware of how much a part of it he has become.

Thornton Gibbs stands with Bette, his wife of 67 years

"I'm not sure I'll ever really get old. I've never stood still long enough for that."
— Thornton Gibbs, 89 years young

"When you've been around as long as I have, people just seem to know you," he said.

But there's more to it than that. It's not even the countless hours he's spent volunteering for many organizations in town. It isn't even all the once-illiterate adults he taught how to read. It's the easy smile, the soft eyes above his 6-foot-4 frame. It's the magnet that lies within his heart.

"Children have always seemed to like me," he said, that old twinkle still sparkling in his eyes.

He spoke of the hard days he's known. He lived through the Depression, when he would stand in line at the butcher shop, cracking wise to the beaten souls around him, bringing a smile to their faces.

"It was a difficult time for a lot of people," he said. "But in some ways it wasn't so bad. There was no low class or high class. Folks who were once millionaires stood right with you in line. We were all the same."

The smile faded when he spoke of his daughter. She was only five when a tragic accident took her away. One the shelf of his basement he still has a little bank she once used for her pennies. On it was the face of a little monkey, the kind that used to collect spare change for the organ grinder.

"That was hard" was all he offered. There was no need to ask for more.

Gibby and his wife left Wareham after that. They spent nearly 20 years in Florida, where Gibby continued teaching. He fought tirelessly for desegregation in the class room, insisting it begin at the kindergarten level.

"Children don't know how to hate and fear," he said. "They have to be taught those things. I wanted them to learn about each other before they learned those things somewhere else."

He remembers how some of the children once brought only a biscuit with a slice of stewed potatoes for lunch. He made certain each of those kids had a healthy meal.

When he finally retired in 1978, he and Bette returned to Wareham. It was time to come home. Bette's father gave them the family house, where Bette was born, and Gibby and his wife have been there ever since.

"It's a good house," he said. "See these doors? Cyprus. That's good wood."

The basement holds a lifetime of wonder. Gibby's tool collection hangs on one wall. His paintings line the floor.

"It don't paint too much anymore," he said. "Not enough time."

He said there's no great secret to being married for 67 years. The key is to try not to fight too much.

"We've only had one fight in all the years we've been married," he said. "But it's still going on."

The twinkle gave him away.

Soon Bette returned from the supermarket. She shared her husband's easy gaze.

"Oh, I remember our first date," she said. "We went to the movies. We saw 'Men in White' with Clark Cable."

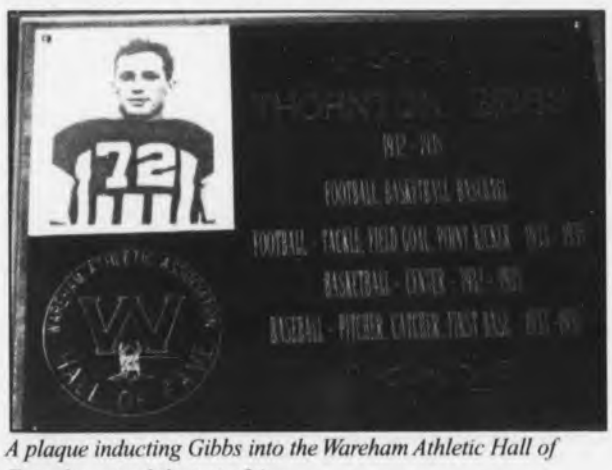
Gibby quickly interrupted.

"We sat in the balcony, if I recall."

"We most certainly did not," Bette replied.

Then she took a moment to explain what first attracted her to the man sitting to her left.

"Well, he was loyal and dependable," she noted.



"She just can't say that I'm handsome," Gibby said with a sigh.

Their eyes met for just a moment, speaking in silence of a love of many, many years.

"I'm not sure I'll ever really get old," Gibby said. "I've never stood still long enough for that."

With that Gibby rose from his chair, extending his hand. His grip was firm and strong.

And as he waved good-bye from his front porch, he seemed even bigger than he had before.

A plaque inducting Gibbs into the Wareham Athletic Hall of Fame has stood the test of time.

Thornton Gibbs shows off a female piggy bank, just one of the many interesting collectibles he keeps in his basement.

Day tripping gets seniors out of house

Shows, museums on cultural club's list of activities

By Ed Baker
EBAKER@CNC.COM

A Boston Pop's concert or a performance at the Wang Center are just some of the entertainment options seniors can enjoy through the Marshfield Council on Aging's Cultural Club.

"We go to museums, and concerts," said Nancy Hayden, a club coordinator. "If there is interest by the seniors in going to a ballet, we might go to Boston Ballet. We're going to try to see 'The Nutcracker' this year. We've also gone to Peabody Essex Museum. That is one of the best museums on the east coast."

She said many seniors especially like to visit Peabody Essex because the museum showcases a variety of modern and classical art designs from around the word.

"They have American art and art from other countries," said Hayden. "Right now they are displaying a Chinese house. It's a very popular exhibit and the museum is always changing its exhibits."

The club also affords seniors an opportunity to enjoy a musical performance or theater play.

"Sometimes we hear a performance by the Plymouth Philharmonic," said Hayden. "We have gone into the Hunnington Theater in Boston to see plays."

She said the turnout for a social event varies according to interest in a particular activity such as a ballet performance, etc.

"We have a core group of people that likes to go to Boston Ballet," said Hayden. "Sometimes we have had as many as 40 people sign up for a trip. Some people are not interested in museums or musicals. We've gone to the Massasoit Theater in Brockton to see a play and we've gone into the Repertory Theater in Cambridge."

Club activities are chosen by Hayden and several seniors.

"We share ideas on what to offer and then we look into getting the tickets and what it involves as far as transportation goes," said Hayden. "We also look at what people might get out of an activity before it's chosen."

Marshfield resident Kathleen Flaherty said the club's activities are "wonderful."

"Marshfield offers a lot of activities to seniors," said Flaherty. "They are good about getting us out and about. We've been to shows, the Boston Pops, you name it. There is a lot to be said for the Marshfield COA."

Hayden said the club gives seniors an opportunity to meet people with similar interests and enjoy an activity.

"We also offer a bus to go on trips," said Hayden. "Many seniors can't drive because of health reasons or because they don't like to drive in heavy traffic. Some of the people that go on the trips into Boston, might not go if they had to drive themselves. We've used all kind of vehicles. Sometimes we have used school buses. The school bus is wheel chair accessible and we can also use the lift to help people that have difficulty walking down the (bus) stairs."

"Marshfield offers a lot of activities to seniors. They are good about getting us out and about. We've been to shows, the Boston Pops, you name it. There is a lot to be said for the Marshfield COA."
— Kathleen Flaherty, Marshfield resident

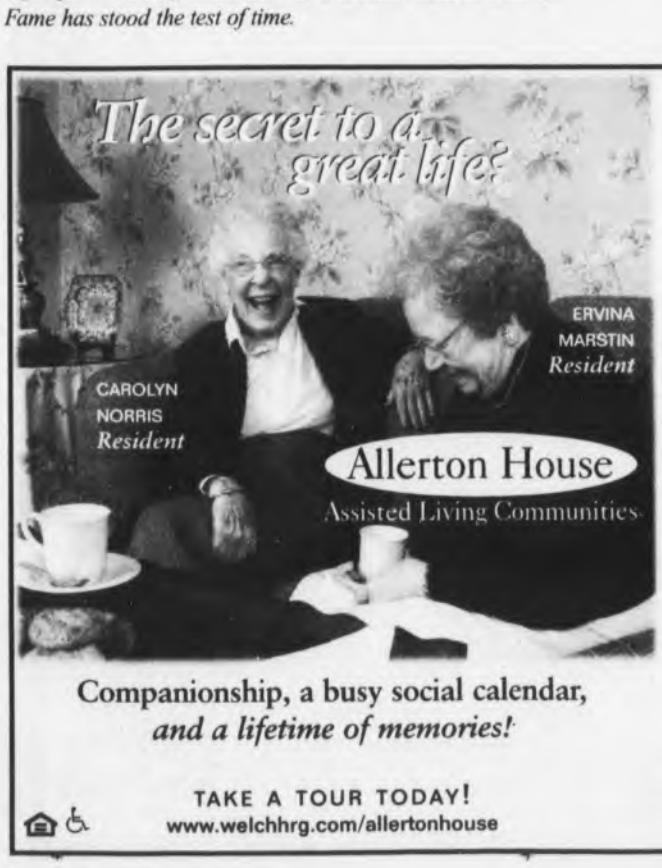
Flaherty said the bus transportation provided by the COA encourages seniors to sign up for day trips.

"Many of us want to do some of these things and now we have somebody to drive us which is fantastic," said Flaherty. "We now get on a bus and just go."

Most of the seniors that enjoy the outings are women in their 70s and 80s.

"When we go to the Peabody Essex we often get a small amount of men to go," said Hayden. "We also get some wives that are with their husbands. There are men that enjoy going to Boston Ballet."

She said one reason why the club activities largely consist of women is because many of them are widows.



"That is just the way our society happens to be," said Hayden.

The cultural club tries to go on an outing several times per year.

"It's a lot of fun," said Hayden. "I've met a lot of nice people by being involved with the club."

Flaherty said the club is a great place to socialize and meet people with common interests.

"Your house can be your greatest enemy," said Flaherty. "You need to get out."

South Shore softball league a hit with seniors

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

When the South Shore Senior Softball League first started in 2000, there were barely enough players to field two teams.

Since then, more than 200 men aged 55 and up have come through the program. The league — which plays its outdoor schedule from April to mid-September — is now at the point where it has five teams of 17 players, with hopes of adding a sixth team next season. Before it's all said and done, there's hope there will be as many as 10 clubs.

Not bad for a league that began so modestly, old newspapers were used for bases.

Scituate's Jim Hyde is regarded as the "founding father" of the league.

"There's really a need for it," Hyde said. "When guys retire, they're looking for something to do."

Many of the league's players are former high school and college athletes looking to continue their athletic endeavors. One of those players is Hanover's Joe Marmai.

A football, basketball and baseball player at Marshfield High School, Marmai says he sees some of the same guys from surrounding towns that he competed against during his high school days. And just because everyone is older now doesn't mean the guys have let up on one another.

"The best part of the game is riding each other," Marmai said. "It's definitely competitive out there, but it's fun competition. It's so relaxing."

During the spring/summer season, the league plays every Wednesday and Sunday at Central Field in Scituate. Players from all over southeast Massachusetts — Abington, Dedham, Stoughton, Plymouth, Bridgewater and Middleboro to name a few — get together for the games.

On the weekend following Labor Day, the league sends its best players to Harwich for an annual senior softball tournament. This year's event drew 52 teams from across the country, and Canada, with the only requirement being that players are at least 55 years old.

This year, the South Shore Seniors finished third in the competition.

"We used to get murdered," Hyde recalls. "Now we're one of the best teams in the country."

After the playoffs in mid-September — won this year by the Sea Dawgs, coached by Art LeMay and Glenn Tedford — the guys still get together twice a week in the fall for some pickup games, also at Central Field. The program, in fact, is year-round; during the winter months, the league plays at the Bridgewater SportsDome.

The league's next marquee event comes on New Year's Day at 9 a.m., when the guys will convene for the third annual Chili Bowl. Joan Wright, director of the Scituate Council on Aging who helped Hyde found the league five years ago, says the players' willingness to brave the elements on the first day of the year is just another indicator of their commitment to the game.

"These guys are hardcore softball players," Wright said. "It's awesome to watch them. There is nothing old about their attitudes; they're as youthful as kids."

Wright says some of the players are veterans, while many others spent most of their previous adult years immersed in careers and raising a family.

"Now, they're retired and they have fun keeping themselves in shape," Wright said. "It defies anyone's idea of 'elderly.'"

Marmai said about a dozen players in the league are over 70 years old. Weymouth's Frank Murano is the league's oldest player at 84 and, by all accounts, is one of the league's best.

Hyde says the league has grown from word-of-mouth and local press. Most associated with the league will tell you that the friendships formed among players over the years is one of the league's top assets.

"There's a lot of camaraderie," Hyde said. "We play all the time, and it's still a lot of fun. We should have six teams next year, and we hope to just keep growing and growing from there."

Old Roosters still have game

The Old Roosters led the league from wire to wire, finishing with an 18-6 record. Offensively, they scored an average 11-plus runs per game, while their defense held their opponents to a little over eight runs per game.

The South Shore Senior Softball League, sponsored by the Scituate Council on Aging, is open to all South Shore men 55 and older. It has games up to three times a week on Sunday and Wednesday mornings at 10 a.m. and Thursday evenings at 5 p.m. at Central Park Field, off of First Parish Road, in Scituate. There is also a traveling team to compete in games across the state. Call the Scituate Council on Aging at 781-545-8722 to obtain a registration form. Cost for the 2006 season is $30, which covers a shirt, hat and all the softball one wants to play.

Tom Kennedy from Norwell takes a mighty swing at the ball as he sends it to the outfield.

School board divided about returning funds

'Cost centers' floated as option

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school committee did not use $190,652 of its fiscal 2005 funds. While some members of the school committee have agreed to only use $80,823 and set aside the remaining $109,829 in the reserve fund — others don't want to see the money put into an account which requires town approval to be spent.

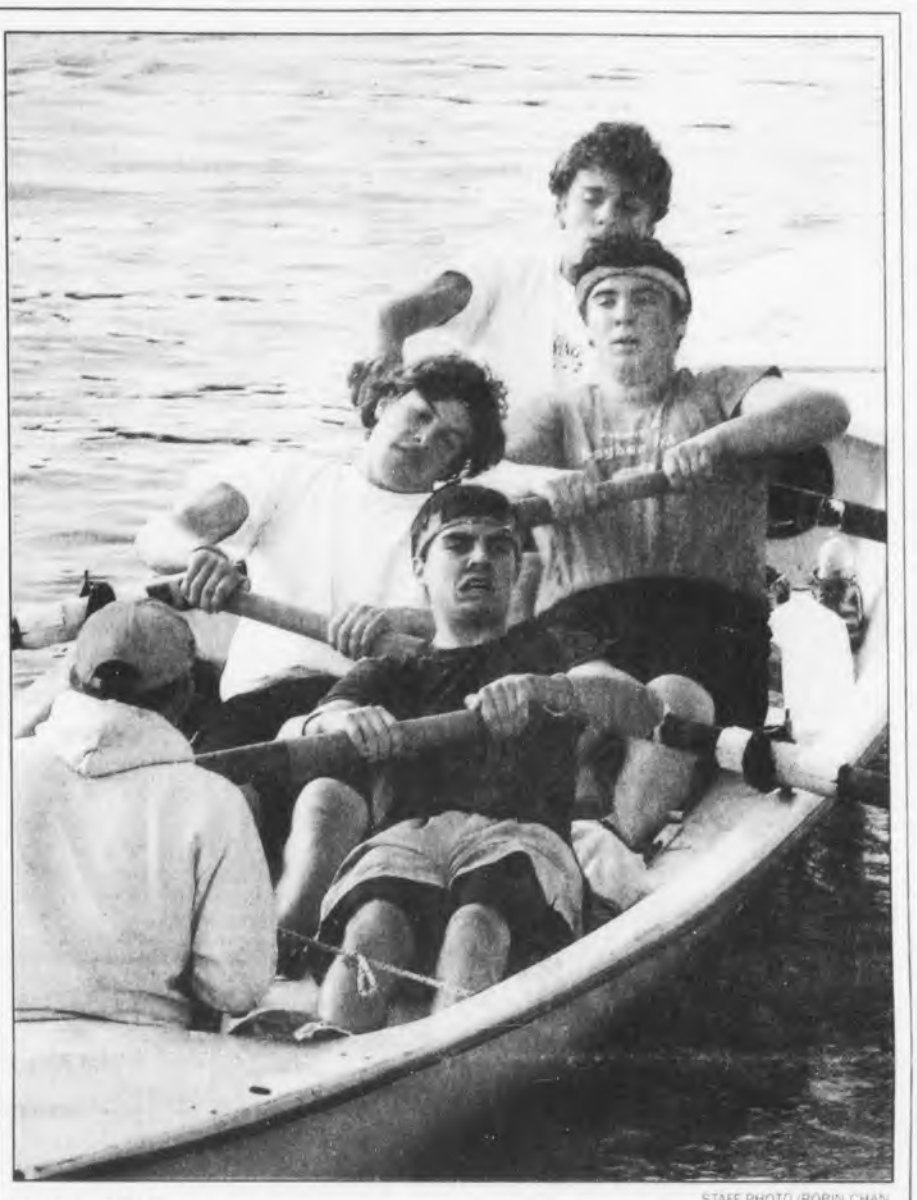
The school committee will vote on the issue at its Nov. 17 meeting.

At the Nov. 3 school committee meeting, chairman Jamie Williams said "after working with the advisory committee, we have decided the schools will keep $80,823 for two new special education cases which have surfaced since September, and the $109,829 will be returned to the reserve fund and earmarked for out of district special education costs." There are two, new additional special education cases pending.

The school department made a series of cuts during fiscal 2005 and some positions were not filled for a number of months, which left some budgeted money unspent. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said the school department could use the money to prepay out of district special education tuitions for fiscal 2006.

While the schools would need to ask advisory committee to transfer the money, it would not be spent for anything else, Williams said.

"As a school committee, one of our strengths is not making decisions in isolation," she said.



"The only reason the money is there is because of significant cuts in the budget. We did the job well and once again we get our hand slapped."

— Adrienne MacCarthy, school committee

Williams agreed to take the matter to a vote after other school committee members said the advisory committee should not hold on to the funds. Member Rick Flynn was not present at the meeting, nor was Supt. Denise Walsh, and Williams therefore agreed to postpone the vote to its next meeting, scheduled for Nov. 17.

School committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said she was very concerned about the Teachers upset over no contract

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

At 2:45 p.m. Wednesday, Cohasset Middle High School teachers exited the building en masse. Wearing newly red buttons with a white "SOS" (short for save our school) and holding picket signs, teachers gathered by the flag pole at the front of the school to let the public know they are still working without a contract.

This week marks a new phase of job actions for the Cohasset Teachers' Association which has become increasingly distraught about the status of its contract. For the past year, the CTA says it has been working in good faith to negotiate a new contract with the school department. The teachers' contract expired Aug. 31 and negotiations continue. A professional mediator has been brought in to try to help bring both sides to an agreement. The new job actions are taking place due to an unsuccessful negotiation session held last week.

The new actions are taking place at all three schools and Ed Leonard, a member of the guidance department at the middle-high school who is part of the negotiations team, said each school has chosen a different day

Earns top award in girl scouting

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Katie James excels on the field. As one of four captains of the Cohasset High School field hockey team, this center forward helped lead her teammates to the state tournament this fall.

As a senior, this will be Katie's last season playing for CHS, but she's already looking out for the future of the school's field hockey program. This June, she held a field hockey clinic for middle school students, which not only allowed her to pass her skills on to upcoming players, but earned her a Girl Scout Gold Award — the highest honor a Girl Scout can achieve.

In late September, Katie was told her project had been accepted and she would receive her Gold Award. The ceremony should take place before the end of the year.

Katie has been a Girl Scout since she was very young, starting out as a Daisy Scout and continuing on through grade seven — which is when her interest in field hockey was sparked. With many girls opt-

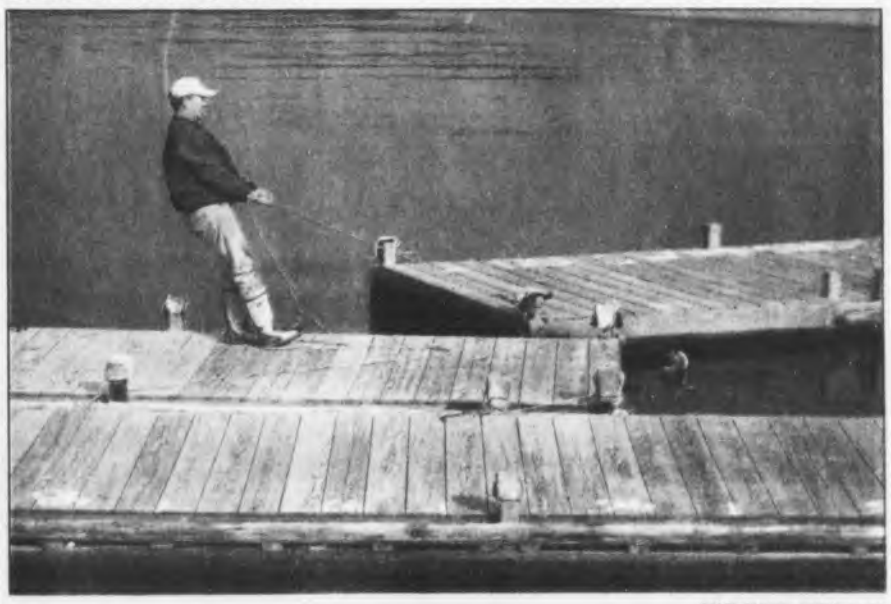
Assessors put price on 'reval'

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM



The board of assessors is trying to keep up with deadlines set by the state. The Department of Revenue requires towns go through a triennial revaluation program every three years, and in order to make that happen in a timely fashion, more staff is needed.

To that end, an article has been placed on the Town Meeting Warrant which would ask the town to appropriate $15,000 which could be put toward hiring some part-time help to aid in the revaluation process, as well as making sure all equipment, including cameras and software, is current.

Deputy Assessor Mary Quill explained every year the town takes an inventory of the properties in town and makes sure all information pertaining to the

State receives LIP application

The Department of Housing and Community Development has received the Local Initiative Program "Units Only" application filed by the town on behalf of the Cedarmere project. According to a letter sent by LIP staff member Erin Bettez, a letter of approval will be forthcoming. A previous application filed for the project was incomplete, but the new application answers all questions for the state.

Approval of the LIP application means the affordable units at Cedarmere — which consists of 27 affordable ownership condominiums located in the Westerly House — will "count" toward the town's affordable housing stock. The town is currently trying to meet a state-mandated 10 percent affordability threshold.

Balanced budget on the horizon, Griffin says

Town must recoup from failed override

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Manager Bill Griffin painted a very clear financial picture for the board of selectmen Tuesday. With the upcoming fall Special Town Meeting Dec. 5, he said it is important for the board and the town to understand the financial actions being recommended on the Warrant.

The operating budget is off by $435,633, due to a failed override and some other costs which have come up throughout the course of the year. Those funds will need to be made up in various ways and Griffin has a plan in place which will have the town voting on a balanced budget.

Article one will amend the fiscal 2006 operating budget which was approved at the spring Annual Town Meeting. It included a $400,000 override, of which $360,000 was slated to go to the schools and $40,000 was slated to go to the town to pay for school building maintenance. Although the override passed at Town Meeting, it did not pass at a subsequent ballot box vote.

Griffin said when the override failed, the town and school department agreed to split the cost. The town's remainder of the share of the cost will be $35,000, as it was able to use some state aid funds to help make up the difference, and the schools will pay $285,000.

In addition, the town needs to come up with $30,000 to cover an unemployment compensation increase, which will also be dealt with in article one.

Since the budget was voted, negotiations with the police union have been completed and $20,715 in retroactive costs for fiscal 2005 must be dealt with. In addition, the police contract for fiscal 2006 needs to be increased by $64,918. The town has negotiated a new three-year contract with the police union for fiscal years 2006, 2007, and 2008 which will all see 3 percent increases. The police union took a zero percent increase for fiscal 2005, which means over the course of the four fiscal years being dealt with, the average increase of the police officers' contract will be 2.25 percent. Police costs will be dealt with in article three.

The operating budget is off by $435,633, due to a failed override and some other costs which have come up throughout the course of the year.

All tolled, the town's and school's shares of the override, unemployment compensation costs, and the police contract negotiations equal $435,633 for which the costs must somehow be made up. To accomplish that, a number of budget reductions will take place.

Town manager clerical salaries have been decreased by $23,000. In addition, the Treasurer/Collector professional salaries have been cut by $5,000.

Because the override failed and $40,000 of maintenance was included in the $400,000 total, Griffin said the town would still like to uphold its duty to maintain the school buildings. "We're going to honor $30,000 of it," said Griffin, meaning $10,000 that would have been included in that expense will be freed up.

In addition, there is roughly $60,000 to be found, first through property and liability insurance, for which the policy came in $20,000 less than expected, as well as $20,000 from worker's compensation, and $20,000 from pension assessments.

The school department is responsible for making reductions on its end to make up its $285,000 share of the failed override costs. The school committee will provide an update for the town on how that money has been found in its budget prior to town meeting.

In addition to making cuts, Griffin said the town will use $20,715 in free cash to pay for the police retroactive costs. The town will also use $31,918 from new growth. That money, together with the money from cuts, and the school department's share will make up the $435,633

Special Town Meeting article review sessions

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The majority of the articles to be included on the fall Special Town Meeting Warrant were discussed this week by the board of selectmen, but there will be one more discussion session next week. Tuesday, Nov. 15, the board will take up articles 11, 12 and 13 which are all zoning bylaw changes, as well as article 18 which deals with purchasing the Cook Estate.

- Article 11 would give the planning board the ability to review the multi-use projects in the downtown business district with an eye toward flexibility and creative design in assessing required setbacks from abutting structures and lots.
- Article 12 would allow dwellings for more than one family to be constructed in the downtown business district in conjunction with other business uses in the same building.
- Article 13 would allow the planning board to review projects in the downtown business district with respect to parking requirements while taking into account parking available in the municipal parking lot immediately adjacent to the village center.
- Article 18 would amend the scope of the authorization voted and the amount of funds appropriated for the Cook project pursuant to article 4 of the Nov. 17, 2003 Special Town Meeting. The change would allow the town to purchase the Cook property from the heirs of the Estate.

Assessors need money to carry out revaluation process

value of the property is up-to-date. Someone from the assessor's office makes a visit to the property and takes photos, records data, and then enters all the information into a database. From there, the town knows how much the property is assessed for, and in turn can assign taxes to be paid.

"It will raise more money than the $15,000 it'll cost."

— Deputy Assessor Mary Quill

Quill said because it is impossible to cover all property in one year, there is a cyclical three-year process in place. This year, commercial properties are in the hot seat, but the Department of Revenue will also essentially be conducting an audit of the information collected by the assessor's office throughout the previous two years, or the last cycle. Because property values establish how much taxes are paid, Quill said she thinks with the close inspections of commercial properties, "it will raise more money than the $15,000 it'll cost" to have the additional staff and updated equipment to make it possible."

Quill said while usually the assessor's office is able to keep up with improvements to properties through building permits, which trigger a visit from the assessors and therefore updates that property's information prior to the cyclical inspection, sometimes upgrades are made to a property without them. By going door-to-door during their cyclical inspections, an adequate estimate of property values can be found, regardless of whether permits have come into play or not.

The board of selectmen unanimously recommended the article.

Linda Litchfield new Treasurer/Collector

At the recommendation of Director of Finance Michael Buckley, Linda Litchfield has been appointed to serve as the town's new Treasurer/Collector. The board of selectmen has the right to reject such an appointment, and voted Tuesday to waive that right. Litchfield will fill the vacancy left by former Treasurer/Collector Joe DiVito who resigned from the position in February.

Litchfield has been serving as the Acting Treasurer/Collector since DiVito's resignation and has been working with the town for the past 18 years. In a memo sent to Town Manager Bill Griffin, Buckley stated he has negotiated a starting salary of $60,000.

"Michael and I are very pleased to do this," said Griffin to selectmen Tuesday, adding he thinks Litchfield's promotion shows that an employee, who does a good job and works hard, has the opportunity to advance when openings come up.

In light of Litchfield's new role, Kathleen Mulrain, who currently serves as the assistant to the Treasurer, will be promoted to the position of Assistant Treasurer/Collector. Mulrain has been with the town for the past year, "and has proven to be exceedingly capable during a very difficult time," Buckley stated in his letter to Griffin. In addition, Buckley stated Sandra Parnell of Tupelo Road will be hired to fill Mulrain's position. Parnell has been with the library for the past four years.

Buckley stated with the restructuring in the office, the town should save roughly $7,500 over the course of the next 12 months.

Economic development committee additions

The economic development committee has two new members — Timothy O'Brien and Peter Richardson. However, these will be the last additions to the committee as members have a timeframe to adhere to and a continually changing committee will make it tough to stay on task.

The committee was originally comprised of four members including chairman Peter Brown, Chuck Hurd, Tom Powers, and Gabriel Gomez as well as ex-officio members Mike Westcott of the planning board and Mary Granville and Elsa Miller (who serves as an alternate) of the board of assessors. The new members will help the committee bring recommendations on ways to grow the town's commercial tax base forward to the board of selectmen by the January deadline.

Meetings of the economic development committee are open, and the public is welcome to attend. For more information on its upcoming meeting schedule, please contact the town clerk's office at (781) 383-4100.

Cohasset man faces charges following police pursuit, crash

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A Cohasset man is facing a slew of charges after crashing his Dodge Caravan in the woods near the intersection of Rte. 228 and Rte. 3A in Hingham at roughly 1:15 a.m. last Friday.

Cohasset police, who pursued the vehicle to the Hingham line, are charging Joseph Trahon, 41, of 137 Fairoaks Lane, with failure to stop for a police officer, speeding, and marked lanes violations. Hingham police are seeking charges of driving to endanger and failure to keep right.

Hingham Sgt. Michael Peraino said police will subpoena the hospital records to potentially charge Trahon with operating under the influence of alcohol.

Peraino said Trahon's vehicle hit the island at East and Hull streets; then he apparently regained control for a short time and then hit the island at Rtes. 3A and 228. He said Trahon was allegedly travelling at such a high rate of speed that when he hit the curb, the vehicle flipped on its roof and slid across Rte. 3A into the woods on the west side of the highway, almost landing in the Weir River.

"We almost ended up with a car on its roof in the river," Peraino said. "Thank goodness no one was coming down Rte. 3A."

Peraino said Cohasset police had radioed they were in pursuit. They cut off pursuit where North Main Street becomes East Street at the Hingham line. Hingham cruisers were on the lookout for the vehicle and Hingham Officer John Norris saw debris on 3A, the scraping marks and looked into the woods and called everyone out.

Cohasset Police Chief James Hussey said Cohasset Officer Paul Wilson spotted the vehicle being driven erratically along Atlantic Avenue near the Sandy Beach parking lot.

Hussey said Wilson observed the car travelling on the wrong side of the road.

"He put the lights on the driver did not stop," Hussey said. Wilson also put on the siren and the car continued to travel along ending up on North Main Street heading toward the Hingham line.

When the car reached the Hingham line, Cohasset Sgt. David Cogill told Wilson to call off the pursuit.

Trahon was taken by Boston Medflight to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center. Police said Trahon's injuries were not life threatening.

Hussey said in police pursuits, the safety of the public and police officer in pursuit are always considered.

"The pursuit has to be done in a safe manner without putting the public or the officer at risk," he said. Hussey said when the pursuit reached it Hingham line, it was a good time to stop.

Police Dept. issues scam alert

Cohasset Police Dept. is warning residents of a scam going around that usually targets the elderly, however everyone should take notice. The scam typically plays out by someone calling your residence and saying that you have just won a large sum of money.

In some instances it is referred to as the International Lottery, although there is no such thing. They will then tell you that you will be receiving a check for the winning amount. They will instruct you to deposit that check into your personal account and send them a percentage to cover required 'taxes' or a processing fee, or another similar reason. It is only until days later that it is discovered the check received was a forgery but victims are already minus the funds they sent out.

Members of the board of selectmen met with Donald Staszko of Cohasset Associates to discuss the possibility of that company taking over the Cook Estate project. Selectman Rob Spofford announced at Tuesday's board meeting, that he, along with selectman Ralph Dormitzer, Town Manager Bill Griffin, and Town Counsel Rod Hoffman, were briefed on the company's proposed plans at the meeting and discussed the options.

Cohasset Associates plans to send another letter to the board this week which will provide further clarification to the situation, although selectmen would not delve into the specifics. The board said it planned to give an update to the public at its Thursday meeting, after the Mariner went to press.

School committee accepts donations

At the Thursday, Nov. 3 school committee meeting, members voted to accept roughly $6,300 in donations. A donation in the amount of $2,603 was accepted for the development of the Cohasset Swim Club, which will be a joint venture between the towns of Cohasset and Scituate. In addition, the PSO donated $2,250, which is half the school-year cost of the Connect-ED phone communication service, used to send blanket phone messages throughout the school community. The PSO has footed half the bill of the Connect-ED service since the schools began using the technology last year.

Another donation in the amount of $1,500 was accepted from Cohasset resident Dr. Paul Schubert of Sohier Street. Schubert sent a letter with his donation, indicating he realizes money is tight for the school department due to the failed override and he wanted to help by donating three unrestricted $500 donations — one for each school.

School committee chairman Jamie Williams said on behalf of the school committee, "Our appreciation is unbounded," for all who have donated to the schools, and added this show of support, "Is the community at work."

THINKING SPRING

Hello Cohasset. I can't believe how lucky we have been so far with our weather. I love the snow but hate the cold so I guess this weather has been super. Hmmm, what are the chances that it will last until next spring?

OVER THERE

First Lieutenant Christopher Pratt, a 2000 graduate of Cohasset High School, is currently deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. Having completed the ROTC program as a graduate of Bryant University, Chris received his Army Commission in May 2004. Chris is currently assigned to A Battery 3 Battalion 321st Field Artillery Regiment, Fort Bragg, N.C., and his unit will be operating from LAS Anaconda, Balad, Iraq.

Chris, you are in our hearts and prayers. Be safe!

TOP SAILOR

Harvard totaled 208 points to place in the top half of the 18-team field in the Atlantic Coast Freshman Championship at Brown in sailing. Andrew Flynn (Cohasset/Boston College HS) and his partner were eighth in the B division with 91 points. Great job Andrew, congratulations.

ATLANTICA CARES

The staff of Atlantica and the Cohasset Inn will participate in two events that will enable others to have a special holiday. They have been donating their time and materials for these two events for the last four years. On Monday, Nov. 21 Atlantica supports Pie in the Sky, the annual Thanksgiving pie sale to benefit Community Servings, a Roxbury based food shelter. The staff of Atlantica will gather together for this "bake off". The goal is to make and bake 50 pies. These pies will then be sold to support Community Servings in Roxbury. The sale of each pie that is sold will allow a family of four to sit down and share a Thanksgiving dinner — a meal that they would not have otherwise. All pie ingredients and staffing is donated by Atlantica and the Cohasset Harbor Inn.

On Tuesday, Nov. 22 Atlantica will open its doors to serve a special pre-Thanksgiving luncheon for Cohasset Elder Affairs. Approximately 75-100 senior citizens have been invited to join the festivities. Many of the guests once worked at the famous Hugo's, which is Atlantica now. All food and use of the facility are donated by Atlantica. Yummy times are happening while helping out others, fantastic work.

HOLIDAY SHOPPING

Come start your holiday shopping. The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers' Club is having their first annual Holiday Craft Fair Saturday, Nov. 12 from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. at St Anthony's Parish Center, 10 Summer St. Vendors and crafters will all be on hand to help in your holiday shopping. Please call 781-383-8308 for more information.

CLOTHING DRIVE

The Scituate/Cohasset Newcomer's Club is finishing up a Cold Weather Clothing Drive to benefit Catholic Charities. Drop off boxes are at the South Shore Community Center in Cohasset and the Scituate Town Library and it is not too late to drop items off. Coats, hats, scarves, mittens and gloves (adults & kids) would be greatly appreciated. Thanks for helping to keep someone a little warmer this winter season!

WEDDINGS & ENGAGEMENTS

Good - Reynolds

Elizabeth Flavia Good, the daughter of Betsy and Bill Good of Cohasset, recently married Patrick Garrett Reynolds, the son of Joni and Mike Reynolds of Scituate, in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. The Rev. John Mulvehill celebrated the nuptial Mass.

Maid of Honor was Julie Good of South Boston, sister of the bride. Serving as bridesmaids were Alexis Eastman of the North End in Boston, Alexis Reilly of the North End, Kristen Reynolds of Scituate, sister of the groom, and Katherine Whoriskey of Cohasset, cousin of the bride.

Mike Reynolds Jr. of Hingham, the groom's brother, served as Best Man. Ushers were Joe Beale of Cohasset, Bill Good, Jr. of South Boston, brother of the bride, and Matt Kramers of Newton, cousin of the groom.

The bride and groom are both graduates of Cohasset High School.

The bride graduated from Boston College. She is employed as a graphic designer with Payette Associates of Boston.

Her husband is employed as a journeyman electrician with Annese Electrical Corp. of Weymouth.

A reception following the ceremony was held on the Bellarmine Lawn at Cohasset Harbor.

After a wedding trip to the island of St. Barth's, the couple will reside in Hingham.

Van tour of town's natural history

Mass Audubon educator John Galluzzo will host Van with a View, a trip through the natural history of Cohasset as seen through the eyes of local historian E. Victor Bigelow, on Sunday, Dec. 4, at 9 a.m. The tour is partially sponsored by the Cohasset Cultural Council. Pre-registration required. Cost $8 members $10 non-members. Appropriate dress advised. Binoculars recommended. Call 781-837-9400 or visit southshore@massaudubon.org.

Cohasset is passionate about its local history and believes in its importance. This is evidenced by the strength and activity of the Cohasset Historical Society and the community's continuing support of books written about the town, its special people, and places. The first of three comprehensive Cohasset histories was written in 1898 by E. Victor Bigelow, the standard work on which the others are based. The Rev. Bigelow traced the history of the community back to its roots – and its 'rocky' foundation – literally and figuratively.

Event supports Cohasset Maritime Institute

Elizabeth McQuade is all bundled up in a winter sports outfit from the Sports Closet during the Cohasset Maritime Institute's fashion show. Many different outfits were on display during the show Tuesday, which was held at the Square Café in Hingham. The event was held to raise funds to benefit the Maritime Institute, which offers middle and high school rowing programs and an extensive adult program.

Amber Nolan, left, shakes hands with her adoring fan Mal McCunney, while walking down the runway during the Cohasset Maritime Institute's fashion show at the Square Café in Hingham on Tuesday. The event was held to raise funds which will enable the Maritime Institute to purchase two sliding seat fours, and keep rowing alive on Cohasset's waters. Clothing for the event was provided by the Sports Closet.

Fashion models for the Cohasset Maritime Institute fashion show include Amber Nolan, Lauren and Jake Koncious, Elizabeth McQuade, Robin Hooper, Cassie Rosano, and Michelle Lemaire. Everyone donated their time to help reach the Maritime Institute's goal of raising $30,000 to purchase two new sliding seat fours. Clothing for the event was provided by the Sports Closet.

Field hockey and scouting are a team

ing to take on other after-school activities rather than participate in Girl Scouts, Katie decided the program was no longer for her. She wanted to be in activities that her friends were also participating in.

However, when Katie was a sophomore in high school, her older sister Kristen earned her Gold Award. Watching her sister accomplish such a wonderful achievement, Katie decided that was a goal she wanted to set for herself, so she got back into scouting. Today, she is the only Girl Scout in the senior class — just as her sister was when she earned her Gold Award — and the only girl in Cohasset to receive the prestigious Gold Award this year.

To earn a Gold Award, a Girl Scout must first complete four interest project awards on topics related to her proposed Gold Award project. She must then earn a career exploration pin, a Senior Girl Scout leadership award, a Senior Girl Scout challenge pin, and then finally plan and implement her Gold Award project, which must be approved by a Girl Scout council member.

Due to budget constraints, the middle school field hockey program — which helps younger players hone their skills before making it to the varsity level — no longer exists. Recognizing how important it is to spark the interest in younger girls so they can practice for a few years before they make it to the high school level, Katie decided she would host a field hockey clinic over the summer.

"It was for anyone who was interested in grades six through eight, whether it was their first time or someone looking to improve their skills," Katie said. "If you don't start off early, the town won't have a good varsity team."

Katie held her clinic over two days in June. Roughly 11 girls participated, and Katie had plenty of help from fellow field hockey players who stepped up to lend their expertise. There were seven girls assisting in the clinic including Laura Campedelli, Molly Gallagher, Erin Liddell, Vanessa Plante, Virginia Spofford — who is also a Girl Scout and earned her silver award last year — Alida Tangherlini, and Ellen Tarpey.

During the clinic, the girls practiced passing, they completed drills, and they went over different plays. While the clinic itself was a total of six hours, Gold Award projects require at least 50 hours of total preparation. With all the leg work before the girls ever took to the field, Katie said all tolled, she put roughly 65 hours into her project.

Katie said in preparation for her project she contacted the Cohasset High School Athletic Department as well as the Cohasset Recreation Department for clearance. She said she also compiled a packet of information for the girls, which included the rules of the game as well as its history. "That packet is still being used for the developmental team," she said.

"It was for anyone who was interested in grades six through eight, whether it was their first time or someone looking to improve their skills."
Katie James, Girl Scout

Katie explained there were roughly 50 girls who tried out for the high school field hockey team this fall and those who were not placed on the varsity team have become part of the new developmental team for players in grades six through nine. Those players are able to develop their skills while playing other freshmen teams around the South Shore.

Katie said by coordinating the field hockey clinic and achieving the Gold Award, she has really learned a lot. She said the organization required to bring the clinic to fruition has carried over into her everyday life. "You can't slack off with this or you won't be able to do it," she said. In addition, she said completing the project has given her confidence, as the inhibitions she once felt about contacting people she did not know and making the phone calls to strangers to coordinate, no longer exist.

Katie also plays both basketball and softball. She also works at CVS in Cohasset and as a lifeguard at the Cohasset Swim Center in the summer.

Sixth grade teacher Nancy Magnussen and seventh/eighth grade teacher Cynthia Gordon lead the middle school members of the Cohasset Teachers' Association in its "Work-to-rule" demonstration. Once per week, members of the CTA at all three school buildings are holding a "walk-out" and exiting together as a sign of their solidarity, to let the public know Cohasset teachers are still working without a contract.

Cohasset teachers let their feet do the talking to exit together. "It will be one afternoon a week to start, and hopefully that will be enough," he said.

In addition to the collective exiting, teachers plan to further reduce their availability for parent conferences from two days to one day per week at the elementary schools. Middle and high school teachers will be available for office hours only two days per week. Teachers have also put a deadline on college recommendations and said either students or parents must request them by Dec. 1. After then, teachers will not accept requests to write college recommendations. Teachers had already cut back on volunteering their time outside the classroom prior to this recent action.

The CTA announced its new job actions during the Thursday, Nov. 3 school committee meeting. Fran Cronin, who has been teaching English in Cohasset since 1970, spoke on behalf of the CTA, whose members were disappointed to hear that while they have been negotiating in good faith for the past year, and have continuously been told there is no money left over for cost of living increases, there is enough money left over from fiscal 2005 to cover some expenses to be incurred in fiscal 2006.

Cronin read a letter which she said "sums up the way the teachers of Cohasset feel about the lack of respect that we have been accorded during this last year of negotiations. Such a situation does not encourage innovation, growth, or longevity in a school system."

She said in light of the CTA's contract expiring Aug. 31, "Our teachers have been working without a contract since the start of this school year. During meeting after meeting, our bargaining team has been told that there is no money for teacher raises." However, Cronin said if there is no money, "Why did the school department have a surplus of $190,000? Remember also, there was an additional $136,000 that the school district gave back to the town last summer."

"It will be one afternoon a week to start, and hopefully that will be enough."
— Ed Leonard, CTA negotiations team

"Last Friday's Mariner had an interesting article regarding the school department's surplus of money. After reading this article, it appears that we have been deceived! In fact, there is money! If teachers were respected for the job which they do for the children of Cohasset, at least some of that money could have gone to cost of living increases," she said.

"Cohasset teachers' pay is falling significantly behind our surrounding towns. In towns like Lexington, Wellesley, Weston, Duxbury, Norwell, and Hingham, where Cohasset compares statistically, their teachers are paid substantially more. Our teachers start their careers as the lowest paid, and they end their careers as the lowest paid. Our teachers' lifetime earnings are severely affected by this fact. How can Cohasset attract and retain quality teachers if this trend continues? It can't and it won't!"

School committee chairman Jamie Williams explained the money which has been left over from fiscal 2005 is only there due to drastic cuts which were made in anticipation there would be a shortfall. She said when money is left over at the end of one fiscal year, there are only two options for school departments, and that is to either order supplies and have them arrive at the school prior to the beginning of the new fiscal year — which was not an option as the school department found the money after the start of fiscal 2006 — or to pre-pay special education out of district tuitions as the state allows. She said therefore, the money could not have been used to help pay for any salary increases.

Williams said the costs for special education will likely go up this year, and the money which has been set aside is going to help cover those costs. "I do not consider that $190,000 a surplus," she said.

Williams also said the school district is very fortunate to have a very qualified and dedicated staff and said the school committee is negotiating in good faith. "We too are disappointed with the way things are progressing," she said, but will continue to work together toward a resolution.

possibility of keeping the $109,000 in the town's reserve fund. She said the school department could have its own account set up specifically to handle the money and not spend it for anything else.

"I don't see the need" for the money to be held in the town's reserve account, she said.

MacCarthy said the school committee is elected to do what is best for the school system. She suggested the committee ask Supt. Walsh to draft the committee a policy that would allow the budgeting policy to be changed to include "cost centers."

MacCarthy said the superintendent would be allowed to move money within cost centers without having to go to the school committee for permission. She said once cost centers are established, the money for each would be allocated and only spent for that cost center. She said she would speak to Walsh to see how soon a policy could be drafted.

MacCarthy said without the prudent fiscal actions taken by the superintendent, there would be no money left over.

"The only reason the money is there is because of significant cuts in the budget. We did the job well and once again we get our hand slapped," said MacCarthy. "I understand the advisory committee's position, and the selectmen's position, but there was a way to handle things and it was handled to the letter of the law."

School committee member Alfred Slanetz asked school business manager Dave DeGennaro whether he thought the two pending special education cases will "eat up" the $109,000 which will be put into the reserve fund.

"They could," said DeGennaro, adding there is no way to tell how much each special education case will cost until an individual education plan, commonly referred to as an IEP, is put in place for each student.

Slanetz also asked whether there is usually an influx of new students, including special education students, at any particular time of the year.

DeGennaro said the beginning of the year there is usually more activity with people moving to town, and sometimes the same is true around the holidays in December. In other cases, "Some students may need extra help as the year goes on." DeGennaro went on to say that because things are continually changing, putting this money aside may or may not be enough to keep the school department out of the red going forward.

"You don't know. You never know. The SPED budget is so fluid," he said. However, he added it is always a plus to be able to have money there as a reserve.

DeGennaro said he is still working with town Director of Finance Michael Buckley to close out fiscal 2005.

Curriculum committee looks at the subject matter

Sees town as future top district

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset has set its sights on being the top school district in Massachusetts and one of the best school systems in the country. That is the message from the Cohasset Curriculum Renewal Committee, a sub-committee of the school department's Strategic Planning Committee.

"You might think that's pretty lofty, but we think it's possible. We just need to educate people," said Laura Stone, the committee's facilitator, during a school committee presentation last week.

Since February, the committee has been conducting interviews and gathering research, to determine the strengths and weaknesses at the town's schools.

The committee was charged with establishing a process for curriculum renewal from kindergarten through grade 12, in order to ensure curriculum is current at all levels. Since February, the committee has been conducting interviews and gathering research, to determine the strengths and weaknesses at the town's schools. The work was done under the umbrella of the Strategic Plan, which has set goals for the school department for the next five years.

The committee is comprised of 13 members, including parents Dorian Brady, Kim Canney, Laura DeSisto, Katie Dunn, Susan Mavilia, and Laura Stone; parent and school committee member Alfred Slanetz; teachers Jennifer Thorell, Cynthia Hurley, and Jeanne Hanson; former curriculum coordinator Ruth Fennessey; former selectman, school committee member and PTO member Martha Gjesteby; and community participant and Cohasset High School alumnus David Farrag.

The committee found areas in need of improvement in grades kindergarten through 12 including:

• Consistency among teachers, grades, and between schools — Stone said opening the lines of communication between teachers is key in terms of teaching consistency. "They are within walking distance, but you'd think they were thousands of miles away," she said. If teachers from various grade levels are in constant communication, students' needs can be more readily addressed. For example, if students are coming up from grade five into grade six, the grade five teachers can let the new teachers know where the areas of concern are and help that next year be even more productive.

• Science, engineering, and technology — Adding engineering to the district curriculum is a must as MCAS tests now include engineering questions, but students in Cohasset have literally no exposure to it. A technology sub-committee has been established under the Strategic Plan as well which will deal with those concerns.

• Professional development — Increasing the amount of money allocated for professional development would also help teachers attend the best programs the area has to offer, and therefore bring back the best to Cohasset students, Stone said.

•Class size and staffing — In addition, increasing the staff at the schools will help more members of the school team share the load. Stone said there are currently more children per class than is ideal, and large class size poses a problem for both teachers and students. "Teachers are having a real challenging time and individual attention is being reduced" as inclusion classrooms without special education aides require teachers to devote more time to those students who need extra help.

• Reading specialists and middle school reading program — The school district is in need of more reading specialists and it has been suggested classroom teachers become certified to specialize in reading. However, Stone said that goes back to the professional development issue. The middle school is especially in need of reading specialists.

• Math — MCAS scores at the high school level are also an issue. "Math is strong at Osgood and Deer Hill, but is very much an issue at the high school," said Stone.

Osgood School

Going school by school, Canney presented the findings for the K-2 Osgood School. One of the strengths at Osgood is the Everyday Math program. "We had positive comments from many teachers," said Canney, about the success of the program. However, she said some parents expressed concern, as they feel there should be more accelerated options for advanced students.

The Project Read program — which is new to Osgood this year — is also a strength at the school and is anticipated to make a difference in the reading skills of Osgood students. "We hope the same model can be brought into other areas like math and science," she said.

But Canney said the school's biggest strength is its excellent teaching staff. "We have teachers who have always gone the extra mile," she said.

Where Osgood needs to improve are the areas of scope and sequence throughout the curriculum, which means taking a look at the guidelines from the state which dictate the subject areas which need to be taught and the timeline, or sequence for those guidelines to be met. For example, measurement might be a subject that must be taught in grade two, but only after students have been taught basic number sense and operations. In addition to scope and sequence, Osgood needs to establish benchmarks, and work to decrease class size. "We've been listening for three years about decreasing class size. We know you know how important that is. Smaller classes mean more (individual) attention," Canney said.

Slanetz said in his view, the ideal class size for the Osgood and Deer Hill schools would be 13 children per class. "That may not be a long term goal," he said.

However, given budgetary constraints, school committee chairman Jamie Williams said it makes more sense to try to add one teacher to the current roster, perhaps in the second grade, which only has five teachers while kindergarten and first grade both have six.

Deer Hill

Canney said Deer Hill is fortunate to have very committed, professional teachers and staff. In terms of educational programs, the Everyday Math program is also very successful. Deer Hill students are also excelling in reading and spelling.

Areas for improvement at Deer Hill include the need for more reading and math specialists, such as Title One teachers, who can help those students who require additional assistance. In addition, Canney said the science program must be enhanced. Fortunately, Canney said Principal Keith Gauley has been pushing to make that happen. "Keith Gauley is very interested in science and added the science fair," for the fifth-grade students. The event takes place annually in the spring.

Deer Hill is also in need of updating its social science textbooks. The world, and in turn maps of countries and land areas, are constantly changing and students are not working with up-to-date materials, she said. Deer Hill is also in need of establishing specific gifted and talented programs.

Middle School

DeSisto praised the dedicated teachers at the middle school. Based on teacher and administration interviews, the middle school is working with an excellent math curriculum, she said. However, more time may need to be allocated for math instruction in the classroom to boost MCAS scores. DeSisto said there seems to be good progression in subject areas due to department head supervision as well as the curriculum coordinator.

DeSisto said everyone interviewed regarding the middle school was given an open ended "what's not working" question, and the reading program was an overwhelming, unprompted concern. In addition, the middle school needs a reading specialist dedicated exclusively to its students.

Teachers also reported the inclusion model is not working for all special education students. Children who require special assistance are in the classroom but the funding for special education aides has been cut and those positions have been eliminated. Therefore, instead of having the one-on-one assistance of an aide while the teacher oversees the entire classroom, teachers must spend a good portion of their time helping the special education students who can be two to three years behind their peers. "If we're going to have this inclusion model, we need to make it work. It's affecting the regular kids a lot, if not more, than the SPED kids," said DeSisto.

Middle school students also need more class time in technology, as there is only one technology teacher for both the middle and high school. There is also a need to add engineering and science curriculum, which will be required under new state curriculum guidelines and be included in MCAS testing. Technology and engineering classes used to be offered at the middle school, but have since been dropped.

High School

Farrag said the teachers are a strong point for the high school. He said many have studied extensively and are qualified to teach other subjects.

The arts program is also a strength at the high school as it has been growing rapidly. However, Farrag said there are some problems associated with that high rate of growth. "There are large class sizes in the arts because they are so popular," he said. If other art classes are to be added, he said he would suggest art history or design, as they are very important to today's job market.

A program of studies, which is similar to a college syllabus, is also seen as a strength for the high school.

Communication between the high school and other schools is key. Farrag said even if teachers from the high school are able to collaborate over lunch with each other or with middle school teachers it will help moving forward. "Communication doesn't cost anything, but it is essential," he said.

The high school must find ways to increase, improve, and integrate technology. In addition, there are a lack of electives and advanced placement courses.

Farrag said the school is in need of hands-on learning experiences and community involvement. "The classroom experience needs to be opened up. Partnerships need to be enhanced or started," he said. With the rich cultural experiences Boston has to offer, he said partnering with local museums, whether it be the Museum of Fine Arts, other museums, or cultural entities — there are many ways to bring real-world experience into the classroom.

The school also needs to take a step forward in terms of academic competition. Farrag said students could get involved in areas such as robotics, science fairs, and math leagues.

Honor our veterans

While Veterans Day provides us with the opportunity to honor those men and women who served in our Armed Forces, we shouldn't limit our appreciation to only one day a year.

We should especially cherish our World War II veterans, whose ranks are growing thinner.

Many of us recall the poem "The Last Leaf" by Oliver Wendell Holmes, about what it is like to be the last leaf on the tree, the last of a generation.

This is the greatest generation, a generation that faced hostilities on a battlefield that stretched over the globe, in a war that threatened the survival of democracy. Many paid the supreme sacrifice to win the right for us to remain free. The memories of this horrendous conflict remain vivid to our veterans, even after six decades have passed.

We cannot let the hardships our veterans endured and the lessons of bravery and dedication they taught the world fade into just words on the pages of a history book.

Let us honor our World War II veterans while we can, before the last leaf falls from the tree and drifts away into the heavens.

Also in our hearts and minds are the Korean and Vietnam veterans, and those who fought in the first Gulf War.

Our country also has a new crop of veterans who have served in the Afghanistan and Iraq wars. Despite any personal opinions you may have about the conflict in the Middle East – we should still honor those veterans and support our troops currently serving over there.

To that end, the Mariner would like to publish the names of Cohasset men and women currently in uniform. We think a weekly reminder of those in the service would help remind us that America's sons and daughters continue to answer their country's call.

This week we learned that US Army 1st Lt. Christopher Pratt of King Street, a member of the CHS Class of 2000 and recent Bryant University graduate, is being deployed to Iraq.

We can speak from personal experience having a loved one serving in Iraq can be a trying time for the soldier's family. The support of friends and neighbors, and the community-at-large, is invaluable.

Please contact the Mariner at mford@cnc.com or Tom Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, at 781-383-1055 ext. 1003 if you know of anyone from Cohasset currently in the armed forces.

Voter registration for Special Town Meeting

Friday, Nov. 25, will be the last day to register to vote for the upcoming Dec. 5, Special Town Meeting. Registration sessions will be held at the Town Clerk's office on Nov. 25, from 9 a.m. and until 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "Closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

Childhood bullying program praised

TO THE EDITOR:

Last Friday, the Social Service League sponsored a terrific program on Childhood Bullying at the Paul Pratt Library. This timely program helped parents understand the roles of the bully, the target, and the bystander when bullying occurs.

Parents learned that 86 percent of high school students rate bullying as a greater stress than substance abuse and peer pressure. Responses to a 2005 survey of all Cohasset Middle School students showed that the majority of our children experience bullying in our schools, and in the community, pointing to a need to learn how to manage this stress.

The positive news from Friday's session is that much can be done to empower children to take a stand against bullying and to foster a healthy school environment. Attendees were taught specific responses and effective actions to take for various bullying situations.

We encourage parents to continue learning how to assist teens through the various challenges of adolescence by attending next week's Project Safeguard Parenting Workshop presented by Jan Tedeschi, M.S., C.P.T.,C.S.A.C. Parents who have attended previous workshops with Jan have found them to provide practical, useful information that addresses real life situations and noticeably changes the communication dynamic in their home. Plan to attend Tues Nov 15 and 29 from 7-9 p.m. in the Cohasset Middle High School Library. Contact toomey6@comcast.net to reserve a seat, fee $20.

Thank you to the Social Service League for their great programs this fall and for their continued commitment to support the needs of Cohasset families.

HEALTH NOTES

How to stay healthy this flu season

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The town-wide flu clinic is on Saturday, Nov. 12 from 10 a.m.-noon in the Town Hall Auditorium.

However, vaccination is not the only way to help prevent the flu. Here are steps you and your family can take to stay healthy this winter.

• Wash your hands — Perhaps the simplest and most effective way is to wash your hands often — with soap and warm water. Rub your hands vigorously together and scrub all surfaces. Wash for at least 20 seconds. (Tip: have your children sing the "Happy Birthday" song twice while washing.) It is the soap combined with the scrubbing action that helps dislodge and remove germs. Use regular soap. Antibacterial soap is not necessary. These soaps may contribute to the growing problem of antibiotic resistance.

When soap and water are not available, use alcohol-based disposable hand wipes or gel sanitizers. You can find them in most supermarkets and drugstores. If using a gel, rub the gel in your hands until they are dry. The gel doesn't need water to work; the alcohol in the gel kills germs that cause colds and the flu. However, alcohol-based disposable hand wipes or gel sanitizers do not remove dirt.

• Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth — Germs are often spread when people touch something that is contaminated with germs and then touch their eyes, nose or mouth. Germs can live for a long time (some can live for two hours or more) on surfaces like doorknobs, desks and tables.

• Cover your mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing — Viruses that infect the nose, throat and lungs cause illnesses like the flu (influenza). The flu usually spreads from person to person when an infected person coughs or sneezes and the droplets from the cough or sneeze move through the air and are deposited on the mouth or nose of people nearby. So, always cough or sneeze into a tissue and then throw it away. Cover your cough or sneeze if you do not have a tissue. Then, wash your hands, and do so every time you cough or sneeze.

• Stay home — If you feel ill, stay home from work and keep sick kids home from school or daycare. And keep in mind; most people with flu will recover just fine.

For more information, please call the Cohasset Board of Health at 781 383-4116 or the Massachusetts Department of Public Health Division of Epidemiology and Immunization at 617-983-6800, or visit www.mass.gov/handwashing.

Tobacco vendors are in compliance

South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative conducted a compliance check at 11 establishments that sell tobacco products in the town, on Tuesday, Nov. 3. The following vendors were found to be in compliance:

Cohasset Food Mart, Mobil Mart, Stop and Shop, Curtis Liquors, Leo's Exxon, Shaw's Supermarket, Walgreen's, CVS, Cohasset Plaza Liquors, Tedeschi, and Cohasset News.

The Cohasset Board of Health thanks these vendors and recognizes their efforts to protect our youth from tobacco use.

Parking regulations

Winter parking regulations will be in effect from Nov. 15, through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking allowed during winter parking regulations.

Violators subject to a fine of $25.

Greenbush using special 'L' wall sections

Greenbush is using "L" walls that are pre-made in a factory to very high quality standards.

Steel rail is manufactured in standard 80 foot long sections and is delivered to the Greenbush in this form.

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

There are a few technical details we have mentioned in passing in our discussions about the Greenbush project. At the risk of having your eyes glaze over, we'd like to discuss two of these in a bit more detail than we have previously.

The first is the system used to construct retaining walls on this project. As you may be aware, when the land on either side of the rail bed is substantially lower than the tracks, walls must be constructed to keep the earth supporting the rail bed in place. These are called retaining walls and generally run parallel to the tracks for whatever distance is required to perform their function. Retaining walls also provide containment to keep adjacent wetland areas separated from the rail bed.

The traditional way a retaining wall is constructed is to dig down and cast a concrete footer on which the retaining wall will be constructed. After the concrete footer is adequately cured, forms are set for the retaining wall and they are filled with concrete. Again, after waiting several days for the concrete walls to cure, the forms can be removed and the wall can be backfilled.

On the Greenbush, a much quicker, higher quality wall is being constructed. The main component is a precast wall section called an "L" wall (see photo of "L" walls stored prior to placement). The "L" walls are pre-made in a factory to very high quality standards. Their height can be altered in the factory for the specific application. They are brought to the site in standard sections. At the job site an excavation is made, a gravel base is put into the bottom of the trench and carefully leveled. The wall sections are then laid side by side on top of the gravel to what ever length the wall must be to perform its function. Then the area is backfilled. Each section of the "L" walls key together for strength with tongue and groove (similar to hardwood flooring) and stainless steel pins. This wall construction is much quicker that the traditional way retaining walls have been built. It also produces a higher quality wall.

Another interesting technical design used is continuously welded rail. Old fashioned rail systems used individual sections of steel rail fastened together mechanically. All of these mechanical joints gave rise to the constant clickty-clack associated with trains. The Greenbush will use continuously welded rail with no mechanical joints. Thus, no clickty-clack. This will make the Greenbush a lot quieter to those living nearby than it otherwise would be.

How is this accomplished? Steel rail is manufactured in standard 80 foot long sections. It is delivered to the Greenbush in this form. Then a very special purpose welder is used to connect these 80 foot sections into very long strings. Recently, the MBTA had their rail welding subcontractor at Smith Place in downtown Cohasset, just off of Ripley Road. There they welded the "shorter" sections into various lengths needed to construct the rail crossings at Pleasant St., Sohier St. and Lower King St. (see photo of rail welding operation at Smith Place). The longest of these is 320 feet long and will be used at Sohier St. After the rails were welded together they were dragged down the right of way where they will be stored until needed.

We'd also like to continue our discussion regarding safety. We ask parents to review with their children that the Greenbush construction site is quite dangerous. From time to time we have see children walking or even riding motorized bikes on the right of way. This continues to be a hazardous practice and, if continued, will create inevitable injury to someone precious to us. Of course the same safety concerns apply to adults.

Real teachers work to rule

COMMENTARY

LAURA KEATING

Some townspeople think that real teachers should not work to rule during the Cohasset Teachers Association's difficult contract negotiations.

I am a real teacher. I have never wanted to be anything but a teacher. It is in my blood. It is in the way I think. It is in the way each day I look forward to seeing my students arrive in the classroom. I can't wait. The anticipation builds up when I know the bell is about to ring and I am certain that each child will be excited about what I am going to teach him or her that day. When I leave school each day, it is usually with a smile, because I know no matter how much I taught my students, they taught me equally, on what it means to wonder, to care, to want to learn, and to be an active member of a learning community.

I am a real teacher, and I thank my own elementary school teachers from Plymouth River School in Hingham for that. Mrs. Garvey, my first grade teacher, taught me how to read through poetry. Mr. Farrell, my second grade teacher, used to twirl us in empty trash cans at recess. Mrs. Gibbs, my third grade teacher, so intrigued me about the country of Greece that, as a college student, I traveled there in remembrance of her.

I don't love hearing that I am not a real teacher because I won't settle for a zero percent raise this year.

I am a real teacher. I love being a teacher and I will love it until the day I retire. I love it all: meeting new students each September, meeting their parents, creating a classroom environment and teaching students to love learning. Each and every part of being a teacher, I love, except this...

I don't love hearing that I am not a real teacher because I won't settle for a zero percent raise this year. Having just one year without a raise affects teachers by thousands of dollars when they retire from working in Cohasset. Cohasset teachers need to have competitive salaries. We also need to know we can retire in a way we deserve after dedicating our careers to Cohasset students.

This school district is blessed with 125 real teachers all of whom have their own stories to tell about why they are teachers and what it means to them. Not one of us is happy to work to rule, however, not one of us can afford not to.

Teachers' work actions get failing grade

COMMENTARY

LEE JENKINS

The commentary in last week's edition, indicated the Cohasset Teachers Association members haven't really been following fiscal issues in Cohasset in the last few town meeting cycles. If they were they should be aware of the town's true precarious financial situation.

Cohasset taxpayers already pay close to the highest real estate taxes in the state. The town has a very low commercial base (the town and school budgets are mainly supported by residential taxpayers), receives a minimum in state aid, and has a very high debt with interest payments eating up 8.7 percent of the budget (2004). It's worth noting that a large chunk of debt is represented by the $52+ million in school renovations that greatly enhanced the work environment for the teachers.

The CTA's uninformed view can be illustrated by the following examples:

- The town's Reserve Fund is money set aside to be available for town-wide emergencies. When it is attacked as fair game by the Cohasset Teachers Union for a 'fair raise' it indicates a lack of understanding and concern for the welfare of the town and the taxpayers who have so generously supported them.
- During the lean years taxpayers working in fields outside academia have often had no salary increases and in many cases salary cuts. They still had to pay escalating real estate taxes so teachers could have raises at well above the cost of living. Given this, the structure of a 3-year teachers' contract is out of sync with what is happening in the real time economy. It is very disingenuous to complain about lost increases for one year with no raise which was then followed by subsequent years' raises of 2 percent, 3.5 percent and 4.04 percent raises.
- The CTA's purpose is to steadily increase the salaries of the teachers and improve their working environment. In the last years, Cohasset's taxpayers have complied. I offer the following examples:
- The number of columns and steps in the contract have been expanded so the top salary in '91 of $44,368 is now $73,323 as of '05 with the educational requirements to reach this amount reduced. This figure does not include the $1,000/yr. longevity or any other stipends e.g. department chair $11,000/yr, or extra duty salaries like drama coach $4,969/yr.
- The yearly longevity bonus has been increased from $850/yr to $1,000/yr. substantially more than most towns.
- The Longevity Buyout (the salary increase in the last year to boost lifetime retirement payments) has been increased from $8,000 to $9,000. (In the last few years state law increased teachers' retirement to 80 percent of the average of their last 3 years.)
- The stipends for department chairs, heads and team leaders have increased.
- The extra duty salary categories have been expanded and salaries increased.
- The in-class time with the students has decreased.
- Flex time has been introduced.

Cohasset taxpayers already pay close to the highest real estate taxes in the state.

On the high school level block-scheduling has markedly decreased the number of students seen by a teacher in a semester: thus a smaller teaching load.

- Class sizes have been lowered.
- Teachers are able to make an additional $15 (elementary)— $30 (high school) /per class when they act as in-house substitutes during their mandated 'free time.'
- Tuition reimbursements were increased and expanded to include 'any fees paid'.
- Support staff has increased in the school system.

What have taxpayers received in return for consistently just throwing more money at the schools without it being linked to specific end goals? Test scores have declined, parents are seeking the services of more and more paid tutors to cover deficits in classroom instruction, student behavior problems have escalated, and accountability is non-existent. Teachers show less and less initiative e.g. unable to implement new elementary math programs without specialized training, unable to maximize teacher development without administrative direction. We still have no collaboration and coordination of curriculum after expending so many education dollars in those areas.

What hasn't changed is the hostage environment our students have to contend with. The classrooms are still used as platforms to bash the parents, grandparents and neighbors and also to disseminate incorrect information regarding the teacher's financial situation. Intimidation has reached a new high this time round with the big gruesome adults picketing as the innocent Osgood students attempt to go home. I have only seen complaints of more money but not a word about creatively improving education. As a matter of fact, the CTA work actions are punishing the students.

Unfortunately the parents are still paralyzed with fears of retaliation which would affect their children for life. The majority will buckle under the pressure of harm to the children and keep blindly applauding.

The schools exist independently of the town. This should not be. The school administration, the teachers' union, the town government and the taxpayers should have one goal — providing the best education possible for our children. Unfortunately what the school side fails to understand is that 'the best possible' is inevitably tied to "what we can reasonably afford".

Sexism on the T-shirt

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Just when I thought we had the PC crowd on the run along comes Abercrombie & Fitch waving the white flag of surrender to the angry young ladies of something called the Women and Girls Foundation of Southwest Pennsylvania.

In case you haven't been following this blatant case of outrageous sexism as closely as I, the girls were up in arms about some "attitude" T-shirts the clothing company was selling which were demeaning to girls (or "pre-women") everywhere.

Actually, printed T-shirts have been around for a long time, it's just that no one ever threatened to "girlcott" them before.

In fact, they were even threatening a "girlcott," a word which I suppose comes from the same dictionary as "herstory" and hockey's "defenseperson."

I regret to report that Abercrombie & Fitch, presented with an unprecedented opportunity to deprive the young ladies of their shoes and send them barefoot back into the kitchen, capitulated with only a brief show of resistance.

"We recognize that the shirts in question, which were meant to be humorous, might be troubling to some," said the surrender document.

Don't they realize that there is no such thing as humor anymore as long as someone, somewhere finds it troubling?

The best of the "attitude" T-shirts that used to be hawked by Abercrombie & Fitch was the one that read "Who Needs Brains When I Have These?" I'll leave the definition of "these" to someone else except to say that they always come in even numbers.

"You Better Make More Than I Can Spend" is another T-shirt that's beyond the pale since it implies that the girl in question, maybe a candidate for CEO of a Fortune 500 company, is dependent on a man for her living. It's ungrammatical, too.

Actually, printed T-shirts have been around for a long time, it's just that no one ever threatened to "girlcott" them before.

Years ago, whenever a friend of the female persuasion was having a troublesome time, I used to send them a T-shirt that said, "I'm a Tough Little Broad." That was before "broad" became the "B-word." It's surprising what a month on the couch can do.

One of the funniest T-shirts I ever read said, "Nixon's the One" — worn by a very pregnant woman during the 1960 presidential campaign.

T-shirts can be humorous, like "Are We Having Fun Yet?" or political, like "Vietnam — Love It or Leave It," or cynical, like "Support Your Local Police --- Bet With A Bookie Who Pays Protection." Is there such a thing as a "copcott?"

I'd like to dip into my treasury of quotes from the actress Mae West to start a collection of my own. How about "It's better to be looked over than overlooked," or "I tried to be Snow White — but I drifted."

Or actor John Barrymore's plaintive, "You never realize how short a month is until you pay alimony."

Or George Bernard Shaw's philosophical, "Dancing is the perpendicular expression of a horizontal desire."

Your move, girls.

POLITICAL NOTES

'U.S. Options in Iraq' was new political forum topic

On Saturday, Nov. 5, the inaugural session of the Cohasset Political Forum was held at the Paul Pratt Library. More than a dozen attendees participated in a lively roundtable discussion on the topic "U.S. Options in Iraq."

The Cohasset Political Forum has been created to provide for residents of Cohasset and the South Shore a place of intellectual stimulus, challenge and exchange through discussion and debate of the international, national and local political issues of the day. Its models are the many roundtables and lectures one sees advertised at the many educational institutions in Boston and Cambridge and the lectures, debates and roundtables one sees on C-SPAN daily.

The format of the forum may differ from session to session. As with the inaugural session, the most common format will be a roundtable discussion led by a moderator, often utilizing a contemporary or historical writing as a starting point for discussion. On other occasions, lecture or debate formats may be used. Sessions will last 1-1/2 hours. The forum is intended to be highly participatory. Participants are also welcome to suggest and organize future topics for discussion.

The forum is intended to be highly participatory. Participants are also welcome to suggest and organize future topics for discussion.

The forum is instituted under the sponsorship of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

Notwithstanding that sponsorship, however, the forum as an institution is intended to be non-partisan. Of course, individual participants will expound partisan views during discussions, but the very purpose of the forum is to engender discussion and debate and that will need all kinds of views to be in the room. At the end of each session, it is not the intent of the forum to result in a single decision, to have solved a particular problem or to have even reached consensus. The goal is to simply stimulate the intellect and gain knowledge and perspective from consideration of other points of view.

The next session of the Cohasset Political Forum will be held Saturday, Dec. 10, at 9:30 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset. The topic is the "Right to Privacy — Does It Exist, Should It Exist?" a timely topic as we approve new justices for the U.S. Supreme Court. The format will be a roundtable discussion, and the suggested pre-reading materials are the Fourth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and the U.S. Supreme Court decisions in Griswold v. Connecticut and Roe v. Wade. These readings can be found on and printed from the Democratic Town Committee's Web site, cohassetdems.org. under the "Forum" section. Future sessions are being planned on the topics of healthcare policy and universal health care, U.S. energy policy, Prop. 2-1/2 and taxation, and the proposed Turkish admission in the EU/relations between the Western and Islamic worlds.

STATE HOUSE REUNION

Former, long-time state representative Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset was back at the State House recently for the 375th anniversary of the Great and General Court. She stopped in to visit with current state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham. Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and North Scituate.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: BHRC records local representatives' votes on eight roll calls and local senators' votes on four roll calls from the week of October 31-November 4.

DEATH BENEFITS FOR VOLUNTEER POLICE AND FIREFIGHTERS (H 4369)

House 155-0, Senate 38-0, approved and sent to Gov. Mitt Romney a bill requiring cities and towns to provide death benefits to the families of volunteer firefighters, police officers and emergency medical technicians (EMTs) who are killed in the line of duty. The measure also provides a retroactive $23,000 per year pension to the family of Lancaster volunteer firefighter Martin McNamara who was killed in a 2003 house fire. Supporters said that this long overdue bill would ensure that local communities take care of these heroes who sacrifice their lives in the line of duty. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

Senator Hedlund: Y — Representative Bradley: Y

INCENTIVES FOR MOVIEMAKERS IN MASSACHUSETTS (H 4455)

House 147-3, approved a bill providing a package of tax exemptions and credits to movie production companies that film in Massachusetts. The measure would also allow the companies to use state-owned land at no cost. Supporters said that Massachusetts is losing hundreds of millions of dollars in business, jobs and taxes to some 30 other states that offer these incentives. They noted that only a handful of major films have recently been shot in the Bay State because companies can film for less money in other states. Opponents said that the state should not offer tax credits to the wealthy, private entertainment industry while local aid, education and human service programs are still underfunded. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill offering tax incentives for moviemakers. A "No" vote is against the bill).

EXPAND MILITARY BENEFITS (H 4469)

House 152-0, approved a bill expanding the benefits offered to Massachusetts veterans and National Guard members. Provisions include bonuses of $500 to $1000 to veterans who served in Iraq or Afghanistan; allowing taxpayers, through a check off on their state income tax forms, to contribute to a fund to help families of active military personnel defray the costs of food, housing, utilities, medical services and other expenses; increasing from $5,000 to $100,000 the death benefits paid to families of National Guard members and increasing from $75 to $100 the daily stipend paid to active National Guardsmen. Supporters said that it is time to recognize these brave veterans and active duty soldiers who have given their time or sacrificed their lives for our nation. They argued that this long overdue legislation would help thousands of veterans and their families across the state. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

PROHIBIT AMENDMENT REDUCING INCOME TAX RATE (S 2241)

House 132-20, supported Acting Speaker Lida Harkins' ruling prohibiting consideration of an amendment reducing the state income tax rate from 5.3 percent to five percent. Voters in 2000 approved a gradual reduction of that year's 5.85 percent tax to five percent by January 2003 but the Legislature in July 2002 froze the rate at 5.3 percent. Harkins, acting as speaker in the absence of Speaker Salvatore DiMasi, ruled that the amendment is "beyond the scope" of a tax bill being debated and should not be considered. Supporters of Harkins' ruling said that the amendment should not be allowed because the tax bill does not deal with income tax rates. They also noted that the House this year defeated a similar amendment. Opponents of Harkins' ruling said that while the tax bill does not deal specifically with income tax rates, it does in fact deal with the income tax code. They argued that it is unfair, undemocratic and inconsistent that Harkins is prohibiting a vote on a clearly-related income tax rate reduction. (A "Yes" vote is for Harkins' ruling prohibiting consideration of an amendment reducing the state income tax rate from 5.3 percent to five percent. A "No" vote is against Harkins' ruling and favors allowing consideration of the income tax reduction).

$85 MILLION TAX PACKAGE (S 2241)

House 95-56, approved the Senate version of a bill that makes several changes in the state's tax laws. The changes, estimated to raise $85 million, are aimed at both individuals and businesses. A key provision imposes the state's five percent sales tax on software that is downloaded from the Internet. Currently these downloads are considered nontaxable because there is no transfer of tangible property. Supporters of the bill said that the package is a fair one that would close many business and individual loopholes. Some opponents of the bill said that the package is an unnecessary tax hike that would hurt individual taxpayers and businesses and make Massachusetts less attractive to businesses. Debate also centered on another key provision that exempts from interest and penalties an estimated 40,000 taxpayers who will soon be hit with a retroactive capital gains tax. The provision also exempts anyone who owes less than $100 in the retroactive tax. The Legislature in 2002 raised the capital gains tax but made the hike effective on May 1, 2002— effectively exempting from the hike all taxpayers who incurred capital gains during the first four months of 2002. The Supreme Judicial Court (SJC) ruled that the mid-year change in the tax rate was unconstitutional because it taxed taxpayers at different rates during the same year. The SJC ruling made January 1, 2002 the effective date and means that taxpayers who sold their homes or stocks between January 1, 2002 and April 30, 2002 must retroactively pay the higher capital gains tax. The court also gave the Legislature the option to make the effective date January 1, 2003 instead of January 1, 2002 but the House in September rejected an amendment to do so. Supporters of the later effective date said that it is outrageous to change the rules in the middle of the game and require some 40,000 taxpayers to pay a retroactive tax three years after they sold their homes or stocks in good faith based on a lower tax rate. They support changing the effective date to January 1, 2003 to save those taxpayers $150 million and also refund $250 million to other taxpayers who paid the higher capital gains tax rate during the last eight months of 2002. Opponents of the later effective date said that the state cannot afford to give up $400 million in revenue and noted that the provision exempting these taxpayers from penalties and interest and exempting any taxpayers who owe less than $100 is a good one that would provide some relief. This argument was disputed by opponents of the retroactive tax who said that supporting the exemption might appear to be noble on the surface but is actually ill advised because it is the final outrageous legislative action that is necessary to officially impose this outrageous retroactive capital gains tax on unsuspecting taxpayers. They noted that the Revenue Commissioner is waiting to see if the Legislature provides these exemptions so that the state can send out bills for the retroactive tax. They urged the House to oppose the bill and the exemption in order to continue to delay the actual implementation of the unfair retroactive tax. (A "Yes" vote is for the $85 million tax package including the exemptions on the retroactive capital gains tax. A "No" vote is against the package and the exemptions).

UNIVERSAL HEALTH CARE (H 4463)

House 131-22, approved and sent to the Senate a bill designed to ensure that all Massachusetts residents have health insurance coverage. The measure requires all residents to acquire health insurance, expands the number of low-income people who would be covered under the state's Medicaid program and offers sliding scale subsidies to other low-income people who do not qualify for Medicaid. The most controversial section of the proposal is a mandate that businesses that have more than ten employees and don't provide health insurance to their workers be required to pay into a state fund that will assist in providing insurance for the uninsured. Supporters said that this landmark legislation is a well-though out package that would provide some form of health insurance for every man, woman and child. They noted that it would become a model for the nation. Opponents said that they agreed with a large portion of the bill but oppose several provisions including the mandate that essentially imposes a tax on many businesses by forcing them to pay into a fund to provide health insurance to people who are not even their employees. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

ELIMINATE MANDATED PAYMENTS BY BUSINESSES (H 4463)

House 24-129, rejected an amendment to eliminate the mandate of the health insurance bill that businesses that have more than ten employees and don't provide health insurance to their workers be required to pay into a state fund that will assist in providing insurance for the uninsured. Supporters of the mandate argued that it is fair and reasonable to end the free ride for these businesses and require that they contribute to the solution for the health care problem. They noted that small businesses with ten or fewer employees would be exempt. Opponents of the mandate said that it is an anti-business one that would discourage companies from remaining in or relocating to Massachusetts. They noted that it would also discourage small businesses from hiring more employees out of fear of reaching the eleven-employee threshold that would require them to pay into the fund. (A "Yes" vote is for eliminating the mandate. A "No" vote is against eliminating the mandate and favors the mandate).

CALL IT A TAX (H 4463)

House 21-132, rejected an amendment replacing all health care bill references to "Commonwealth care contribution" with the words "jobs tax." Amendment supporters said that the bill dishonestly attempts to disguise the fact that a forced contribution by an employer is in reality a tax. They said that a contribution sounds voluntary and argued that it is time to be honest and admit that this is an unfair new tax on businesses. Amendment opponents said that the amendment is a silly one that is designed to score political points. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment requiring that the mandate be called a tax. A "No" vote is against the amendment).

HOME OIL SPILLS (S 538)

Senate 39-0, approved and sent to the House a bill requiring homeowner insurance policies sold in Massachusetts to include coverage for the cost of cleaning up home heating oil spills. The measure also requires homeowners who have oil tanks to upgrade their systems by December 2008 in order to help prevent oil spills. Supporters said that there are some 400 home heating oil spills annually in Massachusetts and noted that cleanups cost an average of $50,000. They noted that many homeowners cannot afford this and are surprised to find out that their policies do not cover the costs. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

$473 MILLION ECONOMIC STIMULUS PACKAGE (S 2256)

Senate 39-0, approved an economic stimulus package that began with a price tag of $473 million but ended with a higher, undetermined cost as dozens of amendments were added on the Senate floor. Provisions include $70 million for capital improvements to the University of Massachusetts; $55 million for improvements in street and public transportation around Boston's Fenway Park and Longwood Medical area; $30 million for historic preservation tax credits; $9 million for Science, Technology Engineering and Math scholarships; funding for local projects across the state and a two-day sales tax-free holiday for businesses that are forced to close for more than four days in a city of town declared to be in a state of emergency. The measure also revamps zoning and development laws to help communities develop commercial and industrial properties. Supporters said that this fiscally responsible package would stimulate the state's economy, create thousands of jobs and encourage businesses to remain in and/or relocate to Massachusetts. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

REDUCE UNEMPLOYMENT TAX (S 2256)

Senate 7-32, rejected an amendment reducing the unemployment tax paid by employers on their employees. The payments go into a fund that pays benefits to laid-off workers. The amendment reduces from $14,000 to $12,800 the amount of a worker's wages on which an employer pays unemployment taxes. Amendment supporters said that this would offer some real relief to overburdened employers and noted that Massachusetts has the highest unemployment tax rates in the nation. Amendment opponents said that the reduction would decrease the amount of available money to pay unemployment benefits to laid-off workers. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment reducing unemployment taxes by reducing the wage base to $12,800. A "Nay" vote is against the reduction).

Scholarship to be established in memory of Gia Barresi

CHS 1983 grad was valedictorian

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Members of the Cohasset High School class of 1983 have gotten together to ensure their friend and classmate Gia Barresi will never be forgotten.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley, who is a graduate of the Cohasset High School class of 1981, but whose sister Maureen graduated with Barresi, said members of Barresi's class have been raising funds to be put into a scholarship fund, to be awarded in Barresi's memory. Barresi passed away in September, 2001. He said the requirements for receiving the scholarship will ensure the person who is given the award will have achieved goals similar to Barresi's accomplishments in high school, and overall be a similar kind of student.

"We want to acknowledge the group's effort and properly record what they've done," explained Buckley, who presented the article to selectmen which will be included on the Dec. 5 Town Meeting Warrant. Formal Town Meeting articles are not necessary to establish scholarship funds, and the board of selectmen has the authority to accept scholarships at any time. However, Buckley said by having the town formally vote to accept and begin this scholarship fund, there will be a more permanent record of the efforts Barresi's classmates have made, and their contribution will be forever written into the 2005 Annual Town Report and become part of the town's history, rather than lost in the minutes of a selectmen's meeting. "It's a nice touch for the donors and a better, more permanent record," he said.

The recipient of the scholarship will be a female student graduating from Cohasset High School who has achieved high honor roll three of four terms during her senior year, has engaged in athletic or other extra-curricular activities two of three seasons during each academic year, has enrolled in a full-time, four-year accredited college or university, and has exhibited outstanding leadership qualities in school or in the community.

A Gia Barresi Committee will be appointed, consisting initially of Kristin W. Rosano of Cohasset, Tara Pompeo of Amherst, N.H., Jennifer Markulec of Titusville, N.J., Maureen Buckley of Cotati, Calif., and Maureen McCarthy of Cohasset. The committee will consult with the school committee and superintendent from time to time in connection with the awarding of the scholarship.

The scholarship may, but need not be awarded each academic year. The net amount accumulated on the principle to the first of the month in which the recipient is designated, may determine the amount of each award from available net income. The award will be used to help defray the cost of pursuing a course of study.

Barresi was a member of and valedictorian of the Cohasset High School class of 1983. She went on to graduate from Harvard University in 1987. She was also a member of the school's field hockey, basketball and softball teams.

The board of selectmen unanimously recommended the article.

Buttonwood hosts Laura MacDonald

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, hosts Laura M. MacDonald Thursday, Nov. 17, at 7 p.m. She will be discussing her book "Curse of the Narrows." Why does Halifax, Nova Scotia, send Boston a Christmas tree every year? Laura MacDonald will answer that question during a slide presentation recounting the Halifax disaster of 1917. The "Curse of the Narrows" describes in detail the confluence of events that occurred on Dec. 6, 1917, in Halifax, Nova Scotia. A boat collision in the Narrows of the harbor caused an explosion that triggered a tsunami and then a blizzard arrived that buried the city in snow. Using primary sources — many of which haven't been read in decades — and with a wonderful feel for narrative history, Mac Donald chronicles one of the most compelling and dramatic events of the 20th century.

This event is free and open to the public. If you are unable to attend and would like to purchase a signed book, call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 or order online at www.buttonwoodbooks.com.

Cohasset's Aidan Buick gets ready to launch a blast toward the Norwell goal in the second half of the Skippers' 1-0 quarterfinal win over the Clippers Tuesday night.

Ball bounces right way in 1-0 quarterfinal win over Norwell

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Sometimes it really is better to be lucky than good.

Cohasset High boys soccer coach Rob Leary pretty much conceded that point after watching his team survive a Norwell onslaught in Tuesday night's Div. 3 South Sectional quarterfinals showdown to pull out a 1-0 win.

"(Norwell) is a very good team and they came to play tonight," said Leary. "I think they outplayed us. We were lucky to win."

Lucky or not, the eighth seeded Skippers (14-4-1) moved on to face 5-seed Hanover (15-3-2) Thursday at Brockton High in a match played after the Mariner went to press. The Skippers have lost to Hanover three straight times over the last two seasons, including a 2-0 setback this September.

The lone goal of Tuesday's thriller was scored by Cohasset senior captain Aidan Buick 3:16 into the second half, and it did not come without controversy.

Collecting a throw-in on a run down the left sideline, Cohasset sophomore Sam Roth lofted a diagonal feed into the box, with Buick and Norwell keeper Jeff Capello arriving at it at approximately the same time 10 yards out from the left post. It appeared Capello got both hands on the ball a fraction of a second before a slight collision with Buick. The ball came free and rolled behind Capello. Buick, with his momentum already going toward the goal, won the race to the ball and chipped it into the open net just ahead of the sliding save attempt by Norwell sweeper Jimmy Barrett.

"Buick wanted the ball more than their keeper, and he put it in the back of the net, and we made it hold up" asserted Coach Leary. "That's been the case all season. He's carried us on his shoulders at times this season."

Buick offered his assessment of the play after the game.

"I saw the goalie hesitate a little bit, so I decided to take a run," Buick said. "He only got a hand on it, and I kind of hit it with my shoulder, and then it was an open net."

Not surprisingly, Norwell head coach Jack Browne saw it somewhat differently.

"Honestly, I thought the ball got knocked loose and that we got robbed on that call," said Browne.

Of course, the Clippers veteran coach freely admitted this goal never should have been the difference in this game.

"We had so many chances to score, but just couldn't finish it," said Browne. "That's been what's plagued us all year, the inability to finish, but it obviously hurts so much more now after we seemed to be getting things going a little in the tourney."

Norwell (11-7-4), seeded 17th, had topped higher seeds Old Colony and South Shore Christian by scores of 4-0 and 5-1, respectively.

It took both teams five or six minutes to settle into this one, played under the lights at Cohasset High, but Norwell dominated the middle 25 minutes of the frame in terms of possession, territory, aggressiveness and scoring chances. As has been the case so many times this season for the Clippers, however, they came away with nothing to show.

Cohasset's Charles Dean enters University of Denver Hall of Fame

DENVER - The University of Denver inducted six individuals - including Cohasset's Charles W. Dean - into its Athletics Hall of Fame, Class 2005, in a ceremony held Saturday, Nov. 5.

The Pioneers honored some of their greatest athletes in history, presenting each with a plaque. Dean was one of six inductees honored on Saturday. The crowd of approximately 200 people were treated to a video presentation honoring the accomplishments of the inductees.

Dean and Harry C. Beaver III were co-founders of the men's lacrosse program at the University of Denver over 40 years ago. Together, the duo brought the sport of lacrosse to the intramural fields and helped develop it into a recognized club sport, only to hope it would evolve into what it is today; a nationally renowned Division I program.

Dean, while a senior at Denver and a Beta Theta Pi sportsman, was the team's first player-coach in 1965. He was instrumental in building the program, as he went above and beyond to recruit players and advisors, schedule games between other Colorado schools, organize fundraising activities, and procure the necessary equipment.

A two-sport standout, Dean also played on DU's initial varsity soccer team in the fall of 1961, and subsequently earned four letters. After earning a degree in Economics from Denver in 1965, "the father of DU lacrosse" went on to a remarkable military career. He served five years of active duty in the U.S. Navy, which included flying in more than 100 carrier-based combat missions over North Vietnam, and an additional 16 years in the Naval Reserve.

Dean was recognized for his courageous efforts and was awarded the Navy Commendation Medal, along with numerous Air Medals. He has pursued a career involved in the investment world, specializing in the fixed income markets.

Girls soccer looks to bright future

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

"If how we played on the field tonight is my future, then I don't have anything to worry about."

Those were the words of Cohasset High girls soccer coach Deb Beal in the aftermath of a season-ending 2-2 draw against a Scituate team that had beaten the Skippers 6-1 in early September.

The reason for Beal's optimism is a very talented group of underclassmen that played a large role in bringing this year's squad within one point of another Div. 3 state tournament berth.

The young players will be asked to make up for the loss of this season's five graduating seniors: tri-captains Emilie Shea, Melissa Crowley-Buck and Katie Bolger, and also Jen Dinger and Molly Trahon.

Crowley-Buck developed into one of the South Shore League's top goalies this season, and turned in one of her best performances in that season finale against Scituate, making several key saves in the second half to keep her team in the lead until the very end.

Bolger played well at the marking back position to help lead a Skippers defense that was solid through most of the season. Shea, Dinger and Trahon all contributed to an attack that hit its peak late in the season.

Among next year's returnees are 11 juniors: Emily Coggins, Colleen Richardson, Caren Garber, Haley Haracz, Alyssa Hinman, Christina Pinkus, Lindsay Durkin, Lara Novak, Shalea Daly, Kara Wilcox and Jamie Genovese.

"That class includes many capable athletes who will be ready to step up lead this team to their full potential," Beal said.

Sophomores Meg Anderson and Anna Haggerty were key contributors to the Skippers' defense - particularly Haggerty, who played a great sweeper down the stretch - while classmate Abby Foley was one of the JV squad's top performers.

Beal can look forward to three more years of a talented quintet of freshmen who saw a lot of playing time at the varsity level: Torey Hart, Maggie McGoldrick, Sarah Coggins, Gabby Flibbotte, Kristen Monaco. Some of the freshmen

Wave takes Skippers under

Abington takes SSL title with 36-22 win

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Hollywood script called for a Skippers win last Friday night in a game that was not only for the South Shore League title, but was the last home game for retiring Cohasset head coach Tony Rolfe.

The Abington Green Wave, however, made their own ending.

After getting down 6-0 in the first quarter, the Green Wave scored 36 unanswered points en route to a 36-22 victory that put them in the Div. 3 playoffs.

After Cohasset (4-2-2 overall, 2-1 league) senior tailback Shane Dorian scored on a one-yard plunge with 3:47 to go in the first quarter, the Skippers appeared poised to score on their next possession after a 16-yard punt return from junior Fletcher Smallzel and a 15-yard run from sophomore Brian Hill gave them first-and-goal at the Abington 6.

The Green Wave defense forced Cohasset to attempt a 24-yard field goal. What followed were two plays that completely altered the complexion of the game.

Abington juniors Matt MacLean and Tim Wells burst through the line and blocked the kick of Cohasset's Robert Murley. The Green Wave took over at their own 16, and on first down, sophomore quarterback John Creamer found Wells on a post pattern for 54 yards.

After four runs from junior back John Gabriele, Creamer hit Wells again, this time for a 16-yard touchdown. Creamer completed a pass to senior running back Steve Golbranson on the ensuing two-point conversion, and Abington was off to the proverbial races.

After the game, Green Wave head coach Jim Kelliher said the long pass to Wells is what truly turned the momentum in his team's favor.

"That pass, if anything, is what changed the game," Kelliher said. "Certainly, that blocked field goal was a factor. But when we threw that long one, I think that said [to Cohasset], 'We better start paying attention [to the pass].'"

Abington's next possession culminated in a 37-yard scoring pass from Creamer to senior tight end James Hall with 2:49 for it.

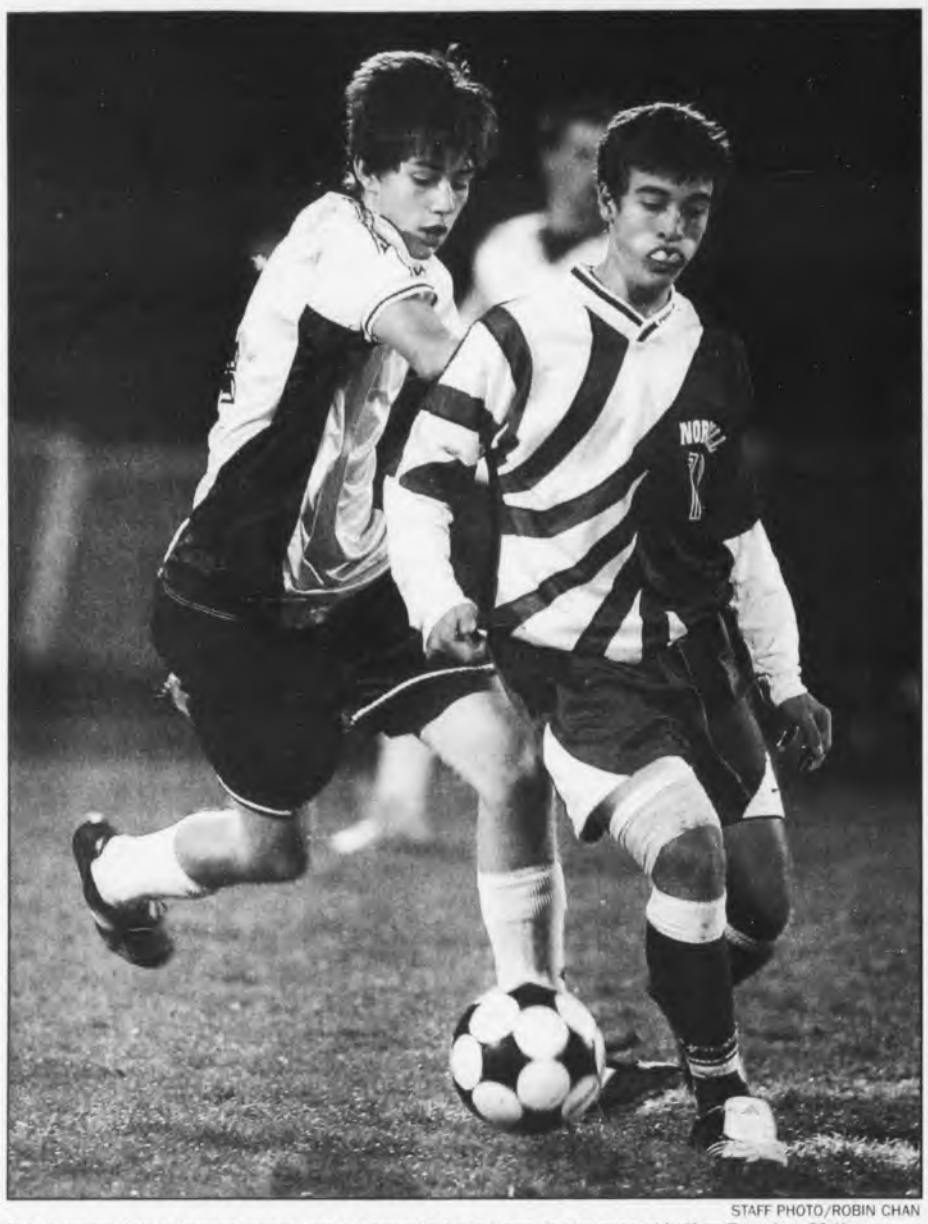
Sophomore Colin Henry was particularly dominant, winning races to balls all over Norwell's offensive third and sending deft passes through to teammates. Henry's diagonal feed from the left flank was rung off the post by McCord after a nice crossover move with 13 minutes to play in the half.

Cohasset keeper Prescott Busk also came off his line hard a few times to stop odd man Norwell rushes. In the 25th minute, the senior netminder showed little regard for his body as he dove to smother a Kevin Dow blast just as it was leaving his foot. Busk also robbed Dow on a point blank opportunity a minute before the break, diving to his right to snare a shot from 12 yards out.



Of course, Cohasset had some chances in the first half too, most of these coming off some quick-hitting counterattacks. Capello got there just a beat before Roth could get his head onto a long feed into the box with eight minutes to go in the half, and Roth also sent one just over the cross bar after Mike Grimm sent him in with a step on his man with four minutes to go.

Norwell continued to carry the balance of the play in he second half, though not to the extent they did in the first half. Great solo efforts from Henry created the Clippers best chances at an equalizer. The gifted sophomore raced past several defenders with the ball on a left to right run across the top of the goal area midway through the second half, but his attempted chip shot back to the near side rolled just inches wide of the post.

Five minutes later, he flew past a defender and Busk to get a foot on a long pass from McCord 20 yards out from the right post. His aim was thrown off just a bit as he collided with Busk, however, and the shot rolled across the crease and a foot wide of the far post.

With two minutes to play, Henry turned the corner on his mark on a quick move into the box. His cross was deflected, however, and McCord was forced to retreat from the goalmouth for the ball. His attempt to turn on the bouncing ball 15 yards out from the right post resulted in a shot that sailed over the cross bar.

That was Norwell's final quality opportunity.

The Skippers' Chris Ofsthun closely trails Norwell's Colin Henry in the second half on Tuesday. Ofsthun played another solid game in the middle of the pitch for Cohasset.

"We let them have possession. But we still found a way to pull it out in the end, and that's what matters most."

Cohasset coach Rob Leary

Leary was quick to credit his senior leadership for "holding the team together" during Norwell's assaults at the offensive end. For the most part, senior captain Trevor Brady did a nice job of staying with the ultra-fast and explosive Henry, and seniors Sam McDonald and Chris Ofsthun broke up seemingly dozens of promising Norwell rushes.

At the other end, Norwell senior captain Scott Kitchen did a remarkable job of bottling up Buick, arguably the South Shore League's most dominant player…save for the goal that is.

For Kitchen, one of the team's three graduating senior captains, his performance was of little consolation for the loss.

"We finally picked it up at the end of the season, and it's tough to lose," he said. "We should have beaten them, and we should have beaten a lot of other teams."

While Leary was left with questions about his team's execution, there was no doubt in his mind about its effort.

"We played hard," said Leary. "We stuck with (Norwell). I still think we're the better team; we just didn't play as well as them tonight. We let them have possession. But we still found a way to pull it out in the end, and that's what matters most."

Sports editor Mark Goodman contributed to this story.

The road to Brockton

Before Tuesday's win over Norwell that sent Cohasset to last night's Div. 3 South semifinal at Brockton High School, the Skippers had to get by Pembroke last Friday and Chatham on Sunday. On this page and the next are the accounts of those victories.

Skippers have revenge on the mind

By Andrew Kinch
CORRESPONDENT

COHASSET 4
CHATHAM 0

Nearly a year to the day had passed since their last playoff match-up and, this time, it was Cohasset's turn.

The first round game of the 2004 Div. 3 South sectional had the 16th-seeded Skippers traveling to the home of a top-ranked Blue Devil squad, which subsequently took the match, 3-1.

Sunday's game, however, brought about a much different pairing as the 8-seeded host Cohasset avenged last year's loss by running all over 9-seed Chatham in a 4-0 victory. The Skippers advance due, in large part, to the monster effort by senior Aidan Buick.

Despite the oncoming fog, the tense atmosphere during warm-ups seemed to clear after the opening kickoff. In that first minute of play, a particular sequence set the tone for the entire game.

Gradually advancing up field, a Chatham forward tried to make a centering pass but missed the ball completely. Cohasset then took control and attacked quickly, putting a shot on net. It continued like this for the rest of the half as the Skippers kept the ball in their offensive end, limiting the visitors from creating momentum.

Buick, with classmates Brandon Smith, Ben Libby and Trevor Brady, and sophomores Mike Grimm and Sam Roth did their part by unleashing a barrage of shots on the Blue Devils' goal. Chatham, however, could only conjure up a single shot during that stretch, which senior keeper Prescott Busk handled with ease.

Cohasset head coach Rob Leary said it was unlike Chatham to do as poor as they had on the offensive end.

"I don't think they had one good scoring chance all game, and that's a good team," he said.

The scoring began in the middle of the first half after a handball was called on Chatham about 30 yards in front of the left goalpost. The set piece allowed Buick to place a bending shot over the wall and the outstretched goalie and into nearside, upper corner.

The left corner continued to get a workout, making the score 2-0 with 13:30 to go in the half. Roth took a pass on the right side of the penalty box from Libby and fired a left-footer across the goal, into the side of the net.

Buick scored his second goal of the match in the 34th minute, when he dribbled behind the defense, up the right side and took on the Blue Devils' net minder at point-blank range. The keeper could not contain the shot and Cohasset took a 3-0 lead into the half.

After the break, Chatham tried to copy the Skippers' first half attack, but could not penetrate the last line anchored by captains Sam MacDonald and Brady. The only notable scoring chance for the Blue Devils came with 13 minutes to play. Chat-ham's Gaetan Delva took a shot from the top of the box, though Busk lept and got a hand on the ball and lifted it over the net.

Buick gave Cohasset a four-goal lead when he ran under a ball that MacDonald lofted behind the defense. Buick gathered the pass at the penalty spot and put it in the back of the net.

After the game, Buick said he was not surprised with his team's effort, but he said he would not have predicted this outcome.

"We really didn't expect to come out and put up four goals," said Buick.

The Skippers, of course, advanced to take on arch-rival Norwell two nights later, and Buick foreshadowed what was to come in his postgame comments on Sunday.

"We beat Norwell twice already," said Buick, "So we expect to beat them again."

Skippers hold off Titans

By Caitlin Flaherty
CORRESPONDENT

Despite great hustle by the Titan boys' soccer squad, Pembroke fell to Cohasset 4-2 in the preliminary round game of the MIAA Division 3 South sectional tournament at Cohasset's Alumni Field on Friday afternoon.

PEMBROKE 2

With the chilly playing conditions, it seemed to take some time for both sides to warm up during their sole meeting of the season. The first few minutes of the game were back and forth, the ball staying close to midfield most of the time.

Cohasset was first to threaten about five minutes into the first half, but failed to get the ball past Pembroke fullback Scott Sayce. A couple minutes later Cohasset forwards had another opportunity to score, but were swarmed by Sayce, Justin Pugliese, and Robert Nathan, who cleared the ball from Titan territory.

After 15 minutes Pembroke was finally able to break through Cohasset pressure as forward Ryan Tran-Ngoc took the ball up field, but shot it right into the hands of Skipper goalkeeper Prescott Busk Cohasset came back in full force, keeping the ball on Pembroke's side for nearly all of the time remaining in the first half. The Skippers shot nine times, but three went wide, one hit off the crossbar, and Pembroke's Patriot League all-star goalie, captain Andy Roy, came up big with five saves.

Also aiding in Cohasset's futile efforts to score, was the solid defensive work of Jeff Lawlor, Brian Empoliti, and Pugliese as well as Pat Lindhal, who was able to cut-off a breakaway before the half ended with a score of 0-0.

Although Cohasset had more shots during the first half, Skippers head coach Rob Leary felt Pembroke outplayed his team.

"We did not play very well," Leary said. "We had been playing extremely well going into the tournament, but Pembroke outworked us. They beat us on a lot of 50/50 balls and were able to take us out of our game."

Leary's troops came out firing in the second half though. Less than three minutes into it, Cohasset's Aidan Buick stepped up for a penalty kick and scored with a shot to the low right corner, riling up his team and the large Cohasset crowd.

The Skippers' Mike Grimm chases the ball with Pembroke's Justin Pugliese (26) in the second half of Cohasset's 4-2 win on Friday.

As the clock wound down, the Titans showed they would not go down without a fight.

Leary felt that first goal may have been the turning point in the game.

"We have a lot of seniors so I think they figured out and realized what they needed to do in the second half to win," he said. "Getting that first goal right away really took a lot of the pressure off."

Pembroke attempted to answer right back with another shot by Tran-Ngoc, but Busk came up with another save.

Cohasset immediately threatened again. Forward Chris Donze managed to squeak a shot through Pembroke defenders and into the net, giving his team a two goal cushion.

Pembroke faced an even greater challenge when a player was given a red card within the first 10 minutes for arguing with a ref's penalty call. For the last 30 minutes they were forced to play with a man down.

The Skippers fed off Pembroke's frustrations and continued to keep the ball on Pembroke's side, but Roy had two more saves to keep his team in the game.

About 13 minutes into the half, although down a player, Pembroke started to gain some momentum and quieted the Cohasset crowd. The Titans had two missed attempts before freshman midfielder Chris Carter kicked a beautiful pass from the right side to teammate Pugliese, who headed it in for the Titans' first goal of the afternoon.

"The ref lightened up and let us play," Pugliese said. "We started to move the ball around more and get it up field. The tempo started to pick up."

Cohasset came back trying to edge Pembroke out of the game for good, but were stopped by strong defense from Nathan. Roy also had another good save on a free kick.

With twenty minutes left on the clock, Pembroke tried to tie the game with some nifty footwork by Pugliese who brought the ball past Cohasset defenders and passed it off to Carter, who kicked it into the shins of Busk. However, Carter was then ruled off sides.

Two minutes later Roy made a nice save on a breakaway, which sent him to the ground. Cohasset's Sam Roth was able to finish off the play, scoring on the rebound. The goal would later prove enough to overcome the Titans.

Cohasset continued putting the pressure on the Pembroke defense. Twenty-eight minutes deep into the second half, Roy made another nice save. But, the Skippers did not stop shooting. The Pembroke goalkeeper was forced to go far to his left to make another save and Cohasset's Mike Grimm was there to place the rebound into the right corner of the net.

As the clock wound down, the Titans showed they would not go down without a fight. With less than two minutes left in the game, Lawlor shot the ball off the hands of the Cohasset goalie and into the feet of teammate Tran-Ngoc, who knocked it into the net for the Titans' second goal.

who improved their game at the junior varsity level include Brittany Dunn, Melissa Castro, Johanna Brophy, Rachel McMorris and Kayla Farren.

"They have worked so hard from day one that I believe this is only the beginning," Beal said. "I can't help but be excited about the future. This team is so young and so exciting to watch.

"I have really enjoyed this season and I learned quite a bit from these girls and I hope that I was able to assist them as well."

Beal continued to praise her first-year assistant coach, Ruairi McClean.

"Ruairi was a tremendous asset to our program this year, helping us to look at skills and drills differently and to develop our individual foot skills," she said. "He has laid some groundwork for years to come. He is an avid soccer player from Ireland working here in the United States for Massachusetts Premier Soccer. He brought a new light to the sessions and I do hope that the girls enjoyed the opportunity, as I am sure that Ruairi did."

Beal said this year, like any other, was an education for her and her players.

"I guess each success and each failure is a learning experience, and I think we learned quite a lot this season," said the coach. "We began on August 25 and we ended on November 2, what a great time we had and I am very excited about the future of this team and of this program. We have brought ourselves up a notch and I expect more.

"We need to commit ourselves in the off season and continue to train and practice as much as we can. Some time away from soccer is what we need to build up the excitement and energy that we had before we finished today. I believe in their efforts and I applaud them for all they do."

COASTAL STARS

Squirt C2

In what one parent described as "a real nail-biter" the Coastal Stars C-2 Squirts regained their winning ways on Sunday at Pilgrim Rink against a hard charging Weymouth team with a 5-4 victory.

In the first period, forward Mats Nelson, assisted by Tom Pilat, started the scoring for the Stars. Weymouth came back at the Stars with a strong offensive rush. Goalie Hugh Healey and the Stars' solid defensive lines of Jack Conlon, Jake Denton, Brodie Jackisch, Joe Proctor and Sam Asnault piled on the pressure to keep Weymouth out of the Stars' zone.

With what could only be described as incredible persistence in getting the rebound, wing Daniel Cronin scored his first goal of the season, assisted by Mats Nelson. Again, Weymouth pulled even with another goal.

The second period saw some goals racked up by wing Cameran Mastrangelo, unassisted, and the Stars' 4th goal was fired in by center Mats Nelson, also unassisted.

The third period was the battleground with a 4-4 score and furious backchecking by Jake Moore, Derek Benson, David Craig and Tim Cavanaro. With only a few minutes until the final buzzer, Tom Pilat whipped one in for what would be the 5th and winning goal!

The next game for the Stars C2 will be against Whitman-Hanson-Kingston on Sunday, November 13 at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

Squirt C4

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 defeated the Brewins 2 team 3 to 0 on Sunday October 23rd at the Hobomock Arena.

Kal Maier turned in a shutout! He made several key saves throughout the game. Kal came up big in the third period when the Brewins team provided their most consistent offensive pressure. Forwards Sammy Rice, Brendan O'Connell, Matt McQuillan, Matthew Scullion, Mikey Lund, and Max Marsden peppered the Brewins goalie with many quality shots.

Defensemen Adam Cowie-Haskell, William Marsden, Teddy Craven, Colin Bell, and Tommy Prendergast played solid "D" throughout the game, limiting the Brewins teams opportunities. Sammy Rice broke the ice with a short-handed goal in the first period on a feed from Brendan O'Connell. In the second period with time running out Adam Cowie-Haskell connected for a score from just inside the blue line. In the third period with 1 second left Matthew Scullion scored on an empty net goal on an unselfish pass from Mikey Lund. Way to go Stars!

On Saturday October 29th at Gallo Arena in Falmouth the Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team defeated the Duxbury 3 team 4 to 3 in a closely fought contest.

Goalie Jack Conlon made some spectacular saves throughout the game. Forwards Matthew Scullion, Mikey Lund, Max Marsden, Brendan O'Connell, Tommy Prendergast, and Matthew McQuillan had to skate hard all day against this speedy Duxbury team. Defensemen Chris Lund, William Marsden, Henry Brown, Colin Bell, and Adam Cowie-Haskell did a great job keeping up with the Duxbury skaters and keeping the puck out of the defensive zone.

Tommy Prendergast got the scoring started with the first of his two goals early in the first period following a rebound of a shot from Brendan O'Connell. Tommy scored the second goal of the game in the second period on a great pass from the blue line from Adam Cowie-Haskell. Brendan O'Connell scored an unassisted goal on a great rush from the left wing midway through the second period. Mikey Lund scored the final Stars goal in the third period on an acrobatic feed from his brother, Chris.

Great job Stars!

Known to his close friends, Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity brothers and teammates as "Beav," Harry Beaver III was a driving force in gaining recognition for lacrosse as both a club and varsity sport. Serving as co-captain during the 1966 and 1967 seasons, Beaver served the team off the field as much as he did on the field.

To insure that the team was properly equipped, like Dean, Beaver continued to raise funds, procure equipment and uniforms, and even had helmet paint sessions in the basement of the SAE house. Likewise, he organized game schedules, coordinated with ground crews to get the field lined and ready for games, contracted officials, and even made sure that his teammates had oranges on the sidelines on game day.

In the team's three seasons as a recognized club sport, Beaver helped lead DU to a 17-11-1 overall record. In 1968, DU went 8-1-1, with the Pioneers' only loss coming in overtime to Stanford. Beaver, a 1968 graduate, also played on the first Denver Alumni team at the Vail Shootout in 1997.

Denver lacrosse began as a dream to many, but under this duo's leadership, their vision became a reality.

Information contributed by Josh Waldman, assistant director of media relations at the University of Denver.

With starting quarterback Anthony DiPaolo injured on Cohasset's prior possession, Hill took the snaps on the half's last drive and took his team 58 yards on 10 plays to set up a fourth-and-goal at the Abington 5. Hill completed passes to Smallzel and sophomore fullback P.J. McCaw on the drive, with Dorian picking up 31 yards on the ground. Cohasset's O-line of Justin Alexander, Paul St. Pierre, Nick Cambi, Nick Arment and Jake Cuneo opened up some big holes for Dorian.

Unfortunately for the Skippers, it all went for naught, as Hill's fourth down pass for senior Dan McCarthy just brushed off the tight end's fingertips to fall incomplete. The play rather summed up a frustrating evening for the Skippers, who had come into the game with a fully healthy lineup for the first time all year, including key defensive end Scott Wakefield and linebacker Colin Conway.

But, DiPaolo and Murley both went down in the first quarter. DiPaolo did not return, and Murley - who doubles as a defensive back - limped through the second half.

"We practice all week on defense [with Murley], and then we lose him," Rolfe said. "We just don't bring in a second string. We move somebody from point A to point B and try to make the best of it. It's just a cumulative effect.

"It's been that kind of year for us. We're just scrambling to catch up and get healthy, and we're going to scramble to keep going these next two games."

For the second straight week, Abington's second half could be called The John Gabriele Show. The junior ran over Norwell in the second half the prior week, and he did it to Cohasset last Friday, as 89 of his 111 yards on the night came in the second half. His third quarter scoring runs of eight and two yards essentially put the game away.

"It's been that kind of year for us. We're just scrambling to catch up and get healthy, and we're going to scramble to keep going these next two games."

Cohasset head coach Tony Rolfe

Like any smart running back, Gabriele knew who to give the credit to after the game.

"I had excellent blocking by all my linemen and my fullback," Gabriele said.

Indeed, the Abington line of Peter Stavropoulos, Ronald Cassidy, MacLean, Kyle Taylor and Ronald Dunn won the trench battle by a wide margin in the second half. They were there when Golbranson put the exclamation point on the night for Abington with a 10-yard scoring run two minutes into the fourth.

Cohasset didn't give up and scored a couple touchdowns late in the fourth to make the final score respectable. Hill hit Smallzel for 11 yards on a well-run curl route in the end zone, and Dorian went up the gut from two yards with 54 seconds left for his second TD of the game. Dorian had runs of 56 and 25 yards down the stretch, and finished with 162 yards on 19 carries.

And now for Abington (7-2, 4-0), the only thing that stands between them and an undefeated league season is tonight's game with Mashpee, a team that has already played Cohasset and Norwell extremely though. Even if the Green Wave slip up, however, the worst they can do is a tie with one-loss Cohasset (should they beat Norwell and Hull and their final two games), and Abington would hold the tiebreaker via last Friday night's win.

Up next: Norwell

Tonight, the Skippers hope to rebound when they travel to take on league rival Norwell at 7 p.m. The Clippers (6-3 overall, 2-2 league) are playing their last home game of the season and will be looking to avenge last year's 20-3 loss to Cohasset in a game that decided the 2004 league championship.

As usual, Norwell boasts a strong running attack, led by seniors Dan Pye and Steve Farinick. Cohasset's defense will need to get more penetration at the line and tackle better than it did against Abington in order to stop the Clippers.

Spinnaker getting ready for Nov. 22 debut

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

Week 10 is now upon us here at the high school and coincidentally, I have just about 10 separate items of news to my readers. The police presence around the school has remained despite the tranquility that we as a school have been experiencing since the alleged threats. Students are still not allowed to carry backpacks or sport bags, but with sports teams seasons ending left and right, the mountain of bags in the front hallway has dwindled into a mole hill.

The Spinnaker staff has been writing its stories and begun to put the paper together so it will be ready in time for its Nov. 22 debut. Now here's the school related news for this week.

• Drivers Ed began on Monday the 7th and will have met on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of this week at 6:30 p.m. in the high school upper lobby. The classes look to continue meeting on these days for the near future.

• Dana McCabe has been filling in as the Main Office secretary after the departure of someone near and dear to my heart.

• There will have been a Project Safeguard Presentation on Wednesday the 9th in the Middle School.

• The Math Club, advised by Mrs. Lee, placed third out of eight teams in its competition last week at Whitman-Hanson. Reed Dickinson and Caren Garber received high scores for their masterful math skills among all juniors.

• The Social Awareness Organization participated in a charity event over the weekend in which students bought, cooked, and served food to the homeless. The students who participated with advisor, Mr. Newkirk, were: Brooke Allen, Brendon Barrett, Mia Lieb-Lappen, Carrie Muir, and Katrina Reardon. Kids have also been volunteering at a local farm owned by artist and writer, Donna Green, and if anyone is interested in volunteering their time, contact Mr. Scott Newkirk, at the High School, 781-383-6100, extension 272. Some of the students who have been participating are: Brendon Barrett, Benjamin Bolster, Christopher Pescatore, Katrina Reardon, and Daniel Sullivan.

• The National Honor Society has finally been enlisted in a community service project at the Sunrise Village assisting senior citizens. Additionally, members will be working as peer tutors to the middle school students in a variety of academic disciplines.

• Attention AP students, you must pay $82 per AP test. Make the checks payable to the Cohasset High School and give them to your AP teachers as soon as possible.

• Melissa Crowley-Buck and Christopher Pescatore participated in a Student Advisory Council meeting last Thursday in Medford to discuss important school issues with students from all over the greater Boston area. They discussed issues involving student rights, school budget, and school legislature.

• Thursday the 10th is a busy day at the High School. Mr. Newkirk's Current Domestic Issues class will have gone on a field trip to the MCI Norfolk Maximum Security Prison. Also, the first quarter will have come to an end.

• Winter Sports Physicals will be held on Friday, Nov. 18 after school in the nurses' office by Dr. S. Golden for any high school athlete.

• Mr. Buckley's Law Class traveled to the Cohasset Police Department last week and most of the students were photographed for mock mug shots.

• There is no school today (Friday) because of the Veteran's Day holiday. That means a long weekend for everyone and a chance for more news to develop and for me to report it to you. Have a wonderful long weekend and enjoy the beautiful fall weather as I have been.

Parent workshop is Nov. 15 & 29

Adolescence is a very difficult time for many young people. Conversely, one of the greatest challenges parents face is maintaining positive and supportive relationships with their adolescent children. To help with these issues, Project Safeguard announces its 2005-2006 programming.

A parent workshop called "It's My Life: A Parent's View" led by Jan Tedeschi, Tuesday, Nov. 15 and 29, from 7-9 p.m. in the CMHS Library.

Tedeschi is a certified parent and teen trainer and certified school adjustment counselor who has a master's in marriage and family therapy and is also trained in chemical dependency and anger management. Her experience as a mother of four teens greatly enriches her professional knowledge. The two evening sessions will tie in with the film addressing current issues and will provide hands-on techniques for maintaining effective communication, eliminating power struggles and utilizing discipline skills to promote healthy choices. The fee for these workshops is $20. Seating is limited, register at toomey6@comcast.net, payment will be collected on the 15th.

The Project Safeguard Committee, comprised of parents, community leaders and faculty, facilitates programming to support families and enhance community atmosphere. For more information contact Beth Sternala, Middle School office; Nancy Oddleifson, fiveodds@aol.com or Sheila Toomey, toomey6@comcast.net.

IT'S HAPPENING

Joan Gatturna as Johanna Sears.

Tales of the Sea at Windsor Tea Room

Hingham actor and storyteller Joan Gatturna will present Petticoats At Sea, a tale of a woman's life aboard a China clipper, at the Windsor Tea Room, 1 Pleasant St., Cohasset, on Sunday Nov. 13 at 2 p.m. An elegant tea luncheon will be served following the performance. Gatturna will appear in 19th century costume as Johanna Sears, who travels to China on her father's clipper and later makes her home at sea as a captain's wife.

Petticoats At Sea is based on the lives of the many New England women who lived at sea rather than stay behind when their captain husbands sailed away on long voyages. These women encountered all the romance and perils of the sea from touring exotic ports to fighting off pirates.

Gatturna is a touring artist of the New England Foundation For the Arts and has presented Petticoats At Sea at maritime sites throughout the Northeast including the U.S.S. Constitution Museum, The Kennedy Library and the Theater at the National Sea Shore on Cape Cod.

This fundraising gala will help bring the programs to more schools in the area. The festivities will begin with a "teaser" game to get everyone started and during the course of the evening, 5 games will be played, each with a prize package attached. Fitting for an Art Center event, the games will be creative with lots of surprises in store. The only sure thing is that each game will end with the winner walking away with a wonderful prize! Prizes include golf outings on exclusive private courses, hockey game packages, ski weekends, casino overnights, fine wines and martini mixers, jewelry and elegant accessories.

The Dillon Gallery will be transformed into a comfortable martini bar while gaming takes place in the Bancroft Gallery. Guests are encouraged to dress for creative black tie, and everyone is guaranteed, a least for one night, to become a real player! Police presence bumped up at CMHS

October was busy month for the police department, Police Chief James Hussey said. Due to some events that happened at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School, police presence has been bumped up. The police department has now added more police presence in the schools during school hours and extra patrols on all school grounds 24 hours a day.

Wind and rainstorms were another event that kept the Cohasset Police Department busy in October. With two storms that occurred during the month additional officers were needed around the town for power outages, accidents and other miscellaneous calls due to these storms, Hussey said.

Last month Cohasset Police Department had very few arrests. There were two arrests for the month; one for operating under the influence of liquor, and one for breaking and entering, Police Chief James Hussey said.

The police department has now added more police presence in the schools during school hours and extra patrols on all school grounds 24 hours a day.

During the month of October the police department investigated 16 motor vehicle accidents; 4 of which resulted in personal injury. There were 62 motor vehicle citations issued totaling $655 in fines. Additionally, there were 33 parking tickets issued totaling $755 in fines, Hussey said.

Also in the month of October the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 1,093 calls for police services of those 136 were Emergency 911 calls.

In the month of October there were three reports of breaking and entering; two involving private residences, and one involving a motor vehicle. Also in October there were nine criminal complaints issued for the month, Hussey said.

How to Find Real Estate in the Boston Area for 30% to 50% Below Market Value

DISCOVER A HUGE SOURCE OF PROFITS IN YOUR VERY OWN AREA

"I can show you from firsthand experience, it can take just a couple hours of your time to position yourself to make tens of thousands of dollars in real estate." J.G. Banks, legendary probate investor

You can buy choice real estate — oftentimes the best this area has to offer, for 30 percent to 50 percent of its market value, sell it quickly for its full price, and make tens of thousands of dollars on just about every investment.

You can do this with single-family houses. Duplexes. Condominiums. Apartment buildings. Strip malls. Office buildings. Ranchland. Farms. All types of real estate.

The reason these bargain properties exist is that they are part of an estate that's in probate. Don't let the word "probate" scare you. There is no legal mumbo jumbo involved. When you acquire real estate that's part of someone's estate, you're simply helping beneficiaries settle the estate by purchasing its assets.

In just a few hours each week — less time than most folks spend watching TV during a single evening — you can learn to cash in with estates by following my easy-to-follow "estate mining system."

A single mom with three teenagers used my system to purchase the home she never thought she could afford. But when you get the property for half price, that's what can make the difference.

In every neighborhood, it's possible that one or two properties, and maybe more, are in probate. You can find profit-making opportunities close to home. Even areas of town you only dreamed of moving to can suddenly become affordable when the price of real estate drops in half.

To Make Big Money: BUY LOW and SELL HIGH

Rest assured, I'm not talking about rundown foreclosures, bankruptcies, or condemned properties like the slew of so-called "real estate gurus." Properties in probate can be beautiful homes with no mortgage or debt attached, making them some of the cleanest and easiest of all real estate to buy low and sell high quickly.

There is no "For Sale" sign out front, and few people know where to find these properties. But for those who do, it can be a land of riches and the fastest route I know to making big money in real estate.

Why Such Incredible Bargains Everywhere?

Not every beneficiary wants to keep the property they inherited. Perhaps the estate involves people who live out of state and they don't want to change their lives. If a house is willed to more than one person, it's likely the property must be sold to ensure everybody gets their share.

Plus, most beneficiaries want their money quickly. Fifty dollars today is a lot better than the promise of $100 sometime off in the future. Especially when attorney fees are eating away at that $100 value. So you have highly motivated sellers who appreciate you're helping them get on with their lives.

Believe It or Not, a 300% Gain Can Be "All in a Day's Work"

The potential to make significant money is huge. For example, if you purchased just one property at a 30 percent discount, and then resold the property for 100 percent of its market value, you'd make about $45,000 on a property worth $150,000. And with my system, it may not even take a full week's effort to do this.

But here's how you leverage your money to make gigantic profits... assuming you put down 10 or 15 percent to purchase the property, when you quickly sell for full market value, the gain on your initial down payment could easily be more than 300 percent.

Real estate has long been a proven path to making millions of dollars. Almost anyone can walk along this path, and I believe that no route has more moneymaking potential than the one you'll discover in my FREE workshop.

How to Get the Cash to Buy Properties

In addition to learning why it's possible to regularly purchase real estate for as little as 50 cents on the dollar, you'll also discover it's possible to get the cash to fund your offers to buy properties. That means, you do not have to have money in the bank.

My system is so comprehensive that the state of California accredited it. But like just about everything in life, it works best if you work at it.

A gentleman from Dallas purchased 18 probate properties his first year.

Another student bought a vacant lot for $40,000 less than comparable lots on the same street.

You won't find a book on "How to Make Money in Estates" at bookstores. My FREE workshop is the only way to start learning the secrets of "estate investing."

More than three trillion dollars worth of assets are in probate. It's a buyer's paradise. Yet there are very few real estate investors who know about it.

I guarantee that if you attend my FREE workshop and put yourself "in the know," you'll be positioned to be "in the money" as never before.

TOP FIVE REASONS TO ACQUIRE PROBATE PROPERTIES

1. BARGAIN-BASEMENT PRICES: The probate market is full of fabulous properties you can snap up for 30% to 50% below market value. Get the home of your dreams for your family, or resell quickly and be positioned to capture a lifetime of gains within days. It's the ultimate "Buy Low/Sell High" scenario.

2. HUGE INVENTORY: There are almost six million estates in probate, with assets worth trillions of dollars. Every type of real estate — from houses to beachside motels — are in probate. According to the Los Angeles Times, there are nearly 44 times more probate properties than properties in foreclosure.

3. BUYER'S MARKET: Purchasing property out of an estate assures you of a highly motivated seller. Most beneficiaries are anxious to sell the house (and other unwanted assets) so that they can pay off debts attached to the estate that must all be settled before the estate can be distributed.

4. ALL KINDS OF TREASURES: Historic architecture, classic cars, fine jewelry, antiques, art, toys, collectibles, and much more enter into probate every day. Millions of items. And they can sit there for years unless you rescue them.

5. IT'S A SECRET: Few people know how to find and purchase property from an estate. Even the beneficiaries don't know how to sell. That means, as a "first in" estate investor, you have little or no competition from other buyers — plus you're helping anxious sellers.

How to Buy Almost Anything for 30% to 50% Off

BUSINESSES. CLASSIC CARS. ANTIQUES. ART. COLLECTIBLES. TREASURES OF ALL KINDS.

There's a whole world of assets beyond houses. To start, there can be commercial real estate including industrial parks and offices. Plus all kinds of personal property — even businesses.

An enterprising young man turned his love for cars, and the knowledge he gained from the J.G. Banks workshop, into a career. The man purchased an auto shop that the beneficiaries had no interest in. He and his brother own and run the business, creating for themselves a potential lifetime of profits from one estate purchase. The flow of wealth didn't stop there. Our student also netted over $22,000 in profit on four cars. All four vehicles were acquired using the J.G. Banks system.

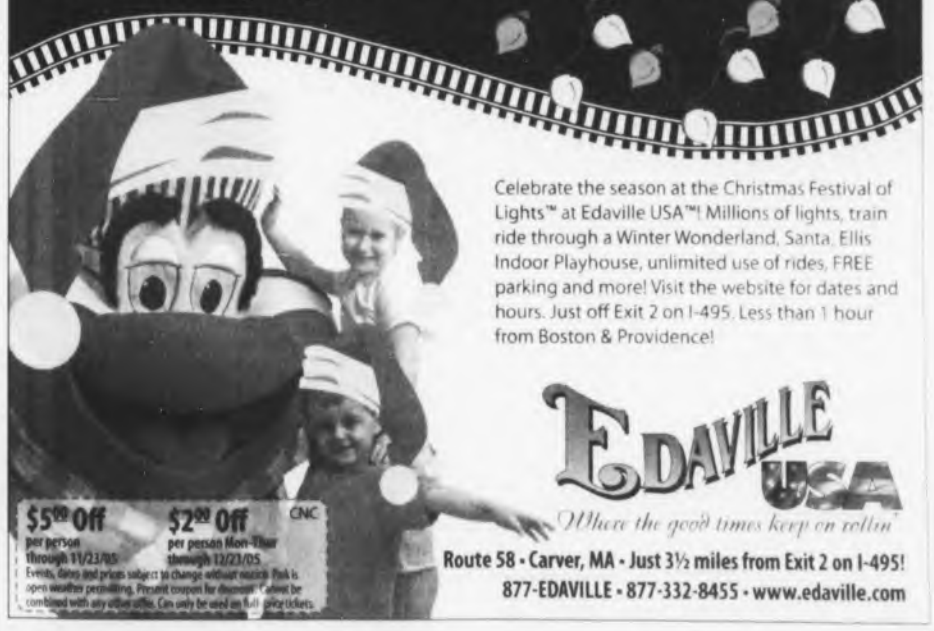
LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

GETTING AN EARFUL



One of the most common reasons that people with hearing impairments put forth for not getting a hearing instrument is that they do not want their hearing problem to be so noticeable to others. For many people, the thought of wearing a hearing instrument makes them feel so self-conscious that they would rather continue to hear less well than wearing a hearing instrument could make possible. Hearing-impaired individuals who raise this issue should know that the type of hearing instrument known as an in-the-canal (ITC) instrument is barely noticeable. The entire instrument, as its name suggests, resides in the outer bowl of the ear (concha) with the instrumentation contained in the case placed in the ear canal.

There are many options available today to help hearing impaired individuals of all ages live happier, more fulfilled lives. If you'd like to find out more, contact us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER at 781-337-1144. If you have a hearing instrument that you are not happy with, bring it to us and we'll be happy to check it out and discuss other options with you. Your complete satisfaction is our goal here at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, so all new hearing aids come with a free trial period. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health. We also have an office in Abington.

P.S. An in-the-canal hearing instrument is even smaller than an in-the-ear instrument, filling about half the volume of the concha and penetrating the ear canal a little deeper.

Under the sea

Grenada runs deep with shipwrecks, history, scenery

By NEIL COTE

GRENADA, West Indies -- When a small island chain's chief natural resource is nutmeg, you need to bring a lot of stuff in.

And when the goods typically arrive in diminutive, aging rustbucket freighters, well it figures that the regional seabed would be littered with shipwrecks. At last count there were nine off the coast here that were diveable and likely many others too deep to be explored.

Not good for mariners. But good for marine life and for those of us who delight in observing the undersea world with fins, mask and compressed air.

Case in point: the humble little Shakem, which on May 30, 2001 went from working freighter to unplanned artificial reef while steaming in from Trinidad with its holds overloaded with concrete that shifted, causing the ship to lilt in rough seas. The Shakem went down within easy sight of the mainland. And there it remains, on keel and upright in 110 feet of water with both anchor lines down and many sacks of very wet concrete still in place.

Accessible to divers with basic certification, the Shakem is now one of the must-see wrecks that make the waters of Grenada a diver's delight.

Soon after going under the waves, the Shakem attracted a slew of pelagic critters, and they've kept on coming. Octopus and moray eels have found haven in the deteriorating vessel's many nooks and crannies. Barracuda hover over the deck like stationary torpedoes.

More experienced divers can drop onto the stern, working their way through the cabin decks and into the lower rooms where a generator is still in place, although we're talking water so dark that a torch may be necessary for visibility.

Up until last March 5, the Shakem was the newest addition to the submerged wrecks, but then the freighter Hema I went down in 90 feet of water just a few miles off the south coast en route to Trinidad. Among its tenants is the ubiquitous nurse shark, a usually docile species that resembles a huge catfish. Rays, turtles, moray eels and lobsters also have taken up housekeeping at Hema I.

NO MORE HEAVY LIFTING: The crane of the Shakem remains in place more than four years after the small freighter capsized while hauling concrete from Trinidad to Grenada.

Then there's the so-called Titanic of the Carribean, the Bianca C, a 600-foot Italian cruise ship that sunk in October 1961 while being towed to port after an explosion and fire had disabled her engine room. Its final resting spot is between 90 and 140 feet beneath the waves; current and depth make her suitable for expert divers only (despite my protestations my guides would not let me dive there).

The fact that our hotel, the True Blue Bay Resort (www.truebluebay.com; rates from about $160) on Grenada's southwest side, lacks a real surf beach wasn't of much concern to those of us who know the best swimming is always underwater, and at True Blue's entrance is Aquanauts Grenada (www.aquanaut-grenada.com), a PADI 5-star diving operation.

Founded and run by some adventurous Europeans, Aquanauts operates three custom-designed dive boats and is most familiar with the reefs and wrecks that make up 30 nearby dive sites.

Among the other dives my companions and I did with Aquanauts was Shark Reef (named for the nurse sharks, most of which stayed away).

We also tried a night dive along another reef that led to the stern quarter of a cargo ship, where Caribbean lobsters were hanging out. If you've never dived at night, the act of descending with moonbeams shining through the water gives one the sensation of a most peaceful ascension to the hereafter. Go to the light . . .

TITANTIC OF THE CARIBBEAN: Currents and depth keep the Bianca C off-limits to all but expert divers, such as these two swimming over the cruise liner's funnel.

Much as we might have desired, we couldn't spend all our time underwater, if for no other reason than extended time on dry land is advisable between the last dive and flight home as a precautionary measure against the bends (doubly important here because the nearest recompression chamber is a helicopter's flight to Trinidad, and flying is never advisable for one vexed by excess nitrogen in the blood).

So my companions and I toured the mountainous, 133-square-mile island with historian and guide Kennedy Jawahir. He pointed out landmarks such as the St. George fort where the late leftist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop was executed by far-left extremists following the coup that preceded the U.S. invasion of 1983. Faded pro-U.S. graffiti still decorates walls.

We lunched at Morne Fendue, a hill-country inn and restaurant where Ronald Reagan visited after the U.S. invasion, and toured a nutmeg plantation and chocolate factory before a drive up the 2,700-foot-high Mount St. Catherine that dominates Grenada's geography.

Located on the very end of the Carribean's hurricane zone, Grenada usually is spared the megastorms. But last year's Hurricane Ivan did not play by the normal meteorological rules and made fast work of hundreds, maybe thousands, of shack homes, tore the roofs off even sturdier buildings, flooded waterfront hotels and flattened much of the rainforest's fauna.

From mountain roads through the rainforest, we saw the devastation, with acres upon acres of trees felled. "It'll take 30 years for this to grow back," Jawahir told us.

House and building repairs won't take that long, although the once-in-50 years storm that was Ivan didn't wait another 49 years before revisiting. Emily had the honors this past summer. Which, of course, has meant a lot more rebuilding to do. And a lot more lumber, steel and concrete to be imported. Some of it aboard ships that might make an insurer cringe. Potential dive sites of the future? No one's wishing for that, but . . .

Plans being nailed down

Joseph's Hardware plans warehouse

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Joseph's Hardware on Rte. 3A is looking to expand. However, its plans to construct a second 4,000 square foot combined storage warehouse and retail facility next door to its current location aren't big enough for the planning board. Owner Barry Joseph told him to come back Nov. 30 with an even larger building.

Members of the planning board said while Joseph's Hardware is a fixture in town and they are all frequent customers, one of the problems they see at the current site is the spillage of merchandise onto the grounds at the front of the current building.

"It has often been called the world's largest outdoor hardware store," quipped chairman Al Moore, adding "We hope (with the new storage facility) to limit what's outside." He said he did not want to see all the effort spent on constructing the new building which the hardware store will use to house much of its merchandise if it is not large enough to accommodate everything and tractors are still parked outside. "You have a very viable business and we'd like to see it do well."

Joseph's Hardware owner Barry Joseph said he completely agrees with the planning board. He said the merchandise he sells is expensive, and the less it can be exposed to the elements, the better. "Believe it or not, bringing that stuff out every day isn't a fun task," he added.

Engineer John Cavanaro designed the proposed building and said there are some issues to take into consideration in terms of expanding. The lot is near wetlands and the Bound Brook.

Town looks at reverse 9-1-1 phone system

By Samantha Brown

In the event of an emergency it is vital to be prepared, officials say. When disaster strikes on a large scale, there must be a plan in place, supplies to be handed out, and communication strategies ready to ensure the masses are safe and efforts are coordinated.

To help make that goal a reality, an article on the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting Warrant will ask the town to allocate the funds necessary to ensure the local Office of Emergency Management has the tools it needs to function properly during a time of crisis.

Deputy Director of Emergency Management Glenn Pratt explained one of the most critical elements of any emergency situation is communication. To help keep those lines of communication open, $30,000 has been included in the article which would be allocated to purchase a "Reverse 9-1-1" calling system.

Reverse 9-1-1 systems allow towns to send out blanket telephone messages to every household in the community. A database is set up to hold every street address, household names, and telephone number, and depending on the company offering the reverse 9-1-1 service, messages can be sent by either a computer

Traffic study of busy Route 3A corridor could be down the road

Highway's growth cited as the reason

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"I'm not really in favor of putting lights everywhere."
— Selectman Gary Vanderweil

With all the major changes planned for Rte. 3A in the near future, selectmen think a traffic study is in order.

Selectman Michael Sullivan told the board Tuesday — with the train station coming soon at the Hingham end of 3A, and perhaps the proposed Avalon 200-unit housing project near the Sohier Street intersection — those two changes alone will increase travel enough to greatly change the current traffic patterns. He said the town would be smart to hire a traffic consultant to study the length of the road from the Scituate border all the way to the Hingham border, to get a better idea of what the town should expect.

Although MassHighway has denied the town's request to install a light at the station, the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, which is building the Greenbush line, says it would install a light with MassHighway approval. MassHighway says a light is not warranted at the station, but the town has taken the position that a traffic light is a must to help control the increase in traffic the station will bring. The town points out a majority of the train's riders will be coming from Cohasset which is south of the station, and requires making a left-hand turn out of the parking lot.

A light either at the station itself or at the King Street intersection, or better yet, both, would help make driving that much safer on Rte. 3A. Currently, without the additional traffic of the station or Avalon, making a left-hand turn onto Rte. 3A from King and Sohier streets, as well as from any of the shops located between them, is very risky.

"We need some data to support (the position we've taken on the light) and we need to know what traffic patterns to expect. A lot of that work already exists, it's just a matter of having firm pull it all together," Sullivan said, adding he believes a traffic study has already been conducted for the Stop and Shop intersection which has a light.

However, selectman Gary Vanderweil said regardless of the studies, there is no way to actually know what the reality of the situation will be until it happens, and perhaps the town should just wait it out.

But Sullivan said there is too much in the pipeline to wait. "I think we would be wise to have the information available. To have our own data will be advantageous," he said.

In addition to the train station and Avalon development, a new economic development committee has been started to look at ways the town can boost its commercial tax base and generate more revenue for the town. The group is concentrating on both Rte. 3A and the downtown area in terms of either expanding businesses which already exist, or finding ways to contact land owners to potentially develop. If 3A becomes the haven for business the town needs to generate more funds, traffic will be further impacted.

Selectman Chairman Fred

Partial Beechwood Street sidewalk is afoot

Town Meeting to have final say

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"This has been on the burner for quite a while. We're trying to find a way to make it happen."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

For many years, residents have been looking for some way to install a sidewalk on Beechwood Street. This year's Special Town Meeting, scheduled for Dec. 5 may provide an opportunity.

Voters will be given the chance to decide whether they would like to see roughly $100,000 borrowed for the purpose of constructing a new sidewalk on Beechwood Street from South Main Street, roughly to its intersection with Norman Todd Road. The article was put on the Warrant by the selectmen at the request of a group of citizens.

Tim O'Brien of Talarico Lane and Bill Fusco of Norman Todd Road came before selectmen last week to plead their case for a recommendation. They said for many years, they have repeatedly come before various boards of selectmen asking the sidewalk be installed, but have been told while it is a good idea, there is no money available for the project. The men said every year that passes, the project becomes more expensive.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he realizes the importance the sidewalk project has for the town's residents and said it is about time it moves forward. "This has been on the burner for quite a while. We're trying to find a way to make it happen," he said.

In a memo sent to Griffin by O'Brien prior to the meeting, he states design work for the project was funded in the amount of $15,000 by Town Meeting three years ago and John Cavanaro Consulting has already completed that work. Griffin told selectmen when Cavanaro finished the design work in 2003, the estimated construction cost was $135,000 to install a sidewalk from the South Main Street end of Beechwood Street down Norman Todd Road, which turns back into Beechwood Street, all the way to Rte 3A. From South Main Street, Beechwood Street veers to the right at Norman Todd Park.

Griffin went on to say that because the project has been pushed back, the estimate is now closer to $155,000. He said installing a new sidewalk under a reduced scope, which would mean only covering the portion of the road from the South Main Street end of Beechwood Street to the intersection with Norman Todd Road, would bring the cost down to roughly $76,000. The men were amenable to the reduction in scope, saying at this point, at least starting the project would be a step in the right direction.

With the Greenbush railroad crossing now installed on Beechwood Street, the men say it is extremely important to have a stretch of sidewalk installed on the end of Beechwood Street closest to South Main Street, which is where the crossing is located. The MBTA does not have plans to install sidewalks on either side of the crossing, but residents feel that is the most dangerous length of road.

"The straightaway where the railroad crossing is, is the worst," said O'Brien, adding now that the crossing at Beechwood is a reality and the median barriers are in place, it is easy to see cars will not be able to cross the center line to avoid pedestrians who are on the side of the road and there should be a safe place for people to walk.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer asked whether the board could tell the MBTA it would like to use some of the funds it received from the sale of the right-of-way to construct a sidewalk.

"At least where the crossing is. It makes no sense to have nothing at the railroad tracks," he said.

However, Griffin said he would feel more comfortable if the money was borrowed, as it will provide for more flexibility. Griffin said he would like to borrow $100,000. "So there is no question we can do it. If we don't need it, we don't have to use it," he said.

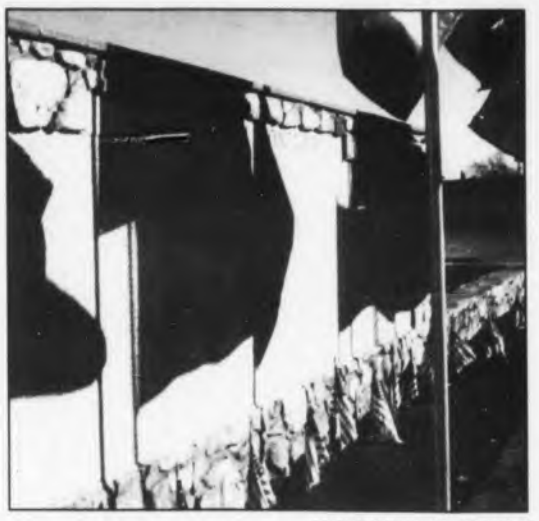
Selectman Gary Vanderweil said however, the town is in a tough financial situation, so much so that it did not pass last year's proposed Prop. 2-1/2 override which would have raised taxes. "I don't think this is the time to do optional projects," he said.

However, O'Brien did not agree with Vanderweil's view. "How can you call it optional? I can't walk down the road outside my house. You can't send your kids down the street in their own neighborhood (on Beechwood Street)."

The train is becoming a reality in town and it is evident there will be changes on the major thoroughfares, including Beechwood, Pond, Sohier, and King streets. Beechwood is the first crossing to be installed and completed by the MBTA. The King Street crossing is currently under construction. Griffin said residents feel very strongly about the sidewalk and it has been in the pipeline for a while, and it is time the town steps up its efforts to make it a reality.

But Vanderweil said in his opinion, the question is one of fiscal discipline. "At some point you have to draw the line" on what can be spent, he said.

Selectman chairman Fred Koed said the issue has been ongoing for years and frustration has continually built up, and it is time for the town to do something. Griffin added if the town gives its authority to spend, "We'll try to find a way to not use as much of that authority as possible."



With Griffin's recommendation, Vanderweil agreed to support the article and the board recommended it unanimously.

North Main Street residents donate funds for new trees

Rob and Judy Kasameyer, 103 North Main St., have generously come forward and donated $1,130 to cover the cost of replacing the two trees that were poisoned at the intersection of North Main Street and Joy Place. In a letter sent to the board of selectmen Nov. 5, the couple states, "We regret what happened to the Joy Place trees. Whoever did this went to far. Please accept this contribution to the restoration of the island."

The two trees — both pin oaks — were newly planted in the spring of 2004. Tree Warden Andrew Swanson said this spring, both began showing signs of herbicide poisoning, as they had began growing mutated foliage. Tests conducted by the state indicated there were high levels of the chemical glyphosate, a chemical found in Roundup, a powerful household weed killer, throughout the soil. The department of public works purchased two new pin oak trees to replace the poisoned trees — one for $570 and another for $560 — which were planted the first week of November.

Joseph's Hardware hammers out expansion plans which mean there are buffer issues on site. However, he said some expansion will be possible, most likely in the direction of the existing hardware store.

The building has been designed to fit in with the other new buildings in the area such as Pilgrim Cooperative Bank and King Jewelers. It has been drawn with a pitched roof and clapboards, although after discussion with the planning board, changes such as the addition of a farmer's porch are likely to take place. Joseph said that had been his original thought, but did not know if it would be acceptable to the board.

However, member Mike Westcott said he loved the idea both aesthetically and because, "It'll give you some extra space to have covered storage."

Joseph is the only person who could have developed the site. While the current hardware store and the abutting piece of property are separately owned, they are both under the umbrella of the same land trust. The parcel to be built on does not have the capacity to handle any wastewater, but the current hardware store has an on-site system which was over-designed, meaning it has excess capacity. Both the board of health and Department of Environmental Protection have given the OK for the project, to tie-in to the system which currently exists due to its partial joint-ownership. Without the partnership, nothing could be built on the land.

Elsa Miller of the economic growth and development committee attended the meeting and said she sees this project as a perfect compliment to what her committee is trying to achieve. "We are trying to maximize growth along 3A," she said, adding her committee had looked into the development possibilities for the land and realized its predicament. She said the committee was thrilled to hear of Joseph's plan, because it would otherwise remain a barren piece of property in a commercially viable area of town. "This will bring in good revenue to the town," she said, adding the larger the building, the better the tax profits for the town.

Joseph will come back before the planning board Nov. 30 with new plans for a larger building. The board will take a closer look at curb cuts, greenspace on the property, as well as drainage and parking.

"I know I would be willing to waive parking spaces to give you a big enough building to get the job done. You don't need extra spaces for a warehouse," said member Bob Sturdy.

Atlantica has the Thanksgiving spirit

The staff of Atlantica and the Cohasset Harbor Inn will participate in two events Nov. 21 and 22 that will enable others to have a special holiday. Atlantica has been donating its time and materials for both events for the past four years.

Monday, Nov. 21, Atlantica will support "Pie in the Sky," an annual Thanksgiving pie sale to benefit Community Servings, a Roxbury-based food shelter. The staff of Atlantica will gather for this "bake off," where the goal is to make and bake 50 pies. The proceeds from pie sales will go to the Community Servings charity organization. Each pie sold will allow a family of four to sit down and share a Thanksgiving dinner, a meal they would not otherwise have. All staff and pie ingredients will be donated for the cause.

Tuesday, Nov. 22 Atlantica will open its doors to serve a special pre-Thanksgiving luncheon for Cohasset Elder Affairs. Approximately 75 to 100 seniors have been invited to join the festivities. Many of the guests once worked at the restaurant, back when it was known as the famous Hugo's. All food and use of the facility will be donated by Atlantica for the luncheon.

Calling everyone in town in an emergency is in the pipeline generated caller or a pre-recorded voice message from an official in town.

Currently, the school department is using the Connect-ED telephone system, which has proved to be very valuable in getting messages out to parents, but the town does not have such a service at its disposal.

"Every one of our agencies has a time when they need to mass notify."

— Glenn Pratt, emergency management deputy director

"Every one of our agencies has a time when they need to mass notify," said Pratt, whether it be the board of health, police or fire departments, water department, or department of public works. With a reverse 9-1-1 system in place, every household in town can simultaneously be notified of any emergency situations that comes up.

Pratt said there are many different companies that provide the reverse 9-1-1 service, and the town would have to work with vendors to see which one fits the town's needs the best. He said he had contacted the Connect-Ed company to see if it had any plans to branch out into the municipal sector, but the company feels it has a very strong niche and does not plan to begin offering the service to towns any time soon.

"This would be for everyone," Pratt said of the new system that will be purchased, explaining once a company is chosen and the technology is in place, the town and schools would both have the new reverse 9-1-1 service at its disposal, meaning a contract with Connect-ED would no longer be necessary.

Pratt said there would likely be an ongoing maintenance fee after the purchase of the system is made, to ensure the system is always working properly, but said with safety, there can never be too many precautions. The fee would be included in the town's budget going forward.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he has seen demonstrations of various reverse 9-1-1 the systems in the past and said they are "fabulous." He said he has seen systems where emergency management agencies have the ability to bring up a map of the town on the computer screen, and with the click of a mouse, can draw a circle on a map of the town, and it can recognize the addresses of the homes included in the circle, find them in the database, and send telephone messages only to those homes. Griffin said that kind of a feature can be a very useful tool in cases such as potential flooding, as only those homes which are in danger would need to receive the notification. "This is the type of purchase that benefits a lot of different sectors of the community," he said.

In addition to the funding for the reverse 9-1-1 system, there is an additional $5,000 request to help purchase more supplies for the town's emergency shelters. While Pratt said the town has some emergency supplies left over from the Civil Defense days of the 1960s, in this new era of homeland security, there are many items which are a must in order for the town to be prepared.

"There's a big void in the equipment we have available to our emergency shelters," said Pratt, explaining that depending on the severity of the emergency, evacuees in town either seek shelter at the Second Congregational Church or the middle-high school.

Pratt said if approved, the money would be used to help fill out Cohasset's supply list, and part of the money would be earmarked for the purchase of new blankets and cots, to ensure evacuees would have a warm place to sleep. The remainder of the funds would be used to purchase other necessary emergency supplies.

The board of selectmen unanimously recommended the article.

Koed said he and planning board member Peter Pratt have been attending meetings about the traffic problem on Rte. 3A at the state level and said he has heard there are grant monies available for traffic studies which the town could apply for. He said the town should look at that first before it spends any town funds.

Selectman Ralph Domitzer said he was very supportive of the town pursuing obtaining a traffic study one way or another. He said the intersections at King Street, Sohier Street and at the station are definitely areas of concern.

Sullivan said the study should include the possibility of having lights at all three troubled areas, perhaps sequenced with the light at Stop and Shop.

But Vanderweil wasn't that keen on a host of traffic signals. "I'm not really in favor of putting lights everywhere," said Vanderweil.

However, Sullivan pointed out as traffic increases, it is going to get more and more difficult to make a left-hand turn onto 3A, and safety of drivers is a major concern.

"You'll almost have to go to North Scituate and go around," joked Koed.

The board will continue to look into the feasibility of conducting a traffic study for the Rte. 3A corridor.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

GIVING THANKS

As we get ready to head into Thanksgiving week, it is time for us all to reflect on our lives and really think about all that we have to be thankful for. Family and friends top the list along with good health and a wonderful community here on the South Shore for me. I hope that everyone enjoys Thanksgiving and if you are traveling, stay safe and plan ahead. Is it really almost the end of November?

'HOLIDAY SPARKLE'

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will meet Tuesday, Nov. 22 in Bates Hall at the Second Congregational Church. Following the 9:30 am business meeting and discussion of the upcoming House Tour, club members will be inspired by "Holiday Sparkle". Elaine DiGiovanni and Linda Udell, two nationally accredited and award-winning flower show judges, will demonstrate how to arrange seasonal greens and add holiday sparkle to every room, beginning with the front door. Tickets to the Dec. 1 House Tour "The Art of Christmas" will be available for $20 and coffee will be served at 9 am.

SOCCER STAR

Hats off to Greg O'Connell on being named to the New England Small Conference Athletic Conference for soccer. Greg, who is a mid-fielder at Tufts , notched three goals and one assist for seven points in his second season at the university. Greg is a graduate of Belmon Hill. Great playing Greg.

NEW GRANDSON

There is joy on Elm Street over the arrival of a new baby! Ralph Blaise Coley was born to Travis and Christine Coley of Haddonfield, N.J. Ralph and Susi Coley are the proud grandparents of their third grandson.

Come to Cohasset soon for some extra hugs, Ralph!

SEMESTER IN NEW ZEALAND

Thomas Anderson is studying away in New Zealand for the Fall 2005 semester. A junior at Connecticut College, Tom is one of many students to take advantage of the wealth of study away options offered each year by the college. Tom is a 2003 graduate of Cohasset High School and is the son of T. Nicholas and Kathleen Anderson of Cohasset. This experience is fantastic and we hope to hear how it goes.

GO DYNAMOS!

Peter Oswald, son of Art and Millie Oswald, and his U-16 Dynamos ice hockey team are heading to the USA Nationals AAA Tier I championship in Rochester, N.Y. next spring to represent the state of Massachusetts. Peter and his team won the state championship recently in Foxboro. Peter is thrilled to be making his second appearance within the past three years. Go Dynamos!

PROGRAM OPENINGS

There are still a few openings in the Holiday Session of children's programming with the Cohasset Recreation Department. Sports programs, Holiday Arts and Crafts, Gingerbread Workshops and more are available. For more information, call 781-383-4109 or 781-383-2211 or go to www.onecreativeplace.net.

UNICORN SINGERS

Tickets are available at the Parish House on North Main Street for the First Parish Christmas Concert of the Unicorn Singers with Margo Euler to be held Dec. 11 at 4 p.m. The Unicorn Singers will transport you to Mexico this year to celebrate 'Fiesta Navidad' with carols and customs from south of the border.

The well-loved annual visit of this choral group — its 27th consecutive holiday concert at First Parish — features 'La Fiesta de la Posada' by Dave Brubeck, a cantata which tells the familiar Christmas story; it will be exuberantly accompanied by a Mariachi Band from Weymouth (professionals and students), organized by teacher and marimba player John Duff. A children's chorus from Hingham's Congregational Church, led by Unicorn Singer Ed Bartholomew, will also join the celebration; Amy Martin of First Parish will sing the role of Mary.

The concert will dramatize the Posada custom (the traditional petition for lodging as the time of Mary's confinement draws near), and carols for the audience to sing will have a decidedly Latin feel, accompanied by mariachi trumpets, guitar, and marimba! The celebration will end with the traditional piñata for the children. The performance at First Parish in Cohasset is Sunday, Dec. 11 at 4 p.m. Tickets are $15 ($10 students) and can be purchased at First Parish by calling 781 383-1100, and at the door.

THE EYES HAVE IT!

RUSTY SKIPPERS

The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset's own adult concert band, will be performing its Annual Holiday Pops Concert at First Parish Church on Saturday, Dec. 3 at noon. The Skippers have been preparing a variety of new holiday selections throughout the fall. Pieces include Sleigh Ride (made famous by the Boston Pops), Jingle Bell Rock and many other familiar tunes and carols in all styles. The concert is free and appropriate for all ages. A free will offering for the Cohasset Food Pantry will be taken.

JINGLE BELL WALK

The South Shore Community Center invites everyone to the 11th Jingle Bell Walk held on Friday, Nov. 25. Come to Cohasset Harbor (2 p.m.) and watch Santa and Mrs. Claus and their many elf assistants arrive by boat. Santa passes out jingle bells and in a horse drawn wagon make their way to the Community Center for hot cocoa, punch and cookies. Enjoy the community sing-along of traditional holiday favorites sung by Mrs. Claus & Santa with Frosty, Rudolph and the merry Elves.

There will be open bowling, face painting a turkey trot and hayrides on the Common. Rusty Skippers Band will entertain and at the end of the day the Christmas tree is lighted on the Common. This day is sure to put you in the Holiday Spirit.

That is all for this week. Next week, due to an early deadline – have your news to me no later than Monday at 5p.m.

Cartoonist hopes Art Center workshop will be a draw

Day-long class this Saturday

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

This is perhaps the first time all of the most essential aspects of professional cartooning have been offered in one comprehensive workshop, at least in a South Shore-based event.

Such is the promise of Introduction to Illustrating Professional Cartoons, a day-long, seven-hour workshop scheduled for this Saturday at the South Shore Art Center. Hosted and instructed by John Zaccone, a professional artist and illustrator from Wakefield, the workshop is an adult-oriented forum open to aspiring cartoonists age 17 and older and might even present students with a unique sort of gateway into the profession, offering insightful, wide-ranging discussions and demonstrations on everything from creative techniques to business contracts.

Zaccone will touch upon the three major cartoon formats — the political cartoon, the single panel cartoon, and the comic strip. But in a certain significant sense, he won't do it alone. As students explore the process of creating a professional cartoon — from developing an idea to illustrating a finished piece — they will have the opportunity to examine original cartoons from not only Zaccone's own professional-level though so far unpublished collection, but also by New Yorker cartoonists Leo Cullum and Charles Barsotti, Australian syndicated editorial cartoonist Vince O'Farrell, and strip cartoonist Peter Murphy (formerly with King Syndicates).

"I'm hoping to inspire the students with examples from professional syndicated cartoonists whose work will demonstrate the three formats we'll be covering," Zaccone said about his cartooning class, which is a newly launched and possibly ongoing venture for the artist and illustrator.

"Having original illustrations on hand provides students with an invaluable 'peak behind the curtains.' Reproductions like those that appear in print or publication are unable to convey the initial size, personality, technique, hand work, sketching and retouching of an original," he says.

The instructor will also have a full display of production materials — such as micron pens (ideal for shading), duo shade paper (great for drawing cross-hatching as well as individual lines), markers and inkwash — to demonstrate what he calls "the three or four major ways to create cartoons" that also include collages and computer generated images.

All of this is to support one of Zaccone's main objectives for the class, to convey the overall flexibility and multi-faceted nature of cartooning

"I'd like to let the students know that there are no fixed rules, that you can mix and match any way you like," he says. "Often when you start out in the visual arts, you feel trapped within a certain creative style or technique. I want to show the students that you can build from any traditional foundation, and then create your own style in any number of ways."

Zaccone, 32, studied computer animation at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and graduated with a bachelor's in fine arts in 1999. He began his career freelancing with the formerly Boston-based Olive Jar Studios, as an Ink and Paint/Compositor, creating television shows and commercials.

In 2002, Zaccone was hired as a writer, animation consultant, and associate producer on the award-winning children's animated film The Easter Egg Adventure (Released February 2005). Currently, along with his cartooning class startup endeavor, he's freelancing as an illustrator/writer/designer on several other projects, as well as developing his own cartoon book.

The cartooning class will also spend ample time investigating the business side of the profession, including contract basics and pitfalls.

"What I think most people don't realize is just how much personal time, work, planning and effort goes into being a cartoonist," Zaccone says. "It might look effortless, but most cartoonists have to be not only the artist and writer, but also their own marketing department, public relations department and advertising agency as well as the person who writes and reviews the contracts.

"People outside of the medium might not realize what kind of a full-time effort cartooning really is."

Registration tuition for Illustrating Professional Cartoons is $115 ($85 for members of the SSAC). To register call 781-383-2787 or for more information visit www.ssac.org

John Zaccone, an artist and illustrator, will share insights into the world of cartoons Saturday at the South Shore Art Center.

FUR COAT RAFFLE

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, right, draws the lucky winner of a brown wool, gabardine coat with a mink collar valued at $2,500 Sunday during the Sea Chest Consignment Shop's fur trunk show. Andi Merrill, manager of the shop is all smiles as she holds the hatbox for the senator. Hedlund then called the winner Helen Hayes of Scituate whose son gave her message and she soon arrived to pick up her new coat. Tickets for the raffle were free. Proceeds from sales at the shop benefit Road to Responsibility, a non-profit whose mission is to provide training and employment opportunities for people with disabilities.

Village Fair is fun for one and all!

The Village Fair sponsored by the churches on Cohasset Common will take place on Saturday, Dec. 3 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. On Cohasset Common and in Saint Stephen's, First Parish and Second Congregational Churches fair-goers will discover gifts, crafts, homemade soup and chowder, a wide array of books in excellent condition, baked goods, a secret room for children, even Santa will be on the Common to hear the wondrous wishes of boys and girls.

"The Fair brings us all together," says Barbara Cook, a participant for many years. Proceeds from the Fair go to many different charitable causes.

The Book Sale at Saint Stephen's benefits scholarships for needy children to the Barbara C. Harris summer camp. Hundreds of fair-goers browse books of every description finding gifts for others of just something to pass a few quiet hours themselves.

Elizabeth Durant likes the sale because "it helps us slow down and take time to read during such a busy holiday season."

Generous donations from the community make this sale better each year! Alongside the book sale is the Country Store with a Hostess Gifts section along with baked goods and home-made candy. And what book sale would be without a Café to buy coffee, tea, soup and lunch and look over what great reads each one will be taking home? You can find it all upstairs at Saint Stephen's.

On the first floor of Saint Stephen's parish house, the Appalachia Service Project will hold its famous secret room for children. Children pick out and purchase gifts and are helped to wrap them by ASP volunteers so they can be kept "secret" until Christmas. Each year Cohasset sends nearly 150 teenagers to interact with people and rebuild homes in Appalachia.

Down the hill at Second Congregational Church Bates Hall is turned into a holiday boutique filled with beautiful handcrafted holiday gifts and decorations. There is a Kids' Craft Corner where children can make an ornament of their own. A Chowder Bar serves the best Clam Chowder, and each hour fresh lobster and filet mignon are raffled off hourly to "surf 'n turf" winners.

Across the Cohasset Common in the Parish House of First Parish there awaits treasures such as jewelry, decorative objects, small furniture pieces, toys and more in an unusual "Estate-ish" Sale. At the Swedish Bake Shop shoppers can find cinnamon buns and baked goods served with coffee, juice and tea. The Rusty Skippers concert band will perform a holiday pops concert in First Parish Church at noon. Tickets will also be on sale for the Christmas Concert of the Unicorn Singers on December 11 at 4 p.m.

Santa Claus will make a guest appearance on Cohasset Common from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Children can visit with Santa, and parents can purchase photos in support of the Appalachia Service Project. Finally, The South Shore Choral Arts Society will hold their Christmas Concert the day following the fair, Sunday, Dec. 4 at 4 p.m. It is a fitting way to conclude this remarkable town festival. All are welcome and encouraged to come.

First Parish prepares for Christmas Fair

First Parish Unitarian Universalist is busy again preparing for their part in this year's Christmas Fair on the Common, Dec. 3. Their fabulous Estate(ish) Sale and Swedish Bake Shop are found in the Parish House across from Cohasset Common. The Rusty Skippers Band plays its Holiday Concert at noon, and tickets will be on sale for the Annual Christmas Concert by the Unicorn Singers held on Dec. 11.

You might not have won the lottery this month, but you could hit the jackpot at First Parish's "Estateish" Sale. Come to Trueblood Hall in the Parish House from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and find hidden treasures. Jewelry, books, decorative objects, small furniture pieces, toys and more await the keen-eyed hunter.

Those wishing to contribute their no-longer needed treasures to the sale may bring them to the Parish House beginning Monday, Nov. 28, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. All items should be labeled with the donor's name. Please, no computers or stuffed animals.

Accompanying this sale is the Swedish Bake Shop with its cinnamon buns and baked goodies served with coffee, tea and juice. The Swedish Bake Shop has been part of the Village Fair since 1993 when Sine Pounder and Ellyn Packard brought their cinnamon buns, cardamom breads and Swedish holiday delights into First Parish's kitchen.

The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset's own adult concert band, will be performing their Annual Holiday Pops Concert at First Parish Church Saturday, Dec. 3, at noon. The Skippers have been preparing a variety of new holiday selections throughout the fall. Pieces include "Sleigh Ride" (made famous by the Boston Pops), "Jingle Bell Rock" and many other familiar tunes and carols in all styles. The concert is free and appropriate for all ages. A free will offering for the Cohasset Food Pantry will be taken.

It's all 'In the Game at Black Tie Bingo

Creative martinis of all kinds add to the festivities of the South Shore Art Center's Black Tie Bingo fund-raiser. The Dillon Gallery's Mahogany Martini Bar will offer samples of flavored martinis in a cozy bistro setting where scrumptious offerings will include a Martini Whipped Potato Bar serving up mashed potatoes in stemmed glassware to be sprinkled with a selection of tempting toppings.

The games begin Saturday, Nov. 19, at 7:30 p.m. amidst the "In the Game" juried art exhibition at Cohasset's South Shore Art Center. A "teaser" game will get everyone started and during the course of the evening, five games will be played, each culminating with a fabulous prize package. Fitting for an art center event, the games will be creative with lots of surprises in store. Prizes encourage everyone to get out and play and include golf outings on private courses, tickets to Boston pro sports, ski weekends, casino gaming overnights, boat rentals, his and hers night-on-the-town packages with theater tickets, dinners, spa days and accommodations.

Guests are encouraged to dress for creative black tie, and everyone is guaranteed, at least for one night, to become a real player. Tickets are $85 for members of the SSAC, $95 nonmembers. For more information visit www.ssac.org or to reserve a ticket call 781-383-2787.

Howie Altholtz is back on stage with new rock band

By Matthew S. Robinson
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

It is said that the true greats always reach back to help those behind them. And that is just what happened when local legend Howie Altholtz assembled his latest musical incarnation for the Anthem Entertainment (anthemevents.com) Battle of the Bands.

Opening with his old original "The System," Altholtz looked every part the rocker in his leather and denim. As the band (drummer Angelo Caputo, bassist Fernando Belotiti, and guitarist Ryan Fardy) launched into a rawk-ous rendition of The Monkees' "Steppin' Stone," Altholtz lost the leather to reveal some homemade tattoos and even MORE Rock 'tude, prowling the small stage like a caged Jagger while his support team offered pockety rhythms and blistering solos.

During such hot originals as the ripping "Scars of Love" and the more flowing "Beauty Up the River," Fardy left the main stage to take his band's case to the voters, using everything from a well-exercised whammy bar to his teeth to a strippers pole(!) to grind his axe. By the time the band reconvened for a tempo-changing take on "Ruby Tuesday," Altholtz had changed outfits, but not attitude — going so far as to dedicate the old chestnut to a few ladies in the audience!

And as he and the boys reached for every last note, the friendly crowd showed their appreciation with whoops and whistles, sending the elder statesman of the Boston music scene off on his latest adventure with plenty of wind in his sails.

Matt Robinson is a freelance journalist from Boston who has contributed to Billboard, Forbes, Rolling Stone, and over 100 other publications. He can be reached at matthewsrobinson@mac.com

Library looks to open new chapter with non-profit trust

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Board of Library Trustees would like to begin a new non-profit branch dedicated to raising and managing the funds in the library's $900,000 endowment, and will ask for Town Meeting approval Dec. 5.

"This would provide us with a vehicle to raise more money."
— Sheila Evans, library trustee

Library Trustees Sheila Evans and Sarah Pease came before selectmen Nov. 10 to provide an overview of the Warrant article that will make their new venture possible. They explained the non-profit company would be known as the Cohasset Library Trust, Inc., and would have a board of directors, to be appointed by a majority vote of the Trustees. Its purpose would be to help supplement and increase library services to the community.

Evans said many other libraries in the state are taking similar actions in their towns, based on the encouragement of the State Board of Library Commissioners. By beginning non-profit foundations, communities report greater success raising funds and receiving endowments. With a non-profit branch of the library, donations can be accepted by the library itself, where currently, gift checks are made out to the town.

"This would provide us with a vehicle to raise more money," said Evans.

Evans said the library has been extremely fortunate to have experienced the generosity it has. She said its $900,000 endowment has been invested well, which has partially been due to luck. The Library Trustees are responsible for making the investment decisions for its money, "and we've been very lucky to have enough people with experience in managing money," involved on the board, she said. However, with the changes, Evans said "the intent is to take the luck out of it and formalize a way to invest."

While Director of Finance Michael Buckley is currently in charge carrying out the investment transactions on behalf of the Trustees, it dictates the action he takes. Buckley will continue to oversee the investments of the non-profit entity when it is established.

As a non-profit, the Cohasset Library Trust, Inc., will be required to file a complete financial report with the Secretary of State's office, which will be available for anyone in town to look up.

It will not in any way conflict with the more than 30-year-old Friends of the Cohasset Library non-profit organization, Evans said. The Friends was formed to enrich the library by funding projects beyond the scope of the library's appropriated budget.

Traditionally, the Friends have funded the library's museum pass program and the children's program. The Friends have also funded computer technology purchases and commissioned and restored art works. It has also hosted the library's artist receptions, organized art auctions and book sales, and held the annual summer fete for library staff and volunteers. Friends also deliver library materials to the homebound as part of the library's outreach program.

The article to form the new Cohasset Library Trust, Inc., will be a Home Rule Petition, which means it will take a formal Town Meeting vote as well as an act of the Legislature to make it binding. The board voted unanimously to recommend the article.

The Cohasset Historical Society unveiled its latest exhibit, "From the Battleground, 1918-1919: The Journals of Margaret Hall," only one week ago, but it has been met with such enthusiasm, that the society has agreed to extend its run.

The exhibit, features artifacts Hall, a North Cohasset resident, brought back from World War I, as well as memoirs from her diary and many photographs she took of a war-torn Europe. Hall was a volunteer in the Red Cross during the last year of the war when battles were slowing down, and therefore had time to tour the region and thoroughly document what she say. Some of the items on display include a German army helmet and shell casings.

The exhibit, features artifacts Margaret Hall brought back from World War I, as well as memoirs from her diary and many photographs she took of a war-torn Europe.

The exhibit will be on display Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. until Dec. 15 at historical society headquarters, located in the Paul Pratt Memorial Building, 106 South Main St.

Spofford, Sullivan aren't sweet on Peppermint Brook article

Say town land could be needed

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Everyone can agree Cohasset's drinking water supply is one of its most important natural resources. To that end, a citizens' petition is included on the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting Warrant, which will give voters the chance to decide whether they would like to see a conservation restriction placed on a town-owned parcel of land on Sohier Street, which would help protect Peppermint Brook — a main tributary to Lily Pond.

Until recently, the land was part of the deal to build senior housing on the Cook Estate. The town's roughly 8.7 acres of land and the roughly 22 acres of Cook land were marketed to developers together, which helped provide more options for development. But when it was determined the Cook project must be scaled back due to wastewater disposal issues, a new bid proposal was sent out to developers and the town's property was taken out of the mix.

However, it has since been proposed the town work on a separate project to build affordable rental senior housing on that town-owned parcel; the proposed project may or may not be tied to whatever is developed on the Cook Estate.

In other words, nothing is currently set in stone regarding the land's fate.

Proponent Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road, presented the article to selectmen Thursday, Nov. 10 and said she has been working for the past few years to find a way to retain the town's parcel as open space, and in turn, provide a solid buffer for the abutting Peppermint Brook. She said Town Meeting has voted more than once to allow the water commission to purchase land which abuts the town's drinking water supply, and this is a case where the town already owns the land and would not have to pay money to use it as protection.

Quigley pointed out the town land is home to many ledge outcroppings which would make development difficult, as well as a non-certified vernal pool and wetlands. She said the land is also the site of a nature trail used by the Osgood and Deer Hill schools. All tolled, she said the land is a very valuable piece of property from an environmental standpoint.

The area surrounding the town's parcel has been fairly heavily developed and Quigley said the impact that is having on wildlife is evident. She said some homes on Red Fox Lane have turtles nesting in their front yards. If the parcel itself is built on, the impacts would be even greater, she said.

However, some selectmen thought keeping the land as open space might not be the best route to take.

"My concern with the permanent restriction is because it has buildable potential and we don't have a lot of land in this town," said selectman Michael Sullivan.

"But this piece of land is very important to protecting our drinking water supply," replied Quigley. "What else will be more important than preserving a safe drinking water supply?"

Selectman chairman Fred Koed said in the past, the land has been looked at as a site for many various uses. He said more recently, it was looked at for its potential to serve as a cemetery as well as a home for a new police or fire station. Sullivan added with the train coming to town and development potential on Rte. 3A as a result of the proposed Avalon 200-unit complex, there may come a time when the town decides it needs another fire station for safety reasons.

"To say we will never use is, I don't know that I'm comfortable with that," Koed said. "There are very few parcels that can accommodate anything substantial."

Quigley pointed out the town's parcel has accessibility issues, which is why it was included as part of the Cook project in the first place. As part of the total builder's package, there would be no need to worry about an easement. However, the land is now standing on its own, and she believes its best use would be to protect Peppermint Brook.

"We already own this and Peppermint Brook has very little protection" in that area of town, she said.

Selectman Rob Spofford said if Peppermint Brook would much more protected as a result of putting a conservation restriction on the land, why wasn't the water commission there speaking out in favor of the article, or why didn't it come forward two years ago when the town was looking to include it with the Cook property to be marketed together for development.

Quigley said the water commission has been very busy working on other initiatives and the issue is very political as well. She said the water commission was happy to give its full support, but was happy she was taking on the issue.

However, Spofford said if the issue is as critical as Quigley says it is, he would expect the water commission would come forward support her efforts before the board.

In an interview after the meeting, Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt said the water department does support the article, as the land is at the head waters of Peppermint Brook.

"In fact, the (water) department has an article in the Warrant for this Town Meeting for authorization to acquire various parcels along the Peppermint Brook," he said.

Pratt went on to say the reason the department did not sponsor the article is the simple fact that it has not gotten to it yet.

"We have a number of initiatives underway for acquiring land for watershed protection in all areas of the watershed and this simply did not come up yet since it is already town owned. Now that it is in play, we are unanimous in our support of a conservation restriction," he said. The town's parcel of land was going to remain conservation land when it was part of the Cook project.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said in his opinion, the role the town's parcel can play in the future will be determined by whomever builds on the Cook property, as that person will need to grant any easements that will be necessary to access the town's property.

Spofford said because the town is currently in negotiations with Cohasset Associates to build on the site, but the outcome is still unknown, perhaps the article could wait until the Annual Town Meeting in the spring.

"Until we finish what we're going to do with the Cook Estate, there may be a reason we want to use it. This is an asset and it could turn into a revenue producing piece of property for the town. I'd like to see this come back in March when we have the Cook figured out," Spofford said.

However, Quigley said in her opinion, the property is very valuable for reasons other than its monetary worth, and the restriction should come into existence sooner rather than later.

The board of selectmen recommended the article 3-2 with Sullivan and Spofford against it. Town Manager Bill Griffin pointed out citizens' petitions are placed on the Warrant regardless of how the board of selectmen votes. He also said if the article is approved at Town Meeting, it will give the board of selectmen the authority to apply for the conservation restriction, but it does not mandate that it has to. In other words, Town Meeting cannot direct the board to apply for the restriction, it can only show its support and authorize the application. The board will then have the option to take action or not.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

A gem of Cohasset

Not everyone in town knew Cliff Dickson personally, but most knew of him.

And those that could call Dickson "friend" or "family" consider themselves privileged to have been in his company for at least part of his 82 years.

Dickson, a Cohasset native who loved the harbor and who was a "cherished character in town," passed away Sunday.

But the stories that surround him will live on, woven into the fabric of what people love most about Cohasset.

Dickson didn't make his mark at Town Hall or Town Meeting but was a local legend in his lifetime nonetheless.

In fact a few years back, local artist Christine Millar drew a portrait of Dickson as part of her "Gems of Cohasset" series that won an award at the South Shore Arts Festival. A fellow dog lover, Millar first crossed paths with Dickson at the Cohasset Kennel.

Many may remember him as the man in the truck with all those keys, the red suspenders and duck-billed cap, with his golden retriever at his side. He loved dogs and he loved ducks, birds and fish. "He never met an animal who didn't like him," says his daughter Lee.

In fact when Dickson drove into the Cohasset Yacht Club – where he served as Steward for 51 years – the ducks would come running over and wait impatiently for him to get out. Some would even peck on the door of the truck.

"Cliff was most concerned about one duck with a deformed bill, which prevented it from competing with others for food," recalls Ken Cook. "Cliff had figured out some way to reserve some food for that duck which was all that separated it from life and death."

Always ready to help, Dickson also saved sailors and others from harm.

Barbara Cook recalls how Dickson managed to stop the engine of a motorboat whose teenage captain had fallen overboard and was in grave danger as the boat continued to run in circles around him. "Cliff was nearby and heard the commotion. He quickly motored over, and running parallel to the circles of the boat, somehow shut down the engine," Barbara says.

Dickson was also part of the "Greatest Generation." One of the 25-member Cohasset High Class of 1941, Dickson served his country in World War II. At the 50th class reunion, Dickson recalled how being a teenager has changed. "The Class of 1941 grew up in the Great Depression," he said. "Money was hard to come by in Cohasset in the 1930s." Dickson, like the others of his era, worked after school and on weekends to help put food on the table instilling in him a lifelong work ethic.

A true Cohasset native, Dickson's family joked that he needed a passport to leave the town's boarders.

"He put many a mile on his trucks over the years just in town," Lee Dickson recalls. "And he chose his work based on the ability to be outside and to have his dog with him."

Dickson was also a 51-year veteran of the Cohasset Call Fire Department. The fire department rented out the entire Chart House (now Atlantica) for his retirement party. He was also honored by the yacht club that named its club boat after him and had the largest gathering in its history on the occasion of Dickson's 50th anniversary as Steward. The Jesuits of Bellarmine House, where Dickson worked as a caretaker for 27 years, honored him with a retirement dinner this past September.

Dickson leaves his wife of 57 years, Peggy; his daughters Lee and Kelly; and his grandchildren Andrew, Devon and Mackenzie – all of Cohasset. We're grateful to them for sharing Cliff with all of us.

His friend Woody Chittick puts it best.

"Cliff, as far as I can tell, had no enemies," Chittick says. "He didn't even have people who got mildly annoyed at him. For all that, Cliff was decisive and proactive.

"Loved by all,' would be an appropriate epitaph."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Safe drinking water is worth protecting

To the Editor:

I ask you to join the Water Commission, Water Resource Protection Committee, Conservation Commission, and the Board of Selectmen in supporting Article 14 at the Dec. 5, 2005, Town Meeting.

The purpose of Article 14 is to protect our public drinking water supply. Today, a public source of safe drinking water is a rare and valuable asset well worth protecting. The last several Town Meetings have agreed: we voted to authorize the Water Commission to spend millions of dollars to purchase land to protect the Lily Pond Watershed.

Article 14 seeks the same protection for Peppermint Brook, the main tributary for Lily Pond. Except this time we own the land. A yes vote ensures this land remains a natural buffer zone protecting our drinking water — and we don't have to spend any money to purchase it.

Those who oppose this article will tell you this land must stay "on the table" for negotiations with the Cook Estate developer, that it's a deal breaker.

These are the same people who told us:

1. We must vote immediately, prior to completing due diligence, because the Cook Estate would not wait. They were wrong.
2. There is no risk. They were wrong.
3. The town will make $1million profit. They were wrong.
4. The land will support an onsite wastewater system for 85 units. They were wrong.
5. There is no chance the project will require town sewer. They were wrong.
6. Cohasset seniors will qualify for affordable housing under state regulations. They were wrong.

"They" are wrong again. Since this land was not part of the RFP and, hence not part of any bid, how can it be a deal breaker?

"They" say: Additional acreage is necessary. Not so, all three developers placed bids based on using only the Cook Estate land as specified in the RFP.

"They" say: The town needs this land for future development. Much of the land is unbuildable due to wetlands, ledge and a significant vertical drop; wetlands severely restrict access.

"They" say: This is the only land suitable for future senior housing. Their definition of suitable is requiring town sewer. Two proposed projects in the Village prove if you are willing to think outside the box there are other suitable sites.

"They" say: If this land is truly important to protecting our drinking water the Water Commission would have sponsored the article. Once again, "they" are wrong. Article 14 has the unanimous, full and committed support of the Water Commission.

It is "their" judgment and leadership that has made the Cook Estate project the disaster it is.

"They" are wrong, yet again: Opposing this article is not in the best interest of the town. This land has value no dollar figure can reflect, conserving a beautiful woodland ecosystem, and protecting our drinking water.

Please attend Town Meeting Dec. 5 and Vote Yes on Article 14.

HEALTH NOTES

Don't put off learning about Medicare D

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Like most things dealing with the bureaucracy the recent gush of publicity about the new Medicare prescription benefits plan is complicated, important, confusing, and barely understandable.

Nevertheless, we ignore it at our peril. Unfortunately, most of us will reach a time when it will be necessary to start thinking about the cost of medications. The government believes, based on statistics, that this need will arrive some-time between 62 and 67 years of age. For many, it may be much later. And, of course, for some, much earlier.

Since, we are in general, an optimistic society, we tend to procrastinate about our personal obligations, brushing teeth; washing hands, sending in insurance premiums, and worrying about paying for our medications. Nevertheless, a recent demographic prediction sent to the Elder Affairs office reports that by 2010, four years hence, there will be about 1,600 seniors in Cohasset who will be qualified for the prescription benefits under the new Medicare D plan. Unfortunately, this number is based on the US census which leaves about 4,000 Cohasset citizens uncounted. Experience tells us that about 10 percent will do nothing about investigating their Medicare entitlements.

Several important things to remember:

- First is that you should have a list of the medications you take or plan to take; including dose size and the number taken daily.
- Second: If you are already enrolled in a plan which provides medication, the provider must tell you in writing: either that the plan provides equal or better prescription drug coverage than Medicare D or it does not. If it does, you should save the letter telling you this fact. Usually, at the beginning of the listing of benefits which your plan sends out yearly, there is a highlighted statement giving you this information.
- Third: Check your list of medications against those provided in your plan coverage. If the plan covers the medications you need and the benefits are equal to those in Medicare D you need do nothing more.

If you need medications not covered in your plan, you should look into changing plans. If you are a member in good standing of a current plan, you can change at any future time without penalty.

It is, in general, the policy of the government to provide benefits only if requested. In many cases, of which Medicare D is one, after a period of time, the benefits, if not requested, will not be available or at best become much more expensive. Accordingly, you should plan to take action during the offering period for Medicare D. The open time for enrollment is from Nov.15, 2005 until May 2006, after which time various categories of benefits will become substantially more costly.

If you feel it's in your interest to change plans, or, if you have no prescription coverage you should enroll in a Medicare B plan. The best way to do so is to contact the folks at Cohasset Elder Affairs, Phone 781 383-9112 and ask them for advice. Elder affairs is also hosting a panel of experts to provide information on Medicare D on Tuesday, Dec. 6 at 1:30 p.m. at Saint Anthony's parish hall.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

The College Boy meets the global village

LETTER FROM SCOTLAND

KATHLEEN HEALY

It's a bit like when we left Cohasset, only now our hearts are in three places, and not just two.

Second in a series: a mother's tale of a Cohasset boy's first year at a small coastal college in Scotland.

A bit of background — We moved from Cohasset to Scotland with our two young sons, Gerald and Anthony, in the spring of 1995. Once here we were eager to incorporate Scottish customs and traditions into our lives. We also wanted to retain as many of our American traditions as we could. It was important to us to celebrate our first Thanksgiving in the country we'd adopted as home, although it was wrenching for us to think about my family in Cohasset, who'd be carving their roast beast on Lincoln Hillside without us. The word "home" takes on new meanings when you've moved away from the place where you've always been, the place that you've always known. Like my husband, whose parents were the first in both sides of their families going back at least 10 generations to leave the patch in County Donegal where they'd always lived, most of my mother's family had lived in Cohasset for nearly 150 years, at which point their roots jumped across the sea to Ireland and the Pico Islands.

Now that we're so far away from Cohasset, the word "home" has taken on different meanings, depending on the person with whom we're talking. If I'm in our village in Scotland, home means our little postage stamp–sized nest. If my husband's cousin asks him "Are you going home for Easter?" he means their homestead in County Donegal. If my sister in California emails me, I knew where she means when she asks "Do you think there's room for all of us at home this summer?"

Fourteen months after moving to Scotland, we traveled back to Cohasset for our first return visit. The night before we left our village, I walked up the hill behind my house, and watched our neighbor and his young son on their tractor, harvesting the hay from one of their fields. Before the hay can be harvested, farmers need three consecutive days of dry weather, which is not always easy to come by in our part of the world. The old phrase "make hay while the sun shines" has real meaning here. When it's haying time the sound of tractors can be heard from outlying farms all through the night. The village lies at a latitude of 56N, so they were bringing in the hay in golden and glorious sunshine at 10:30pm on that June evening. I sat and watched them for a while.

Up and down through the fields they went, the sound of their machinery repetitive and soothing, a rural mantra to help me forget my concerns about the long day ahead tomorrow. As I sat on the hill which looks down onto the fields, I realized that as much as I was looking forward to being back in Cohasset, I loved my new home-place, and that it was now a part of me. I knew when I left the next morning I'd miss our new home, our village, the views, the friends I'd made, and our new country. It struck me that this was a dangerous thing; for the first time in my life my heart was in two places, and that from that very moment onwards, "home" would always mean more than only Cohasset.

This month we'll celebrate our 11th Thanksgiving in Scotland, but parts of our day will be spent thinking of and giving thanks for the family and friends we love in many places and many countries. We're just like other Cohasset families, who have loved ones scattered far afield.

The College Boy — Our first Thanksgiving after our oldest son Gerald began his freshman year at the University of St Andrews will be notable, because there will be a Gerald-sized hole at our table. We miss him every day, but we're happy that he seems to have settled easily into college life. Founded in 1413, St Andrews is the oldest university in Scotland, and has retained many of its ancient traditions. It's a modern university in all respects though, which includes a significant number of foreign students, including American undergraduates. Before our quiet son began his college life, we wondered if he'd join into the extra-curricular activities which could enrich the experience for him, or if he'd form new friendships

We were pleased to receive a note from him, an International Relations major, late last month;

"I'm learning the Arabic alphabet. Arabic looks pretty hard right now, but I'm sure I'll get used to it. At the Societies Fair on Sunday, I joined the Socialist Party Society, the Wiffle Ball Club, Korfball Club, Amnesty International Society and the Middle Eastern Society. I've made friends with a guy from Texas who's a Democrat, a guy from Tennessee who's a Republican and an anarchist from Moscow. We all played football on the beach this afternoon".

After reading his note three times, we decided to take comfort in knowing that he was indeed settling in and meeting new people.

In the years since we moved to Scotland, there have been a few things which I hadn't anticipated our boys would lack, or which would point out their differences from American children. After we'd been living in Scotland for a few years, I realised that the Scottish curriculum didn't include information about people I felt were important. Our boys didn't know about Thomas Jefferson, Martin Luther King, or Mark Twain. Their lack of Cohasset cultural education meant they didn't understand what people meant when they said "Government Island", "The Green Monster" or "Mary Jeanette". They'd forgotten the value of American coins; given a quarter or a dime, they'd look at me or their Dad, asking "how much is this?"

As they grew into their teen-age years, they enjoyed spending time with their teen-age cousins while in Cohasset during summer visits. An American teen-ager is different from a Scottish teen-ager; not better, not worse, just different. I wanted the impossible; I wanted our boys to have the best of both worlds. So, although I was pleased to learn that Gerald was making friends with students from Pakistan, Thailand, Canada, England, India and Ireland while at college, I was delighted to know that there were also students in his dorm from Milton, Connecticut, Texas and Maryland. Gerald was, finally, part of a global village, which would include daily contact with a nutritious harvest of young people, all seeking a fine education in a small corner of the world.

Now, my husband and I sit by our coal fire on wet November evenings, and sometimes one of us will say, "I wonder what our college boy is doing now?". We miss him, and his younger brother misses him. It's a bit like when we left Cohasset, only now our hearts are in three places, and not just two.

Indeed, our little family has much to be grateful for this Thanksgiving. Our thoughts go out to all Cohasset Mariner readers, wherever you are, for a Thanksgiving rich in blessings.

Next month: The college boy: "you shall go to the ball". Kathleen Healy, a CHS graduate, lives and works in the west of Scotland.

My night in Philly

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I confess I haven't spent much time in Philadelphia, probably because of its reputation.

Who wants to visit a place where, they say, you can spend a week in one day? Or where W. C. Fields could suggest for his epitaph, "On the whole, I'd rather be in Philadelphia?"

Well, all that seems to have changed lately or at least USA Today thinks so.

"The gritty decay that served as the backdrop for Sylvester Stallone's 'Rocky' in the 1970s has disappeared," I was told last week. "And the long-overlooked city of 1.5 million is morphing into one of the nation's coolest urban centers."

The guys from USA Today have even dredged up a 31-year-old hedonist, late of Houston, Texas, who was willing to label Philly "a happening place."

"It's not quite New York, but it's getting there," said Enrique Silva

Yeah. So's East Bridgewater.

My most lasting experience with Philadelphia came sometime in the early '60s when the City of Brotherly Love was best known as "the happening place" where the New York to Washington trains stopped to pick up the milk cans.

The folks who ran our shop had us doing a series of stories on people who made the big news in the 1920s. My subject was sports and, since I knew golf was played with little white balls, the man chosen for me to write about was Gene Sarazen.

I called Sarazen at his estate up the Hudson. Sorry but he wouldn't be able to see me because he was just now leaving to play in a golf tournament. But wait! Why don't I meet him at the tournament and we could talk. After all, it was only in Philadelphia. We made a date to meet for breakfast Saturday morning.

I had checked into the hotel Friday night when disaster struck in the persons of the Boston golf writers who were covering the tournament, Joe Looney, Roger Barry and Nick DelNinno. Of course, we had to go to dinner at the "happening" restaurant called "Bookbinders."

After dinner, Joe and Roger, the early to bed crowd, dropped away early, leaving Nick and I to sample what passed for the fleshpots of Philadelphia. Don't worry. Compared to them, the Sermon on the Mount was X-rated. Anyway, we got back to the hotel to run into another road block — the night manager.

Seems that a dozen or so years before, Nick had gotten him World Series tickets and he never forgot it. With his own personal key, the night manager reopened the hotel bar and the three of us did whatever it is people do in bars until about five in the morning.

And I was to meet Sarazen for breakfast in his room at seven!

Anyone who works for a newspaper will tell you that there are two types of interviewees — one whose answers are shorter than your questions ("Yep," is his favorite word) and the other who can't stop talking long enough for you to ask a question.

Luckily, Sarazen was the second type, so while I clutched my aching head, took an occasional forkful of scrambled eggs and scribbled notes, which surprisingly I could still read two days later, he rattled on and on. More than 40 years later, I'm still grateful.

I finally got to sleep about nine o'clock only to be awakened by a pounding on my door. It was Roger Barry, thoroughly refreshed by a good night's sleep. His paper, the Quincy Patriot Ledger, didn't publish the following day so he had the day off and, as long as we were in Philadelphia, why don't we visit Valley Forge?

We did and I tell you George Washington's Continentals didn't suffer as much as I at their winter encampment.

So you can see why I'm not excited that Philadelphia has become "a happening place." It's already happened to me.

Better schools translate into higher property values

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

It is damaging to our school system, both in the short term and long term, if we do not maintain a competitive pay scale for our teachers.

I want to state up front that I support the teachers in their quest for a pay raise. It is unfair for taxpayers indirectly to shift the cost of our children's education onto the backs of our teachers by expecting teachers to forego cost-of-living pay raises.

But aside from the fairness aspect, it is damaging to our school system, both in the short term and long term, if we do not maintain a competitive pay scale for our teachers. I never cease to be amazed by the hypocrisy exhibited by those who on the one hand shout the loudest for our schools to be "run like a business," yet who on the other hand fail to realize that we must compete in the marketplace for top-quality employees just like every other business. If Cohasset schools were to offer the lowest salary scale in the area, it is axiomatic that we would lose out to other communities for the most-qualified teachers (which apparently is happening already).

Moreover, as any realtor will tell you, the quality and reputation of a school system is a significant factor in a family's decision to buy a home in a community. The equation is simple: better school districts equal higher property values. The shortsightedness and lack of commonsense exhibited by those who complain the most about being taxed an additional $150 per year for a school override, when it is the continued strength of the Cohasset school system that adds tens of thousands of dollars to the value of their homes, is mind-numbing.

It is in this context that I wish to make a few points with regard to last week's commentary from Ms. Jenkins concerning the teachers' pay-raise issue.

Ms. Jenkins identified herself at the end of her commentary as, "President of the Concerned Cohasset Taxpayers." However, Ms. Jenkins is not alone in her concern about taxes. All of us who work and who own homes are "concerned taxpayers" at the state, local, and federal levels (and teachers pay taxes, too). Ms. Jenkins does not own exclusive rights to the title of "concerned taxpayer."

But in addition to being a concerned taxpayer, I am also a concerned parent, a concerned homeowner, and a concerned member of our community, our state, and our nation. The narrow-minded and myopic focus of Ms. Jenkins and others like her who rail solely about local property taxes (and in her case, obsessively about the school budget) inevitably ignores or misstates other factors which are part of the equation of school and town financial matters.

For example, Ms. Jenkins mentions that Cohasset "receives a minimum in state aid." That is a true statement, but if she feels that is a problem, what is she doing about it? Our teachers and schoolchildren are not to blame for our lack of state aid, yet Ms. Jenkins wants the financial consequences to fall on them.

Moreover, one of the reasons why local aid from the state has declined in recent years in Cohasset (as well as in many other communities) is because the state income tax rate was reduced a few years ago from 5.95 percent to 5.30 percent. The average Cohasset family with a $100,000 income has seen a tax cut of $650 in state income taxes (0.65 x $100,000) over the past few years. So why is it unfair or unreasonable for us to expect to pay additional property taxes ($150 was the amount by which the average homeowner's tax bill would have increased if last spring's override had passed) in order to make up for the decline in state aid which Ms. Jenkins acknowledges is a contributing factor to our town's financial problems?

The point is, our property tax bills do not exist in a vacuum. Ms. Jenkins isn't even telling half of the story when she offers a purported analysis of our town's financial picture without considering all of the factors that go into it and without looking at the total tax picture for the typical taxpayer.

Ms. Jenkins also is guilty of a kind of hypocrisy which is typical of those who complain about cost-of-living increases for teachers. She writes, "During the lean years taxpayers working in fields outside of academia have often had no salary increases and in many cases salary cuts." That certainly was true when the dot-com bubble burst and before the economy began rolling again. But that is not the situation today. According to every government statistic I have seen lately, the national and state economies are growing and employment is high. We certainly are not in "lean times." So what is Ms. Jenkins talking about?

Well, to answer my own question, I have never, in my 30 years as a homeowner and property taxpayer, known there to be a "good time" to give pay raises to teachers. Whether there be good times, bad times, or in-between times, I have never lived in a community where teacher pay raises did not raise the hackles of some taxpayer group, of which Ms. Jenkins's is an extreme example.

Further, in "good times" private sector employees get big raises or bonuses from their employers for a job well done. I am sure that Ms. Jenkins does so in her business. But a few years ago the Cohasset 10th grade topped the state in the MCAS — yet I don't seem to recall that Ms. Jenkins urged us at that time to reward our teachers for their role in placing Cohasset students at the top of the state. Ms. Jenkins wants to have it both ways: give teachers nothing in lean times and nothing extra in good times. That sort of thinking is typical of the one-sided mind-set which is pervasive in most of Ms. Jenkins's arguments.

Ms. Jenkins and the Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers should be aware that they are perceived by the average resident as shrill, obsessive, and lacking credibility. References to the schools as a "hostage environment for our students" and to teachers as "the big gruesome adults" do not contribute to a serious debate on the subject of teacher salaries. Similarly, throwing out meaningless and irrelevant statistics and numbers, as Ms. Jenkins did in her commentary last week, serves only to cloud the real issues with proverbial red herrings. (For example, she noted that a teacher's top salary was $44,368 in 1991 and is $73,323 today. Is she suggesting that our teachers still should be paid $44,368? Or that our teachers' pay raises have exceeded inflation? Or that our increases have been out of line compared to other school districts? How did we compare to other school districts in her chosen base year of 1991? How did that 1991 salary figure compare to the immediately prior years' figures in Cohasset?)

If Ms. Jenkins and the Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers truly want to get in "sync with what is happening in the real-time economy," (her words), then I offer them this challenge: Last week you accused the teachers of "disseminating incorrect information regarding the teachers' financial situation." So do a little bit of research and tell us how Cohasset's teacher pay scale compares to nearby communities, say Norwell, Scituate, and Hingham. Give us those facts for next week's Mariner. (For the record, I have no idea how we compare to those towns.) Leave out the hyperbole. Maybe then all of us can start down the path of enlightened discourse about teacher salaries in Cohasset.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' and senators' votes on five roll calls from the week of November 7-11.

The first two roll call votes in this week's report are related to the controversial retroactive capital gains tax. The Legislature in 2002 raised the capital gains tax but made the hike effective on May 1, 2002—effectively exempting from the hike all taxpayers who incurred capital gains during the first four months of 2002. The Supreme Judicial Court (SJC) ruled that the mid-year change in the tax rate was unconstitutional because it taxed the same class of taxpayers at different rates during the same year. The ruling made January 1, 2002 the effective date and means that taxpayers who sold their homes or stocks between January 1, 2002 and April 30, 2002 must retroactively pay the higher capital gains tax. The ruling also gave the Legislature the option to change the effective date to January 1, 2003. That change would save those taxpayers $150 million and also refund an additional $250 million to taxpayers who paid the higher capital gains tax rate during the final eight months of 2002. The House in June and September defeated efforts to change the date. The Department of Revenue recently sent out retroactive tax bills to thousands of taxpayers across the state.

$85 MILLION TAX PACKAGE AND RETROACTIVE CAPITAL GAINS TAX (S 2241)

House 119-31 and 112-36, Senate 25-12, approved and sent to Gov. Mitt Romney a bill that is estimated to raise $85 million by making several changes in the state's tax laws for businesses and individuals. A key provision imposes the state's five percent sales tax on software that is downloaded from the Internet—an action that is currently tax-free. Supporters of the bill said that the package would close many business and individual loopholes. Opponents of the bill said that it is an unnecessary tax hike. Debate also centered on a provision that provides some relief for taxpayers who are being taxed retroactively at a higher rate on the sale of their homes or stocks between January 1, 2002 and April 30, 2002. A provision in this package exempts these taxpayers from interest and penalties and completely exempts anyone who owes less than $100. The package does not impose the retroactive tax itself that is already in place as the result of a Supreme Judicial Court ruling. Supporters of the exemptions said that they would provide some relief to these taxpayers who have received this unexpected and unwelcome tax bill. They argued that the package does not impose the higher retroactive tax because it is already in place under court order. Opponents said that the exemptions are a weak and phony response to this outrageous retroactive tax and noted that the Legislature has the power to exempt all taxpayers from the higher tax but has refused to do so. They argued that while the exemptions might appear to be a good idea on the surface, they are actually ill-advised because their approval would indicate support for of the retroactive tax itself. They said that they support repeal of the retroactive tax and urged the House to oppose the bill and the exemptions in order to continue the fight to repeal the tax. Some House members who switched their votes indicated that they first supported the exemptions because they felt that the retroactive tax hike is inevitable and wanted to offer some relief to these taxpayers. They noted that they decided to eventually oppose the exemptions as a show of support against the retroactive tax. (A "Yes" vote is for the $85 million tax package including the exemptions on the retroactive capital gains tax. A "No" vote is against the package and the exemptions).

SUSPEND RULES TO CONSIDER REPEAL OF RETROACTIVE CAPITAL GAINS TAX (H 4169)

House 35-113, refused to suspend rules to allow consideration of an amendment repealing the retroactive capital gains tax by making its effective date January 1, 2003 instead of January 1, 2002. Supporters of rule suspension said that it is outrageous to "change the rules in the middle of the game" and require taxpayers to pay a retroactive tax three years after they sold their homes or stocks in good faith based on a lower tax rate that was in effect at the time of the sale. They said that changing the effective date would save those taxpayers $150 million and also refund $250 million to taxpayers who paid the higher capital gains tax rate during the final eight months of 2002. They noted that the state can easily afford the revenue loss because higher than expected 2005 tax collections are creating a budget surplus. Opponents of rule suspension said that the state cannot afford to refund $250 million to taxpayers. They argued that the state can also use the additional $150 million retroactive windfall to fund important programs. Some opponents said that they would support eliminating the $150 million retroactive hike if it could be done alone and did not have to be tied to returning to taxpayers the $250 million already paid. (A "Yes" vote is for suspending rules to allow consideration of the amendment repealing the retroactive capital gains tax. A "No" vote is against suspending the rules).

Y

WINTER ENERGY ASSISTANCE (H 4473)

House 151-0, approved a bill providing $20 million to help low-income households heat their homes this winter. The bill also extends until 2012 a surcharge on consumers' electric bills to fund energy efficiency programs and activities. The surcharge was set to expire in 2007. Other provisions include expanding eligibility for fuel assistance; providing a tax credit of 30 percent of the purchase price, up to $600, of energy efficient residential home heating items; allowing up to an $800 tax deduction for the purchase of home heating oil and natural gas purchased between November 1, 2005 and February 28, 2006 and a ten-day "tax-free holiday" in October 2006 exempting the purchase of energy efficient appliances from the state's five percent sales tax. Supporters said that this pro-consumer bill would help citizens across the state who will be hit by the skyrocketing cost of heating their homes this winter. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

GENETIC PRIVACY (H 3899)

House 157-0, approved a bill permanently extending a current law that prohibits genetic discrimination in health insurance and employment. The law was approved by the Legislature in 2000 but is scheduled to expire on January 1. Provisions include banning the disclosure of genetic testing results without informed consent and prohibiting a consumer from being forced to take or disclose the results of genetic tests in order to obtain insurance. Supporters said that the bill would ensure that individuals who undergo genetic testing to determine their propensity to illness and disease do not have to fear that the results will be used against them. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

BLADDER CANCER AND FIREFIGHTERS (H 1636)

House 148-0, approved a bill creating a statewide program to annually screen firefighters for bladder cancer. Supporters said that there is no known cause of bladder cancer but noted that the American Cancer Society indicates that firefighters exposed to toxins when they remove their masks immediately after a fire may be at greater risk for the disease. They argued that a new non-invasive test would help detect bladder cancer in time for treatment of these heroes who risk their lives for their fellow citizens. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

HEALTH CARE PLAN (S 2266)

Senate 38-0, approved its version of a bill making major changes in the state's health care insurance system. The House passed its own plan two weeks ago and there are some major differences in the two versions. The House plan requires that all Massachusetts residents have some kind of health insurance while the Senate's aim is to provide insurance to roughly half of the estimated 600,000 currently without insurance. The most controversial part of the House proposal mandates that businesses that have more than ten employees and do not provide health insurance be required to pay into a state fund that will assist in providing insurance for uninsured residents. The Senate plan mandates that businesses that have more than 50 employees and do not provide health insurance be required to pay the cost of their own employees' actual health care services. Both plans expand the number of low-income people who would be covered under the state's Medicaid program. Supporters said that the Senate plan is a more reasonable and measured one that would take a giant step toward reforming the system without going too far during a fragile time for the state's economy. They noted that their eventual goal is to ensure that all residents have health insurance. A House-Senate conference committee will soon be appointed to work out a compromise version. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

HEALTH INSURANCE FOR SMALL BUSINESSES (S 2266)

Senate 11-27, rejected an amendment establishing a pilot program allowing one chamber of commerce or professional and trade association to pool its members' employees in order to obtain health insurance plans. Businesses would be allowed to join the pool only if they have fewer than ten employees. The state's insurance commissioner would monitor the program and report on its effectiveness and any savings in health insurance costs. Amendment supporters said that small businesses with fewer than ten employees do not have access to a wide range of health care plans. They argued that pooling businesses would create a group with thousands of members who would be offered better and more cost effective health care plans. Amendment opponents said that this practice was allowed a few years ago but was a failure that was eventually prohibited by the Legislature. They said that a study has shown that the program does not work and in fact increases the health care costs of small businesses that do not join these pools. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment allowing pooling. A "No" vote is against allowing pooling).

DISCLOSE RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS' FINANCES (S 1074)

Senate 33-4, approved legislation that would require churches and other non-profit religious organizations to file an annual financial report with the Attorney General's office. Current law exempts religious organizations from this requirement while some 30,000 other non-secular, non-profit organizations are required to file the report. The bill also requires all secular and non-secular organizations to list their real estate assets in the report. Supporters said that these disclosures would inform donors how their money is spent and remove this exemption that has cast a shroud of secrecy around religious organizations. They noted that this exemption aided the Catholic Church in covering up the sexual abuse of children by allowing it to secretly pay hush money to victims of sexual abuse and even sell property to fund the hush money. Opponents said that the bill is clearly an unconstitutional violation of the separation of church and state. They argued that the bill is a misguided and unnecessary one that is anti-Catholic and is aimed solely at the Catholic Church. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill requiring the reports and disclosures. A "No" vote is against the reports and disclosures).

N

EXPAND MILITARY BENEFITS (H 4469)

Senate 39-0, approved and Gov. Romney signed into law a bill expanding the benefits offered to Massachusetts veterans and National Guard members. Provisions include allowing taxpayers, through a check off on their state income tax forms, to contribute to a fund to help families of active military personnel; bonuses of $500 to $1000 to veterans who served in Iraq or Afghanistan; increasing from $5,000 to $100,000 the death benefits paid to families of National Guard members; increasing from $75 to $100 the daily stipend paid to active National Guardsmen and waiving the tuition of National Guardsmen who attend state colleges. Supporters said that the Veterans Day holiday is the perfect time to increase benefits for these brave veterans and active duty soldiers who have given their time or sacrificed their lives for the nation. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

Faucets turned on for Cohasset and Linden Ponds water deal

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Yesterday, Cohasset water started flowing through Hingham's pipes.

This is the result of an agreement between the Cohasset Water Department and Erickson Retirement Communities, which is purchasing water to supply Linden Ponds off Whiting Street in South Hingham.

Under the 20-year agreement, Erickson may purchase up to 300,000 gallons of water per day to serve Linden Ponds, which at full build-out will have 2,000 units.

Erickson is paying for the mile of pipeline installed along the west side of Rte. 3A from across from Hingham Lumber to the Cohasset-Hingham line and a pumphouse recently constructed. Water quality will be monitored on a continuous basis.

Initially Erickson will purchase 15,000 gallons per day, reaching 300,000 in 2013 when Linden Ponds is expected to.be completed.

Initially Erickson will purchase 15,000 gallons per day, reaching 300,000 in 2013 when Linden Ponds is expected to be completed.

To get water to Linden Ponds, Cohasset water will enter the northern part of the Hingham system off Rte. 3A; Aquarion then provides a like amount of water to Linden Ponds at the southern end of the system. Aquarion is authorized by the state to supply 3.5 million gallons of water a day to its customers, an amount that would be exceeded if the company were to supply water to Linden Ponds; thus, the agreement between Aquarion and the Cohasset Water Department.

Aquarion has been working with the water department to ensure that the highest standards of water quality are met.

"We have worked closely with the Cohasset Water Department, Erickson and Town Officials for Hingham, Hull and Cohasset to ensure that all our customers will continue to have high quality water," said Larry Bingaman, senior vice president of operations at Aquarion.

Aquarion will pay Cohasset from about $28,000 in fiscal 2005 to $600,000 in fiscal 2015, which will help keep Cohasset water rates down.

Cohasset Mariner staff reporter Samantha Brown gets ready to participate in the water taste test along with the rest of the Journal-Mariner office at 73 South St. in downtown Hingham.

Journal/Mariner staff tries water taste test

When it comes to water, taste and odor are subjective.

At least that's what Martin Cohn, spokesperson for Aquarion Water Company, has found to be the case following months of administering a portable taste test he brings right to the doors of taste-testers from the trunk of his car in response to concerns about the taste, odor, and quality of Cohasset — and sometimes Hingham — water.

The Cohasset Water Department begins delivering water to Hingham to serve the Linden Ponds retirement community yesterday.

Hingham Journal and Cohasset Mariner Editor Mary Ford, Journal reporter Carol Meyer, Cohasset Mariner reporter Samantha Brown, Journal contributor Peg Charlton, and local resident Irene Kane, who happened to stop by as Cohn was about to begin a taste test at the Journal's South Street office this week, tasted five samples of water, the source of which was not identified until after the test.

The rating system was: 1, excellent; 2, good; 3, fair; 4, poor; and 5, no opinion.

The Hingham and Cohasset water samples both earned an overall score of 2.8, while the Stop and Shop brand scored a 2.6.

The 90/10 mix of Hingham and Cohasset water (90 percent Hingham water to 10 percent Cohasset water) — which will be the mix proportion by 2013 following a phase-in process — earned the highest score, 3.4. Poland Springs came in second with a 3.1.

When the votes for the best water were counted, Hingham and Poland Springs water each had two, while Stop and Shop water got one vote.

While the taste tests provide information that Aquarion can use to help determine water quality, Cohn noted that the pipe systems through which the water is delivered can affect the taste, especially if the pipes are rusty. "Taste can vary from street to street and from house to house," he said.

Reserve fund transfer to pay for holiday lights

There was no money allocated for holiday lights on the Common in this year's budget. Town Manager Bill Griffin told selectmen Thursday, Nov. 10 he had gone through the budget thoroughly and could not find any area where the money had been put aside. Griffin said he has been told it costs roughly $2,500 each year to decorate Cohasset Common with holiday lights.

The board said holiday lights are a tradition in town and funding must be found somehow to make it happen. Selectmen Gary Vanderweil said for that small sum, the selectmen could forego their annual pay for serving on the board to cover the cost.

After the meeting, Griffin said Director of Finance Michael Buckley asked the advisory committee for a reserve fund transfer to cover the cost of the lights, which it gladly approved.

Skippers ready for annual Turkey Day battle with Hull

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Cohasset @ Hull
Thanksgiving Day
Hull HS, 10 a.m.

No matter what the sport is, Cohasset-Hull is a big deal.

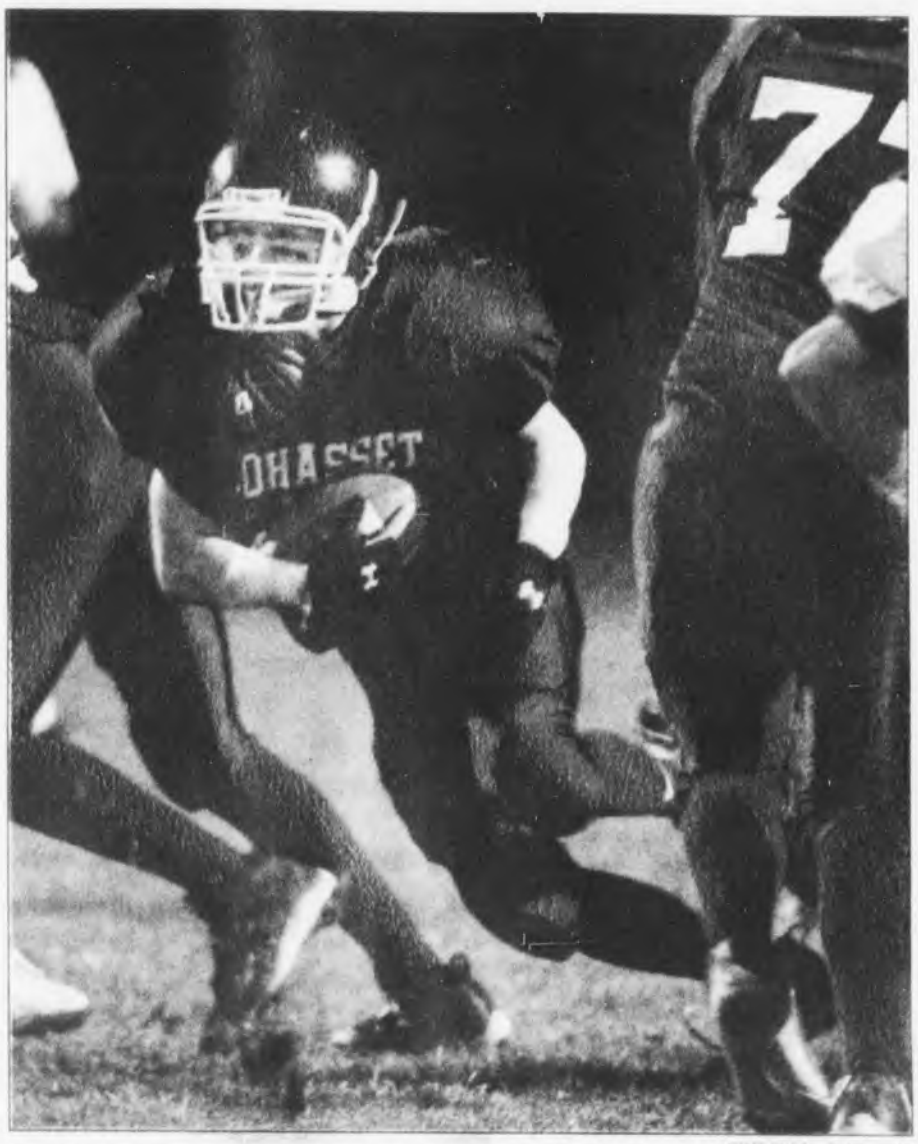
On the gridiron, on Thanksgiving, though, it's the marquee event.

This year's game is at Hull High School, on the very tip of the peninsula. Early forecasts for Thursday are calling for temperatures in the high 30's, and it always feels colder at that site.

Combine the temperature dropping and the wind turbine spinning, and outdoor games at Hull are always a unique experience for fans and players alike.

"Going down to Hull is always an interesting experience," said senior captain Nick Arment. "I like playing in Hull. It's always a good atmosphere; there's always a ton of people there."

Indeed, the Hull student fans are among the loudest on the South Shore. Another Skippers senior captain, Dan McCarthy, says that and the spirit of the Pirates' players will make for a competitive game every time.



"The fans are really, really close to the field, and Hull always comes out ready to play," McCarthy said. "Even if they're 0-10, Hull comes out like they're 10-0 on Thanksgiving."

The proof of McCarthy's assertion can be found in the last two Turkey Day meetings between the teams. Last year at Alumni Field, Cohasset won 20-6, but it was tough, grinding game that took a lot out of both teams.

The last time this game was playing Hull in 2003, the Skippers escaped with a 7-6 win, with Teddie Straughn stopping a Pirates two-point conversion with under two minutes to go to preserve the win.

Unlike those two games, this year there is no playoff game to follow. With a 4-3-2 record (2-2 South Shore League), this season

Clippers nip Skippers

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Last Friday night was almost a year to the day after last season's Cohasset-Norwell gridiron clash.

In 2004, with the South Shore League title and Div. 3 playoff berth on the line, the Skippers handed it to Norwell, thoroughly dominating on both sides of the ball in a convincing 20-0 win.

This year - with Abington having already sewn up the league championship - it was about pride. And for the Clippers, playing their final home game of the year, probably a little revenge.

Well, they got it, as Norwell (7-3 overall, 3-2 league) rode a James Long field goal and Dan Pye touchdown run to a hard-fought 9-7 victory over Cohasset.

Clippers head coach Jim Sullivan said last year's disaster was indeed a motivating factor.

"The kids knew what it felt like to walk off that field last year," he said. "They've had their sights set on Cohasset all year."

Both defenses were pitching a shutout deep into the first half. Cohasset (4-3-2, 2-2), in particular, was playing well on that side of the ball, led by the play of senior captains and linebackers Dan McCarthy and Dave McKenna.

With points clearly at a premium, whichever team scored first would probably hold a significant advantage. Norwell wound

Boys come up a little short

BROCKTON - Coaches always say they have respect for one another, but it's rare one actually gets to see it.

On the turf at Brockton High with their teams playing against one another in the Div. 3 South Sectional semifinals, Hanover's Jim Sylvia and Cohasset's Rob Leary seemed more like old friends than opposing coaches, even when they thought no one was watching.

"Aren't you supposed to stay on your side of the 50?," Sylvia jokingly asked Leary as he crossed midfield on the sidelines to yell instructions to his team early in the first half. "I'm just coming over to say hi, Jim," Leary answered with a chuckle.

A few minutes later when Hanover defender Brian Rodday came off the field for a break, Leary joked, "Oh, that's okay. He doesn't have to go back in", prompting a coy smile from Sylvia.

After Hanover defeated Cohasset, 1-0, Sylvia had nothing but kind words for Leary and his team.

"It was a evenly played contest and that's the kind of game you expect when you play a team coached by Rob Leary. It was tough from the start. Rob knows what we have and we know what Rob has. It was just a great game for both teams."

This victory, and another over Seekonk (3-0) in the South finals, advanced Hanover to yesterday's Div. 3 state semifinals against Ipswich. The game occurred after the Mariner's press time. A win there would send the Indians to the Div. 3 state championship.

Neither team had a real advantage in the first half of play as Hanover and Cohasset's defenses allowed limited opportunities. The second half was a different story, however.

After coming up short on a few attempts earlier in the half and being denied a few more by aggressive goaltender Prescott Busk, the Indians started applying some solid pressure. Almost all of the last 18 minutes of the game were played in Cohasset's defensive end. During that stretch, hard shots by Hanover twins Matt and Ryan Shea were both saved by Busk. A Matt Shea header and Tim Hurlburt liner were also stopped.

Several players shined defensively for Cohasset, particularly in the first half. There, players like senior captains Trevor Brady and Sam MacDonald, senior Chris Ofsthun, junior Chris Donze, and freshman Lenny Brown did an amiable job of disrupting Hanover's passing game and doubling up on the Shea's.

But Hanover wouldn't be denied. Ryan Shea lined up on the right side for a corner kick and lofted the ball to the middle of the box. There, Matt Shea flicked the ball by Busk and into the right corner of the net with 3:23 to play. The goal would hold up in the end.

"Their goalie (Busk) made a couple of great saves on Matt and Tim, but the corner was just typical Shea/Shea," said Sylvia. "Big games call on big players to make the plays and that's exactly what they did."

Hanover certainly received some big play from keeper Mike Dion and its defense, keyed by Rodday, Peter Fanning, Bill Riley, and Chad Merritt, playing for captain Dan Neville, who's suffering from mononucleosis.

Dion came up huge on a pair of Cohasset scoring opportu-

Cohasset keeper Prescott Busk smothers another Hanover attack with this dive to his left in the second half of last Thursday's Div. 3 South semifinal clash. The Skippers senior did all he could in net, but the Indians still ended Cohasset's season with a 1-0 win.

Remy Lee

The name Remy Lee likely strikes a chord with Cohasset Mariner readers.

Maybe you've read about her accomplishments on the Cohasset tennis team. Or you have glimpsed at a picture with Remy singing a lead part in the school chorus.

Her name appears in almost every article covering the 2005 field hockey team. But do you really think you know Remy Lee?

For starters, let's recap her impressive field hockey career. Since the 8th grade, Remy has remained hooked on field hockey. With the influence of her mother, a field hockey player for Lindenwood College in St. Louis, Lee has transformed into the accomplished player of today.

At last year's field hockey break up dinner, Remy got pretty

Sci-Coh football season wrap up

Scituate-Cohasset Youth Football wrapped up a very exciting season last week with all three Division 5 Stingray teams making appearances in Super Bowl games. All six teams, including the Division 1 Sharks, went to the playoffs with great football action all around.

The regular season,with practices beginning Aug. 15, was very exciting. The six teams combined for a 23-12-7 record, outscoring their opponents 516-382. That's a lot of touchdowns! Over 200 boys from grades 2-8 competed against bigger teams from Marshfield, Middleboro, Hingham, Plymouth, Barnstable, Rockland, Silver Lake, Hanover and Bridgewater. Without a home field this year, the blue and white traveled the South Shore to compete on the gridiron.

Stingrays - Div. 5

The Stingray Mites (grades 2 and 3) ended the season as Super Bowl Co-Champions in a hard-fought battle versus Hingham. Sixty-four boys filled the roster since head coach Frank Gaziano refused to cut any boys from his team.

To manage such a large squad, Coach Gaz enlisted several assistant coaches to manage the largest team in SCICOH football. Mark Brady, Chris Comeau, Mark Dalleader, Joe Downing, Mike Sheehan, Jim McClusky, Shaun O'Rourke and Paul Schwartz ran effective and organized practices to keep the boys engaged in the sport.

In order to get as much playing time as possible for as many players possible, Frank utilized the JV concept, which was new to the league this year (after a trial run last year by SCICOH football). In addition to seven regular season games, Frank and his assistants conducted five JV games to give the younger, more inexperienced kids time on the field.

bent out of shape when head coach Deb Bostwick failed to name her as one of the two new captains. Rather than give up, she worked harder.

Remy attended the Elite Field Hockey Camp at Bentley College this past summer. She trained and trained, and trained some more. When 40-plus players showed up at the '05 field hockey tryouts, Bostwick quickly realized that additional captains were needed. Who better than Remy? Bostwick can recognize perseverance a mile away.

So with four captains (Remy, Katherine Whoriskey, Mia Lieb-Lappen, and Katie James), the Skippers kicked off their season.

"Honestly speaking, I was a little nervous about our ability coming into the season," admits Remy. "We were weak last year. I hope we wouldn't repeat last year's record.

"Coach [Bostwick] ran us hard in the preseason. This strategy really paid off in the long run."

In fact, the Skippers' sore legs in the preseason served them well in their effort to land a spot in the MIAA tourney.

Remy's personal improvement over the course of the season surely boosted the Skipper team outcome. In her position at left defender, she learned to drive out any opponent threat.

"Before a game, I would ask myself, 'What did I mess up on last game?' and 'What can I do to improve this game?'" she said.

This became Remy's own psychological game. Today's Remy had to outperform yesterday's Remy.

She also discovered how field hockey allowed her to release any frustration in a positive way.

"If I had a bad day or something, I would just channel my anger into my effort on the field," Remy says. "This would improve my play."

She credits Bostwick with teaching her much of what she learned. Bostwick showed her the technical aspects of the game like push passes, dodges and positioning.

Bostwick also emphasized the importance of maintaining mental balance in the game, like remaining optimistic and protecting one's confidence. When the team dropped to a 2-5 record, Bostwick countered team comments like "not another repeat" with "Guys, we can do this!" The encouragement worked its magic.

"Remy's intensity boosted our team in so many cases," says Bostwick. "She would do whatever she could to help the team. She always remained positive, gave 110 percent, and really helped this team along."

Remy joined in as a captain in making sure her teammates understood the importance of a good outlook. When asked what she learned from serving in a leadership role, Remy commented, "You have to be able to take criticism, put your ego aside and maintain a level of humility."

So Remy has clearly demonstrated leadership and athletic talent on the field. But it's not often one finds a sports captain mention William Shakespeare in the next sentence after talking about her field hockey experience.

That's right. While others are drooling on their Macbeth books in class, Remy carefully, and happily, analyzes every line.

"Shakespeare takes me to a different place," she says. "I find it interesting to translate everything and to try and understand the thoughts of the characters."

After English, one might discover Remy caught up in her other favorite class: international relations. She finds learning about world leaders "makes you think a lot about what's going on in the world right now."

In addition to maintaining her grades, Remy sings for the CHS chorus. She fused together her singing ability with her colorful personality when she performed in the production of "Grease" last year. She also serves as an active member of the Social Awareness Organization.

When spring rolls around, you'll find Remy on the tennis courts. She was voted captain for the 2006 tennis team.

But Remy won't be "too cool" to stop and say hi either.

"Remy contributes so much to the team," says senior teammate Brooke Allen. "Her strong drive really sets up our middies and offense to score, and she always stays positive. As a friend, she's the same way. She is just a good person to be around."

So with all this talent to offer, where does one go next in life?

At this point, Remy has thought about attending a college along the east coast. She believes a small liberal arts school would fit her best.

"I have a few possible areas I'd like to major in," Remy explains. "Criminal justice has always interested me. However, communications and human resources really catch my attention as well."

Don't worry, though. Remy plans to play at least intramural field hockey in college, so her athletic talent won't go to waste.

FROM WRAP UP, PAGE 19

The final game featured a dramatic fourth quarter drive to tie the game and a big goal line stop to preserve the tie. Then they played in a playoff game, winning that, leading to the Super Bowl. Coach Gaziano summed up the season by saying, "The kids deserve congratulations for all their hard work."

The Stingray Peewees (5th grade) went undefeated during the regular season, finishing 4-0-3 before heading into the playoffs. The team was coached by Kevin Dooley, assisted by Steve Buckley, Mike Crowley, and Jamie Miller. The Peewees headed into the Super Bowl for the third straight season. The road to the big game included a huge win over last year's Super Bowl champ, Barnstable, 8-0 in Barnstable.

Then, due to weather and cancellations, they played Marshfield three times in 12 days. Coach Dooley said, "I think those three games took everything we had and left us a little flat in the Super Bowl."

That being said, he continued, "This team of 40 10-year olds played hard each and every game, making their coaches and parents very proud."

The Stingray Midgets (7th grade) had an excellent season, finishing at 5-2, second place in their division. Cole Hawkins, a veteran SCICOH coach, led the team and was assisted by Steve Brown, Brad Williams and Mark Kissick.

The team was very balanced and competitive in their division, due to the strengths in the coaching staff and the willingness of the boys to learn and apply what was coached. A strong win over Middleboro in the first round of the playoffs led to the Super Bowl appearance versus Marshfield, the only team to have beaten them in the regular season. The score was not in favor of the good guys at the end of regulation.

The team, however, achieved much during the season. Assistant Coach Williams commented, "This team played strong defense all season and was very consistent week to week learning a new offense."

The entire coaching staff enjoyed the past three months working with this team and they look forward to another exciting season next year.

Div. 1 Sharks

The Shark Mites (4th grade) were the smallest team out there in Div. 1 and played very competitive ball. Head Coach George Reynolds was assisted by Mark True and Bob Tangherlini.

The team showed a lot of heart and fought hard throughout the season, securing the last playoff spot. Coach Reynolds said, "I give them credit for a solid effort and the 'never say die' attitude."

He went on, "The record is misleading. If you take a couple of plays out of a few of the games, the record could have been 6-2."

The important thing to the coaching staff was the ongoing learning that the team did. The boys learned some advanced football concepts; not bad for 10-year olds.

The Shark Peewees (6th grade) were coached by Ralph Froio, Mike Corcoran, Rick Roach, Joe Carbone and Doug McNary were the assistants. The PeeWees went 5-1-1 this year, quite a turnaround from last year's record of 2-6.

The regular season was highlighted by victories over Bridgewater (this year's eventual Super Bowl champ), and Plymouth. The Plymouth game showed the true character of this team. Losing the game going into the fourth quarter on a crisp cold night in Plymouth, the boys battled back not once but twice to gain the lead. As they scored the winning touchdown and ran off the field, Coach Corcoran turned to his young charges and said, "That is why you never, ever give up. Anything can happen."

This Peewee team was a bit different than others in the program, as 50 percent of the roster were Cohasset youngsters. The team was balanced with strong offensive and defensive groups. Each squad got the job done. What impressed the coaching staff most was that the interest, dedication and determination was as strong in the last practice as it was in the first.

The Shark Midgets (8th grade), in their final year in SCICOH football, had a somewhat unspectacular regular season. The team was coached by Mike Stewart, who was assisted by George Taylor, Eric Gill, and, yes, another Mike Stewart.

The team had two close losses to Bridgewater and Rockland which were decided last in the fourth quarter. Hopes for advancing to the playoffs hinged on a victory versus Barnstable in Barnstable. On a cold and snowy night, with little time remaining, the boys in blue scored late in the fourth quarter against, won the game and began preparations for the playoffs.

The playoff opponent was Marshfield, an undefeated team. This was just what the boys were looking for; a big, strong, confident team. In the week of practice before the game, the plan was simple; take Marshfield out of their game. Working hard and late into the evening, the coaches guided the boys into a game plan that was going to stop Marshfield's big and powerful offense, move the ball on offense and put points on the board against the best defense in the Old Colony Youth Football League.

Coach Stewart commented, "In what was arguably the best youth football game ever, we moved the ball, putting three touchdowns on the board, with tough offensive line work, good solid running and timely and accurate passing. Defensively we succeeded in holding the Marshfield offense at bay, with different defensive formations."

What the game came down to was good, solid hitting and with 51 seconds left in the game, they scored to hold a six-point lead. Marshfield was not done though, and mounted a last minute drive, culminated by a broken play, a 35-yard touchdown run to tie the game. They then converted the extra points to take the lead with seconds left.

Coach Stewart said, "I have never been prouder of these boys than I was after this Marshfield game. I look forward to following the progress of the kids through out their high school careers."

up being that team, thanks to a number of key plays.

After a Cohasset turnover (coming when the Skippers appeared to be headed for a touchdown) gave Norwell the ball at their own 6 with 1:30 left in the half, Sullivan and his staff were planning to simply run out the clock. Pye (123 yards on the evening) changed those plans, however, with a 40-yard run to bring his team close to midfield.

Now running a two-minute drill, senior quarterback Scott Chappell hit classmate and tight end Brian Donoghue with a 20-yard toss. The drive eventually brought Norwell to the Skippers 18, and on the final play of the half, sophomore James Long booted a 35-yard field goal to give the Clippers a 3-0 lead at the break.

The pass from Chappell was obviously a big play, and Sullivan says his QB in general has impressed as of late.

"Scotty Chappell has been stepping it up every week," said the Clippers coach. "I think his passing has really been improving, and it provided an element that Cohasset had some trouble with."

Cohasset's offense, meanwhile, was getting a nice effort from senior tailback Shane Dorian (130 yards) and sophomore quarterback Brian Hill (7-for-11 passing), who was filling in for injured starter Anthony DiPaolo. As usual, Dorian was doing most of his work up the middle, with center Nick Cambi and guards Nick Arment (senior captain) and Paul St. Pierre opening some big holes.

The Skippers' problem, according to head coach Tony Rolfe, was keeping the momentum going when Norwell's defense challenged.

"We moved the ball well, but we didn't seem to have that big play to sustain drives."

Cohasset Head Coach
Tony Rolfe

"We moved the ball well," he said, "but we didn't seem to have that big play to sustain drives."

The Clippers got into the end zone on their second drive of the second half. The play of the drive came on a fourth down in Cohasset territory, when Chappell hit senior captain Billy Arria, who made the catch with two defenders on him and then rumbled his way down to the 1-yard line. Pye would punch it in on the very next play, and with the extra point going wide, it was 9-0 Norwell.

That would be it for points on the evening for the Clippers. The Skippers defense, after giving up 36 points the prior week to Abington, turned it around and gave a strong performance.

"We expected that to happen," Rolfe said. "That was just one of those nights against Abington were nothing seems to work for you. We were much better this time."

The Cohasset offense got on the board on its very next drive, culminating in a three-yard run from Dorian. Senior Robert Murley converted the extra point to bring Cohasset within two.

The Skippers were driving to take the lead late in the fourth quarter, but the Norwell defense saved its best for last. Clippers senior Jake Corcoran - who has been putting together a very solid season - came up with a big interception with about two minutes to go. Norwell ran out the clock from there, and earned themselves a sweet victory.

Sullivan said senior safety Andrew O'Donnell and senior captain lineman Christian Comeau came up with clutch plays on defense down the stretch. The Norwell coach also credited his line - center Mike Rapa, guards Comeau and Andrew McClendon, tackles Ted Kleber (senior captain) and Long, and ends Arria and Donoghue - for also playing a strong game.

For both teams, Thanksgiving will be the season finale, as Norwell travels to Hanover and Cohasset will pay a visit to Hull.

has not had the win-loss success that the team was hoping for. Arment says that while he and his teammates are disappointed, they're nobt going to be moping around or feeling sorry for themselves about it.

"I don't think this season is a failure, and I don't think anyone else believes that, either," Arment said.

Although his team lost its last game (a 9-7 loss in Norwell last Friday), Cohasset head coach Tony Rolfe says the team bounced back from the Abington loss and proved they are ready for the season finale.

"I think Friday night [against Norwell] indicated that we're fine," Rolfe said. "We played a good game against a good football team. I see no reason to think we'd have any kind of letdown [against Hull]."

This will be the last high school football game for Cohasset's nine seniors: captains Arment, McCarthy and Dave McKenna, along with Robert Murley, Shane Dorian, Dan Sullivan, Zack Etkind, Scott Wakefield and Steve Abrams.

"It's going to be kind of sad," McCarthy said. "But, you have to let go at some point and let the younger kids have their fun."

Needless to say, though, the seniors are hoping for one last moment of glory on the football field.

"Everyone is taking this pretty seriously," Arment said. "This is the last time we're playing together as seniors, and we're all pretty excited. We want to go out with a bang. If Hull wins, it will give them bragging rights for the rest of their lives. We don't want to have to deal with that."

Tony Rolfe will be coaching his last game this Thanksgiving. After eight years at Cohasset and over three decades of teaching and coaching, Rolfe is retiring at the end of the school year.

COASTAL STARS

In a total team effort, the Squirt A Coastal Stars looked downright scary in their 12-1 thumping of Cape Cod Canal. Tom Dixon scored a hat trick and Jake McDonough scored two goals. Goalie Connor Maher anchored a smothering defense that featured strong play from Andrew Geddes, Jared McCrystal, Dan LeBlanc, and Kevin McDougall, and persistent back and forechecking by the Stars' forwards.

The Stars scored first just over two minutes into the game. Jack Kuppens dug the puck out of the left corner and fed Will Golden in front. Golden was denied, but Terrence Doonan rebounded and stuffed it into the right side.

A minute later, Mike O'Brien's shot from the point was stopped. O'Brien, Will DeCoste and Peter Bent crashed the net, and Bent banged the rebound home. Canal scored on a two-man power play goal with about three minutes left, but then McDonough won a face-off in Canal's end to Dixon. Dixon shot from the left slot to the 5-hole.

With five seconds left in the period, Kuppens, Golden and Doonan forechecked the puck to McDougall in the right circle. McDougall fired into the net through a crowd. Twelve seconds into the second period, O'Brien rushed from center ice and rifled one in from the right circle.

On the ensuing faceoff, McCrystal beat a crowd to the puck and quickly dished to DeCoste. Decoste skated to the right circle and fired a rocket inside the left post. Forechecking by Dixon, Jonathan Spitz and McDonough, and strong point play by Geddes and McCrystal, got the puck to McDonough behind the net. McDonough snuck in and tucked it into the right side.

A few minutes later, McDonough fed Spitz from a faceoff. Spitz shot from the left slot into the back of the net. A beautiful goal on passes from LeBlanc to O'Brien to Bent to DeCoste was waved off, but McDonough Tom Dixon on a faceoff, and Dixon scored from the right side.

Dixon picked up the hat trick a minute later when he scored from in front on a McDonough feed. Less than a minute later, Golden kept the puck in at the blue line and shot on net. Jack Kuppens hustled to the rebound and put it home. McDonough got his second goal on his patented move from behind the net, again beating the defense and tucking it into the right side.

Maher stoned Canal cold, flashing the pad brilliantly on one breakaway in particular. Nine different players scored goals for a complete team effort.

nities early in the second half. First, around the 50 minute mark, Dion stopped a sharp header off a long Aidan Buick throw, then lunged to his right to gobble up a Tristram Norman freekick that ricochet toward the net off a Hanover defender with 20 minutes to play.

"The defense and Dion deserve a lot of credit," said Sylvia. "When the offense was slow, they really kept us in the game. After Dion made a couple big saves, we took a time out and I said to the kids, 'Let's just not have it be him. Let's do it for him.'"

Hanover went on to defeat Seekonk in the sectional final, and played Ipswich last night in the Div. 3 state semifinal at Chelsea High School. The Skippers, meanwhile, finished their season with a 15-5-2 record.

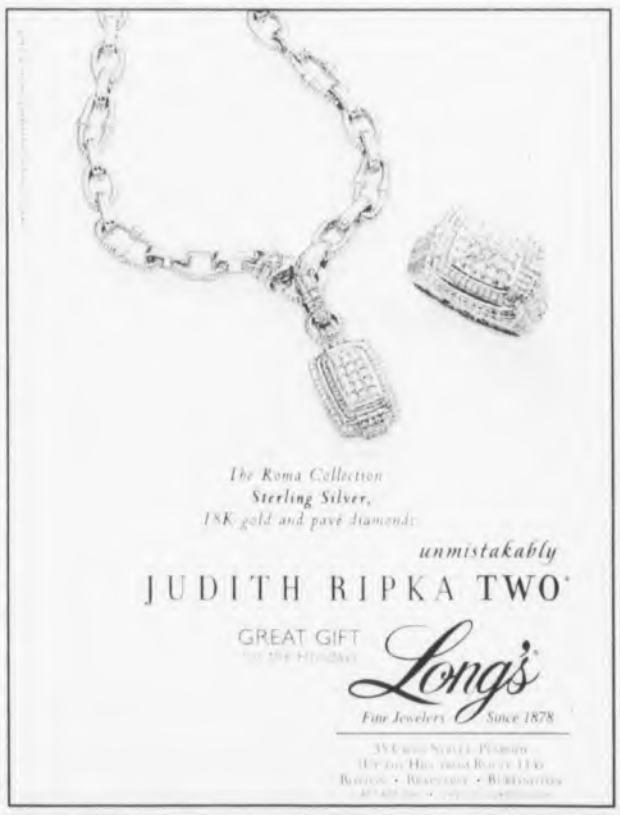
Mathletes finish third in first meet!

By Kevin Barber
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In the first Southeastern Massachusetts Mathematics League competition of the season, the CHS Math squad finished third out of eight competing teams. The meet, held at Whitman-Hanson Regional High School Nov. 3, marked the first time in recent years that supervisor Margaret Lee can recall such an impressive performance. Buoyed by a high score from standout junior Reed Dickinson, the team finished behind just Thayer Academy and Norwell High School.



"The future of the Math Team is very, very bright."
— Aisling Guinee

Competitors were tested for skills in arithmetic, Algebra I, geometry, Algebra II, and advanced topics. In the typical competition each school sends two five-man teams to the meet. Each team member competes in three of the five rounds, while all team members compete in the culminating team round. Finally, all the points of each school are totaled to conclude the meet.

After three more meets this season, a Cohasset division victory (determined by cumulative performance from meet to meet) could lead to the playoffs, contests held in March against other SMML high schools. Beyond this is the New England Math Team Competition, which will decide the regional mathematics champion. However, right now the CHS team, anchored by newcomers like Cam Cope and old hands like Caren Garber, looks forward to competing for the league title as well as for postseason awards, which include the coveted "Mathlete of the Year" award, granted to the top scoring senior of the league.

Co-captains Nils Sceery, Chris Reynolds, Mark Bouchard and Colleen Richardson look forward to maintaining the team's pace for the remainder of the season. "The future of the Math Team is very, very bright," says veteran Aisling Guinee. Richardson adds, "We look forward to finally contending with teams like Hanover or Thayer." After years of frustration, everything is starting to add up for the CHS Math Team.

The next SMML math meet will be held Dec. 1.

Cohasset students raise money for relief effort

Cohasset students raised $5075.56 to support the Katrina Relief effort.

In September, Dr. Walsh asked the Cohasset PSO to organize an all-school fund raiser to support the effort and informed the PSO that an anonymous donor would match the school funds up to $3,500.

"We came up with the idea of 'Lunch Is On Me,'" says Sarah Porter, PSO president. "At each of the schools, a day was set aside for the children to donate the equivalent of their school lunch, $2.50, to the American Red Cross to aid the victims of Hurricane Katrina. The idea was that even the smallest of donations can collectively make a difference." "Lunch Is On Me" raised roughly $1,800.

The schools raised the additional funds through various fundraisers.

At Osgood, the children sold handmade crafts and held a bake sale at Open House, raising an additional $548. At the Deer Hill Open House, fifth graders sold their handmade crafts and sweatshirts and raised $466. At the Middle-High School, the Student Council raffled an i-pod and donated an incredible $2,182, Porter said. With the matching donation, the Cohasset Public Schools raised $8575.56 for the American Red Cross.

"Even the youngest of our students understood the importance of helping out," Porter says. "I received many quarters knotted in plastic baggies and one of our pre-schoolers brought in the proceeds of his even younger sister's lemonade stand.

"Empathy always has been a focus of our Character Education classes. Our students' response to the devastation of Katrina exemplifies a lesson well-learned."

Grace Lucier, Tess Masci, Cadie Higginson and Andrew Kuppens pose with Mr. Lecount following their public speaking debut.

Second graders in the spotlight

Second grade students like those pictured above lead the Osgood School every Monday in opening exercises. The students practice their public speaking skills and build self-confidence at the same time.

Stay tuned to the Cohasset Mariner each week for the latest school news and photos. The Mariner encourages faculty, staff, the PSO, boosters groups, school organizations, and students to email news items and photos to Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. Photos must be jpg attachments. Children in need of special education

The Cohasset Public Schools, in accordance with Federal Law IDEA 2004 and Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 603 CMR 28.00, are in the process of conducting "Child Find." The school department is seeking children with suspected disabilities residing in Cohasset who may be in need of Special Education services.

The Cohasset Public Schools will evaluate students from age three through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular education program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: developmental or intellectual delay, sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability or health impairment. Cohasset Public Schools will also arrange for an evaluation of young people ages 16-21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school.

Cohasset provides all children with an opportunity to participate in the public school programs using a continuous and systematic process to identify students in need of special education. All programs and services are offered without regard to color, race, sex, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.

If you have a child who you suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services, call the Director of Student Services, Linda Gill, at 781-383-6104 for information regarding the referral process.

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

Hello again, I hope everyone enjoyed the beautiful weather we experienced over this past Veterans Day weekend. We are being coaxed into believing that this winter may not be nearly as bad as last years thanks to the phenomenal weather pattern we have experienced. However, deep down we all know that consequently, a longer fall equals a longer winter.

Contrary to popular belief, seniors will be receiving the yearbook at no cost to them.

Ms. Sternala is busy at work as the new vice principal of the Middle School.

Big shout out to the Boys Varsity Soccer Team who made it all the way to the Division III Eastern Semi-Finals only to lose in a true barn-burner to Hanover. Better luck next year men. Now let us dive head first into the plethora of news that we have this week for the CMHS.

• The yearbook staff has been busy at work putting the yearbook together, and has been meeting with advisor, Derry Schwantner, to determine the layout for the publication. Contrary to popular belief, seniors will be receiving the yearbook at no cost to them.

• The Student Awareness Organization will have met Thursday, the 17th at lunch to discuss upcoming events and projects.

• The National Honor Society has been active in the Middle School, tutoring younger students as part of their Service Project. A committee has still not been formed, and if one fails to do so, this year's juniors and seniors will not have a chance to become members.

• Representatives from the school and the Police Department will have participated in a safety workshop in Franklin, sponsored by the Massachusetts Secondary School Administrators Association.

• The Middle School Student Council has been running a food pantry drive and is accepting non-perishable foods, toilet paper, and items of that nature. Three girls from Mr. Buckley's Community Service class have been running a "Pass Back" drive, which is a donation project that accepts old soccer equipment to be recycled and distributed to kids.

• Senior scholarships will be awarded this spring.

• Attention seniors, make sure that you get your college applications in on time, and check the college's web site for deadlines.

• Also seniors, if you are interested in college recommendations from teachers, make sure that you give them all of your information and envelopes by Dec. 1st.

• Today (the 18th) there will be sports physicals in the nurses office after school for any athlete interested. You must have had a physical within the past year to be eligible for a winter sport. Sign up in the nurse's office if you are interested.

• Also today, there will be a Cohasset Diversity Committee Meeting in the High School Library at 8:30 a.m.

• The Winter Sports meeting is going to be held in the High School gym on Monday, the 21st. You must attend if you wish to play a winter sport.

• The Powder Puff game is a go, and it will take place on Wednesday, Nov. 23rd at the High School on Alumni Field at 12:30 p.m.

• Mr. Newkirk's Current Domestic Issues class took a trip to MCI Norfolk, which is a medium security prison, on Thursday, Nov. 10.The class sat across from five convicted felons as they regaled them of how they wound up behind bars. The field trip was part of the Project Youth program that inmates can partake in at the prison.

There you have it, news fit for a king. Maybe this weekend will be as exquisite as lasts...maybe not, either way, the news will keep flowing, and I will keep reporting it. Enjoy the rest of November because with December comes bitter cold.

Cruise lines bring in celebrity chefs for a high-seas treat

By ARLINE and SAM BLEECKER
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

Apparently fame attracts audiences not just to TV cooking shows, but also to the high seas. To bolster bookings, brand-name cruise lines have been recruiting known chefs to whip up culinary magic. The seagoing roster reads like a Zagat Survey of top restaurateurs.

Celebrity chefs crop up on cruise ships in any number of ways; as executive chefs who put their fingerprints on overall menus, like Michel Roux for Celebrity and Martin Yan for Viking River Cruises. Or those who lend their famous shoreside moniker to chic onboard eateries, like Boston's own Todd English on the Queen Mary 2 and Nobu Matsuhisa's Nobu on the Crystal Serenity.

But the icing on the cake for foodies are onboard guest chefs offering classes, demos and tastings.

Crystal Cruises brings some of the hottest new names on the culinary scene to its much-acclaimed annual Wine & Food Festival, which will celebrate its 10th anniversary in 2006.

Said spokeswoman Mimi Weisband, "It's a great learning experience for the guests, adds variety to their evening -- and provides continuing education for our (onboard) chefs."

Slated to appear on the line's ships at various times next year are Christian Thornton, chef/owner of Atria in Edgartown; world-renowned master chef Anton Mosimann, also known as "King of the Kitchen"; Andre Soltner, master chef and senior lecturer for the French Culinary Institute; Hubert Keller, chef/owner of San Francisco's Fleur de Lys; and Alan Wong, chef/owner of Alan Wong's Restaurant in Honolulu.

Passengers will get to rub elbows with the superstars of the kitchen and learn tricks of the trade at demos, interactive seminars and question-and-answer sessions.

Ultra luxe line Silversea Cruises hosts special "Culinary Arts" cruises that feature chefs of Relais & Chateaux-

Radisson Seven Seas' Le Cordon Bleu cooking school allows cruise passengers to bring home culinary tips in addition to travel memories.

Relais Gourmands, the prestigious international association of boutique hotels and restaurants. The program showcases award-winning chefs from around the world -- from Robert Carter, executive chef of Mobil Four-Star and AAA Four-Diamond Peninsu-la Grill at Planters Inn, Charleston, S.C.; to Marc Latulippe, executive chef of the gourmet restaurant at the Kingsbrae Arms hotel in St. Andrews, New Brunswick, Canada.

Seabourn Cruise Line's advising celebrity chef Charlie Palmer (whose restaurants include Aureole and Astra in New York) comes onboard sometimes and invites his friends too to participate in the line's ongoing Chefs' Circle program. For example, this year's lineup included Mary Sue Milliken (Border Grill, Santa Monica and Las Vegas; and Ciudad in Los Angeles); and Robbin Haas (Chispa, in Coral Gables); among others.

The line also will operate its first European Food & Wine Festival on the Seabourn Pride in May, featuring European chefs and special culinary shore excursions. The line's fourth annual Great American Food & Wine Festival takes place next October on a sailing from Gloucester to Nassau.

Radisson Seven Seas Cruises' "Spotlights on Food and Wine" includes cooking workshops by Le Cordon Bleu, which also operates restaurants on the Mariner and Voyager. The workshops cost $395 per person and are offered on select sailings. The workshops include instruction, a galley visit, a group dinner and, when possible, a shoreside market visit.

In partnership with "Gourmet" magazine, Cunard's Queen Mary 2 offers a "Chefs at Sea" program on transatlantic crossings. The interactive experience takes place in the Chef's Galley -- a custom-built demo kitchen -- and culminates in a three-course meal.

Guest chefs this year included Jim Botsacos of Molyvos, an accomplished creator of Greek cuisine in New York; Los Angeles icon Susanne Goin of A.O.C. and Lucques; and Kevin Reilly of New York's Silverleaf Tavern.

Emmy Award-winning Jacques Pepin will host a 14-day culinary odyssey on Oceania Cruises' Regatta from Dover to Stockholm in July. Pepin will be joined by special guest chef Jean-Claude Szurdak, his best friend of almost 50 years.

Passengers can attend culinary demos and question-and-answer sessions, and join one-of-a-kind Epicurean Excursions. As the line's executive culinary director, Pepin also has created signature menus for Oceania.

In partnership with "Bon Appetit" magazine, Celebrity Cruises this winter will reprise its "Savor the Caribbean" series, which draws some of the nation's hottest chefs on seven-night sailings, and during which passengers even can take lessons on shore from some of the Caribbean's finest chefs. Some of the chefs on tap: South Florida's Allen Susser and Mark Militello.

Joanne Weir, host of PBS' "Weir Cooking in the Wine Country," will be aboard Clipper Cruise Line next year. The line's culinary cruises, featuring guests chefs, are offered in the spring and fall along the San Francisco coast.

Holland America's Master Chef Rudi Sodamin has helped develop a "Culinary Signature Cruises," with the line partnering with regional chefs. On board, the guest chef leads demonstrations and classes inspired by the port cities visited. In conjunction with Food & Wine magazine, the line also has introduced a "Culinary Arts Center" program with HAL ships getting state-of-the-art demonstration facilities. For a fee, passengers can participate in hands-on classes. Among the guest chefs on tap for HAL: Cat Cora, the first female American "Iron Chef" and host of the Food Network's "Cat Cora Show," on a cruise on the Statendam in Australia and New Zealand this January.

OBITUARIES

Clifford James Dickson

A Cohasset landmark

Clifford James Dickson, 82, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, died Nov. 13, 2005, at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth, after complications from a heart attack.

Born in the Cohasset Hospital on Ripley Road, and raised in the Cove, he graduated Cohasset High School and joined the Merchant Marine, where he served as a mechanic aboard the Morsal 2 on the Hudson River. He entered the U.S. Navy and served in the Pacific throughout World War II.

After the war he worked at Quincy Adams Boat Yard and continued to develop his remarkable seamanship skills and knowledge. In 1955, he went to work for the Cohasset Yacht Club where he recently celebrated 50 years as Steward. At its 100th anniversary celebration, the Club honored his service by naming the race committee boat the Clifford J. Dickson.

Mr. Dickson, also known as "Cliffy," was considered to be a Cohasset landmark. He was a 51-year veteran of the Cohasset Call Fire Department, and for over 25 years, served as caretaker for the Bellarmine House, a Jesuit community in Cohasset, retiring only this past September.

His many ventures included working at A & G Boat Company where he hauled, launched and repaired boats of all types and sizes; serving as Assistant Harbor Master, and as Shell Fish Warden, and in later years, home security.

Mr. Dickson's criteria for type of employment was simple: it had to be on the water, and it had to allow his beloved dog to go with him. Many remember Cliffy as the man in the truck with all those keys, the red suspenders and duck-billed cap, with his Golden Retriever at his side.

He leaves his wife of 57 years, Peggy Dickson; two daughters, Lee Dickson, and Kelly Dickson, both of Cohasset; his beloved grandchildren, Andrew Graham, Devon Dickson, and Mackenzie Dickson, also all of Cohasset; a sister, Corinne Kabicek of Brook Park, Ohio; his son-in-law Jim Graham; and his close friend, Bill Burke.

A funeral service will be held Nov. 18 at 10 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to the Norwell Visiting Nurse Association, 320 Washington St., Suite #10, Norwell, MA 02061; or to the Cohasset Firemen's Benefit Scholarship Fund, P.O. Box 251, Cohasset, MA 02025.

POLICE BRIEFS

Police Dept. issues scam alert

Cohasset Police Dept. is warning residents of a scam going around that usually targets the elderly, however everyone should take notice. The scam typically plays out by someone calling your residence and saying that you have just won a large sum of money.

In some instances it is referred to as the International Lottery, although there is no such thing. They will then tell you that you will be receiving a check for the winning amount. They will instruct you to deposit that check into your personal account and send them a percentage to cover required 'taxes' or a processing fee, or another similar reason. It is only until days later that it is discovered the check received was a forgery but victims are already minus the funds they sent out.

If anyone receives a call like this, they should hang up, dial *57, and call the Cohasset Police Department at 781-383-1212.

Parking regulations have taken effect

Winter parking regulations will be in effect through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking allowed during winter parking regulations.

Violators subject to a fine of $25.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

THE BIG BANG THEORY

According to a recent global surveys, city dwellers have better hearing than people who live in quiet rural villages. According to German researchers, people living in quiet rural settings have hearing as bad as workers exposes to extremely loud noised. Moreover, such people as musicians and airline pilots were found to have unusually good hearing, despite exposure to noise at work. These findings have led to the theory that very strong noises do the most damage to hearing. On the other hand, researchers speculate that exposure to continual noise "trains" the ear to tolerate it. This would explain why east Asian villagers, whose quiet lives are punctuated by occasional firecracker celebrations, tend to have the poorest hearing.

Some call deafness the silent epidemic. It's painless and invisible, yet more people suffer from it than from heart disease, cancer, blindness, TB, MS and kidney disease put together. The reasons vary and include medical conditions, aging, noise pollution, and heredity. Young and old, from babies to baby boomers to senior citizens, are affected. Find out the state of your hearing. Come consult with a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg in Weymouth. Our services range from thorough consultations, comprehensive testing, expert evaluations, custom fitting, to follow-up care. Phone 781-337-1144.

P.S. Until more evidence accrues to bolster the "big bang" theory of hearing damage, people would be well advised to take the prudent course of protecting their ears from prolonged exposure to loud noise.

Bus service changes aired

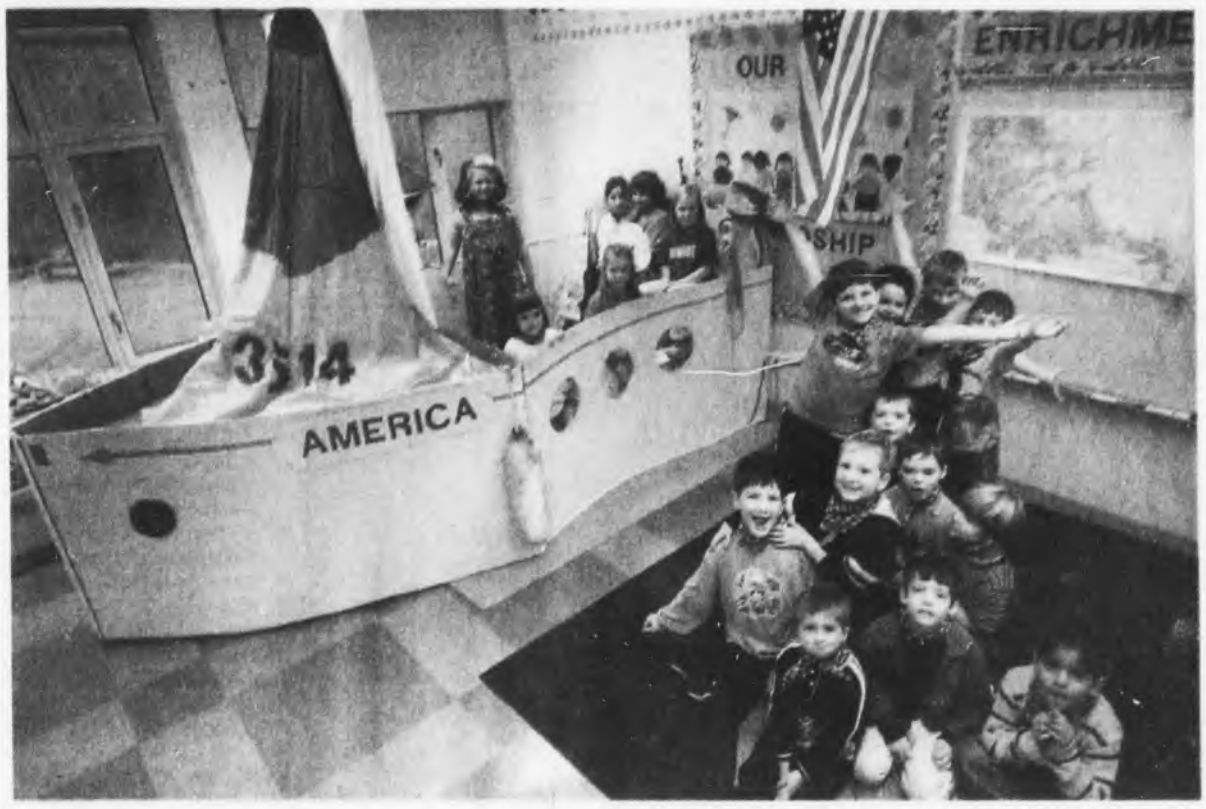
Student fees on the horizon

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There are many changes afoot for the school transportation program. The school department is close to implementing bus fees for students; buses could soon be stored on school grounds after hours rather than at the DPW garage; and hiring an outside company to handle transportation is on the table.

Currently, the school department owns its fleet of buses and pays the drivers' salaries. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh will soon send out a bid to transportation companies — for which responses will be due in mid-January — which will ask them to provide one of two service options for the town.

The first would be for the private company to manage the transportation program using the school department's buses. The company would be responsible for the maintenance of the buses as well as hiring its own staff and paying benefits.



A second option would take the transportation program completely out of house; a private company would use its own buses to transport Cohasset students. The company would hire its own employees, pay their benefits, and would take the buses back to its home base at night.

If the town accepts a bid for option two, that would answer the question of where the town should store its buses. The fleet is currently parked at the Department of Public Works garage on Cedar Street when not in use, but the DPW says it needs more space and the buses may have to go.

In the past, school buses were stored in the middle-high school parking lot. However, the school committee said it might not be the best alternative for a number of reasons. Two of the buses must be plugged in at night and therefore need an electrical outlet. In addition, the school committee is worried about potential vandalism if the buses are parked at the school. Outdoor lighting would Pete Taylor, who was a familiar figure at Walsh and Packard in Hingham for the past five years, is opening his own repair business at Cohasset Hardware.

If it's broken – this guy can fix it

Former W&P employee opens own business

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Pete Taylor likes to fix things.

So the former engineer quite literally took matters into his own hands about five years ago operating a small, "fix-it" service at Walsh and Packard in downtown Hingham.

The recent closing of Walsh and Packard hasn't slowed him down or dimmed his enthusiasm for rewiring lamps, fixing small appliances or sharpening knives, just to name a few.

"The large box stores have shown no interest in the local services market. It is this void that the Service Center looks to fill."
— Pete Taylor, business owner

Taylor, 60, is opening up shop upstairs at Cohasset Hardware at 40 South Main St. where he is starting his own business and hopes to attract customers from the Hingham, Hull and Cohasset area.

The Hingham resident, who says he is not ready to retire, developed an affinity for fixing things when, some 30 years ago, he moved into an old house on Main Street in the Pear Tree Hill Historic District that provided endless challenges.

"I spent a lot of time in the hardware store," Taylor recalls. "I love the way Walsh and Packard was set up with customer service as

New preschool, new full-day kindergarten get high marks

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset's youngest students are getting a solid educational foundation. Whether through the newly formed integrated preschool, new full-day kindergarten program, or the half-day kindergarten program, school department heads say children are off to a great start.

Director of Student Services Linda Gill provided the school committee at its Nov. 17 meeting with an update year on the integrated, tuition-based preschool at Osgood. Integrated programs have special education students in the same classroom with regular education students.

"We've gotten really positive feedback for both the full and half day classes."
— Janet Sheehan, Osgood principal

"There are 24 students in the integrated preschool" but the program can accommodate 28, she said. Two of the four open slots are reserved for special education students, but Gill said parents who had wanted to enroll their regular education children in the preschool will have one more shot.

She will conduct a lottery for the two regular education slots, in the same manner as the first lottery was conducted for the beginning of the school year. The two slots will be open for the second half of the year only, meaning parents will only have to pay a half-year of tuition.

There had previously been a preschool in operation at Osgood, but it was run by the South Shore Educational Collaborative. While

Banking on relief

Feeding the hungry at the forefront of organization's goals

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of articles focusing on the various food pantries which serve South Shore communities. This year's CNC/South Gifts of Hope campaign will highlight the work and needs of area food pantries.

By Seth Jacobson

The statistics are staggering.

In Eastern Massachusetts alone, nearly 517,000 people are going hungry. Thirty-eight percent of the families in the Commonwealth have had to choose between paying for home utilities and food, while 26 percent of them have had to choose between food and medical care.

Those figures come from an organization that is on the front-line of the battle against hunger — the Greater Boston Food Bank.

YOUR COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER CARES

The food bank is now almost 25 years old and serves as one of the largest hunger-relief organizations in New England. Food pantries around the state visit the bank every day to pick up quality food in bulk and stock their shelves.

Greater Boston Food Bank President and CEO Catherine D'Amato said more than 600 charitable food agencies, including food pantries, soup kitchens and emergency shelters, use the food bank. She added many of those agencies are from the South Shore, where hunger is just as much of a problem as anywhere else in the state.

"Hunger is consistently a problem," D'Amato said. "More people are in poverty. There's greater disparity between the rich and the poor. With housing, energy and medical costs the way they are,

Affordable housing consultant could be hired to assist Cohasset

CPC recommends spending $20,000

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Imagine getting more money than you asked for.

It can happen, even in Cohasset where wielding the budget ax is usually the norm.

But the Community Preservation Committee – which could get the reputation as the good news group – has a pot of money which it willingly recommends be provided to qualifying projects and programs.

In this case, the CPC is recommending spending $20,000 to hire a housing consultant to help the soon-to-be-formed Cohasset Housing Partnership Committee, an advisory committee to be appointed by selectmen to advocate for affordable housing in town.

That's $7,500 more than the $12,500 Town Manager Bill Griffin asked for in his CPC proposal last week.

Voters at the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting will have the final say whether to provide funds for the consultant. The board of selectmen recommended the article unanimously this week.

Griffin presented a detailed proposal that Town Planner Liz Harrington helped draft enumerating the hours and tasks of the consultant, who would be paid $125 an hour. But the CPC thought the estimates were too conservative.

"Are you asking for enough money?" Ivimey asked. After some discussion among CPC members, he said the consultant's role could be expanded to other boards in town.

For example, planning board chairman Al Moore, who also sits on the CPC, noted his board had misinformation about what qualifies as affordable housing.

> "There's an awful lot going on around affordable housing. It would be worth it to get someone who can help us cut through all that."
> — Al Moore, community preservation committee

He also pointed out the two basement apartments in the historical society's Paul Pratt building and how difficult it was for the historical society to get information on affordable housing guidelines for that project at the time.

"There's an awful lot going on around affordable housing," Moore said. "It would be worth it to get someone who can help us cut through all that."

CPC member Nathaniel Palmer said he was comfortable with the higher funding figure if there was a "deliverable."

The committee decided that reviewing the draft affordable housing plan, which is part of the master plan would be the deliverable. Griffin noted that "many say the affordable housing plan falls short."

CPC members also agreed a big part of the consultant's job would be educating the town on affordable housing issues.

However, CPC member Margy Charles, who ultimately supported the recommendation, was concerned that the consultant could stall the efforts toward affordable housing for seniors. She said she didn't want to hear "oh, we have to wait until this guy reviews all this." She stressed an awful lot of research has already been done.

Moore said the consultant could actually help speed things up. "There's a tremendous amount more that needs to be understood about who qualifies," he said. "Someone has to know why their elderly mother who is still in her house doesn't qualify."

The CPC voted to recommend paying the consultant $10,000 to review the draft housing plan and $10,000 to help educate town boards and the housing partnership on affordable housing issues.

Money from the Community Preservation Fund can be spent in three specific areas: open space; affordable housing; and historic preservation. Each year, the Community Preservation Committee must spend or bank 10 percent of its annual revenue on each of those areas. All CPF expenditures in Cohasset must be approved by a vote at Town Meeting.

Money for the fund comes from a 1.5 percent real estate tax surcharge and state matching funds. The town adopted the Community Preservation Act in 2001.

CPC fund receives dollar-for-dollar match

On Oct. 15 the town was notified its Community Preservation Fund would receive $278,306 from the Massachusetts Department of Revenue. This is the fourth consecutive year that the Commonwealth matched dollar-for-dollar all money raised by Cohasset through the Community Preservation Act.

The money received from the Commonwealth was deposited into Cohasset's Community Preservation Fund and combined with the revenues raised locally by assessing a 1.5 percent surcharge against real property values. The fund is spent on projects endorsed by the Community Preservation Committee and then approved by Town Meeting.

The Community Preservation Committee recommends appropriating money from the Community Preservation Fund on projects supporting low and moderate income housing, historical preservation, and open space acquisition and preservation, CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey explains.

The money provided by the Department of Revenue is raised by a surcharge assessed at all Recorder of Deeds offices each time someone records a deed or mortgage on the land records.

For more information call, Stuart Ivimey at (781) 383-2604.

Student fees on horizon

need to be greatly increased, which could be problematic for neighbors and would also increase the school's energy bill. The committee said it would feel much safer if the buses were kept someplace with a gate or fence.

Facilities manager Brian Adams said he will continue to work with the DPW and school department to find a solution to the bus storage problem.

Walsh said in the event the school department continues to use its own buses it should look into leasing a new bus every few years that would mean eventually all the town-owned buses would be replaced with new, leased buses. "That way, we would constantly have new buses coming in" and avoid mechanical problems, she said. Walsh said the schools do not have a replacement plan set up with the town.

School committee member Alfred Slanetz pointed out, however, the school committee may decide to keep the transportation program as is. While looking at a replacement schedule for the buses will still be a need, continual replacement might not be necessary.

Slanetz said the transportation department's current mechanic Martin Hale reported many of the buses are in good shape, and as long as the parts remain available, he can continue replacing and updating the old parts so the buses will continue to run smoothly. Hale said some of the bus bodies rust out before the engines wear out so keeping the buses might save more money in the long run than continually replacing buses that could have more miles to go. "It might make sense to keep them," said Slanetz.

Walsh said that question will be answered once the bids come in this January. She said a company could reply it wants to take over Cohasset's transportation but use its own buses, which would leave the school department with a decision to make regarding its own fleet. She said the department could choose to sell all its buses or retain a few to enable the town to provide transportation for the athletic program and special education students.

Walsh added it has been recommended in both bid packages that the companies hire the employees currently working for the district.

Bus fees

But no matter which direction the transportation department goes in, one thing is almost a certainty: the implementation of bus fees. Although it has been discussed for years, the school committee says the data is currently being compiled that could make it a reality.

School business manager Dave DeGennaro said he has been working to figure out how many households are outside the two-mile radius for which the school department is required to provide transportation to help determine what the potential revenue would be. In addition, school committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said there is another segment of the population that cannot be charged and will have to be figured into the equation, as schools must provide transportation for those students who live in areas unsafe for walking. That includes any student who must cross Rte. 3A or the Greenbush train tracks to get to school.

School committee chairman Jamie Williams said other options the school department will have to look into are what it would cost to hire crossing guards in certain areas to ensure children get to school safely, and what to do about traffic if suddenly there is a sharp spike in the numbers of parents driving their children to school. However, she said the bottom line is, "the more money we can divert from line items, the more money will be available for the classrooms."

Schools fiscal 2007 budget process starts

Supt. of schools Denise Walsh said the first round of budget requests are coming in from department heads which will be used to build the fiscal 2007 school department budget. She said she will build the budget from the ground up, beginning at zero and factoring in only those items needed for the schools.

"You will see new programs because they are needs," she said, explaining she will budget for programs and staff to meet state guidelines.

School committee member Alfred Slanetz reminded the committee Town Manager Bill Griffin would like to see the current budget process change. Slanetz said it was his understanding Griffin wanted to see budgets presented that would be within the allowable 2-1/2 percent annual increase without an override.

Slanetz said to ensure the town presents a balanced budget to Town Meeting – anything beyond the 2-1/2 permit limit should be included in a supplemental budget. The town has routinely presented Town Meeting with budgets that include override figures. This year, the override passed at Town Meeting, but failed at the ballot box. Therefore, the budget must be amended at the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting.

At a budget summit held with the selectmen, advisory committee and school committee last month, Griffin said if the budget that had been passed this spring had been within the 2-1/2 confines with the option to increase spending if the override passed, there would be no need to amend the budget at the Special Town Meeting.

Walsh said, however, the school department goes through a different budget process than the town budget. She said unless she is directed differently by the school committee, she will prepare a needs-based budget "and will that be within the 2-1/2? Definitely not." She said the schools have too many factors to take into account such as special education costs that can change at any time and the 2-1/2 increase does not cover those expenses.

School board uneasy about new proposed budget policy

Say $25K transfer ceiling is too high

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A new budget policy is being considered for the school department. If approved, the school committee would only be notified of transfers which are more than $25,000.

At the committee's Nov. 17 meeting, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh discussed a memo she had sent to the board that included a motion for the board's consideration which stated: "In keeping with the need for periodic reconciliation of the school department's budget, the school committee will consider requests for transfers of funds as they are recommended by the superintendent. A majority vote of the committee is required to transfer items exceeding $25,000 within the major categories of the school department budget."

In other words, the school committee would only be notified of those line item transfers that are $25,000 or more.

Unlike the municipal side of the budget, by state law Town Meeting approves the bottom line school department budget not the individual line items. Therefore the schools can transfer funds among line items if needed.

As an example of how the new policy would work, Walsh explained the utility line item will likely need some kind of transfer due to the high cost of natural gas. She said hypothetically if the utilities line item needed a $40,000 transfer, that request would come before the board.

"We want to bring the school committee into the loop sooner on anything that exceeds $25,000," she said.

However, school committee chairman Jamie Williams and vice chairman Alfred Slanetz both felt transfers, no matter what their size, should be brought before the committee.

"It was my understanding a superintendent could not move money between line items without school committee approval, bar none. That is what I was told at school committee training," Williams said.

Walsh said many school departments have policies that allow their superintendents to make transfers up to a certain amount without school committee approval.

Slanetz said companies would never be run like that in the business world. "I think we should be advised of any transfers being made, not just the $25,000 ones. I don't like to see transfers happen without being told in advance," he said.

However, member Pam Wilson said there should be leeway with money transfers. For instance, if the buses need new tires immediately, Walsh should not have to worry about contacting the school committee before making a transaction.

But Slanetz pointed out there should be money set aside in the transportation line item which could be expended to cover the cost, and a transfer would not be necessary.

"We need to continually track line items. I think we (school committee) should have even tighter control," he said.

Member Adrienne MacCarthy said in her opinion, the superintendent is in charge of a $12 million budget and "however the pie ends up slicing" it is safe under her watch.

But Slanetz said he wants to be informed if money is going to be moved around "I think we should have a far smaller amount, maybe $5,000," he said. Wilson and Williams agreed.

Williams speculated the new policy could allow a superintendent to come in and move $24,000 from several different areas and before the school committee would know it — hundreds of thousands of dollars could be moved.

Slanetz added he believes it is in the best interest of the school committee to "show the town that we're managing the funds. It's important for us to know whether we're running a deficit or making transfers," he said.

But school committee member Rick Flynn said the committee has policies in place to protect its funds and feels the town is getting too involved in the school department's finances. "Pretty soon we'll have to ask the town to sharpen a pencil," he said.

Slanetz pointed out what Walsh is proposing would actually give the school committee less control over finances.

Walsh said at every meeting when the school committee approves the Warrant, it is approving all the transactions which have been made. She said if the school committee wants to be apprised of every transfer beforehand and be responsible for the approval of each transfer "you'll do it at every meeting."

But Slanetz said it is extremely important for the school committee to "demonstrate to the community we are managing the finances of the schools."

Walsh said the school committee would therefore be spending a good deal of time discussing every minor transfer that comes along.

Slanetz replied, "I think it's a very important point because we need all the credibility we can get."

Because there was a lot of information for the committee to consider, a vote on the proposed policy was postponed until its Dec. 1 meeting.

There will be open bowling, face painting a turkey trot and hayrides on the Common. Rusty Skippers Band will entertain and at the end of the day the Christmas tree is lighted on the Common. This day is sure to put you in the Holiday Spirit.

TEA HISTORY

The Colonel Thomas Lothrop-Old Colony Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution recently held a meeting at the quaint Windsor Tea Shop and Tea Room, 1 Pleasant St. The hostess presented a wonderful and informative program on the history of tea. It was discovered thousands of years ago in China and its history was particularly interesting to DAR members. The Boston Tea Party, which took place in 1773, was one of the protests that preceded the American Revolution. Jared Joy, Abraham Tower and James Stoddard from Cohasset were participants.

The DAR attended in the dress of the period and enjoyed several varieties of tea brewed in large pots and a variety of sweets. Needless to say, it was a lovely afternoon. There are also many interesting gifts to choose from in the shop. With Christmas fast approaching, DAR members say they are planning to return.

MAGICAL WEEK

The South Shore Natural Science Center is being transformed into the Magical Science Center for December Vacation Week, Harry Potter style. Dan Cotton honored for work at Cohasset Central Cemetery

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Throughout the course of his 92 years, Cohasset resident Daniel Cotton has spent countless hours volunteering his time to make the town he loves — and has lived in for the last 59 years — a better place.

While he is probably most known for the three years he spent on the school committee or the decade he spent on the planning board, Cotton has been honored for the outstanding work he has done over the years for Cohasset's privately-owned Central Cemetery at Joy Place.

Dressed in a suit jacked and tie, Cotton made his way into the dining room at Sunrise of Cohasset where he lives, last Friday, and was greeted by friends, family, and food. In a private dining room set aside for the occasion, Cotton was the guest of honor at a luncheon held in recognition of his many contributions to the cemetery, including serving as its president.

Knowing only that something special was going on, Cotton was surprised when he arrived to see the familiar faces of fellow members of the cemetery's board of directors, including Sheila Evans, Ed Woods, and former state senator Bill Weeks. Also in attendance were current President of the Central Cemetery Committee Anne Montague, Cotton's daughter Elizabeth Sherblom, who had traveled from Maine for the occasion, and his personal caregiver Janet Ditmar.

Montague presented Cotton with a letter on behalf of the committee which thanked him for his years of service. In addition, it stated there will always be a permanent monument of appreciation at the cemetery, as the committee has plans to name its new columbarium, the Daniel C. Cotton Columbarium, in his honor. The columbarium, which is a vault with compartments to store ashes, is slated to be built in the fall of 2006. It will run along the lower hillside of Central Avenue. Montague noted that piece of land "has one of the most beautiful vistas of Little Harbor and the cemetery."

Dan Cotton, right, shown with his daughter Elizabeth Sherblom and former senator and member of the Cohasset Central Cemetery Committee Bill Weeks, was honored for the work he has done over the years for the cemetery during a luncheon held last Friday at Sunrise of Cohasset.

Members of the Cohasset Central Cemetery Board of Directors Bill Weeks, Ed Woods, and Sheila Evans attended a luncheon in honor of Dan Cotton, sitting, last Friday. The three were there to thank Cotton for his many years of service to the cemetery, and inform him one of the new columbariums to be constructed at the cemetery in 2006 will be named in his honor.

During the time he spent on the cemetery's board of directors and as president, Cotton was very active in fund-raising. In the letter written by Montague, she states Cotton will always be "remembered by many as being the real strength and energy behind endowing this beautiful colonial cemetery and thereby allowing it to stay under the auspices of the board of directors and the lot owners."

"You led what was probably the most successful fund-raising drive ever conducted by Cohasset Central Cemetery. That success is due primarily to your willingness to pick up the ball after (past president) Pete Cumner's death and providing the leadership to start a capital campaign, which you doggedly pursued on your own," she stated.

"You led what was probably the most successful fund-raising drive ever conducted by Cohasset Central Cemetery."

— Anne Montague, Cohasset Central Cemetery

Taking a look back into the history of the cemetery, added to the National Register of Historic Places in 2003, Woods said there was a time when the Central Cemetery did not have an endowment and upkeep was a problem. He said the Boy Scouts, under scout masters Arthur Lehr and Nelson Pratt, used to hand-clip around the head stones to keep the growing grass at bay.

"The scout masters would be on their hands and knees with the boys. Sometimes they'd finish, and sometimes they'd give out for lack of strength," he said. But when Prestcott "Pete" Cumner took over as president, things began to look up.

Evans said at that time the cemetery had run out of space for additional lots so Cumner decided the cemetery should build a new columbarium. "He got the idea from a church in Barnstable, N.Y." that had a columbarium, said Evans. While no one else on the board had ever heard of a columbarium, they all agreed it made sense. "We had no burial space left, and this was a way we could keep serving the town," she said.

Woods said Cumner began fund-raising for the columbarium, and in turn, began growing the endowment for the cemetery as a whole. The first columbarium at the Cemetery was named in his honor. When Cotton took over as president, he continued the work which Cumner had begun, and the men brought the cemetery's endowment up to more than $1 million. Through their efforts, the construction of a second columbarium was possible, and it was named after past committee treasurer Edward E. Tower.

Weeks said during Cotton's presidency, "he led the most effective and successful fund-raising drive the cemetery ever had." In fact, he said with the funds the cemetery now has available for use, "We are able to maintain the cemetery in a manner in which he certainly would approve."

With this honor, Cotton has become the first living resident to be celebrated by the cemetery committee through a columbarium dedication.

While the Daniel C. Cotton columbarium will not be constructed until the fall of 2006, committee president Anne Montague said there is still room available in the Cumner and Tower vaults. For those interested in finding out more, please contact Eleanor Tower Campbell at (781) 383-1436.

Programs praised

Cohasset students attended the preschool, it was not in reality a part of the Osgood School, which meant Cohasset students were paying tuition to the Collaborative to attend school in the town-owned building.

Gill said the old preschool program run by the Collaborative also used to charge the school department to educate the special education students who attended at a cost of roughly $165,000 per year. School districts are required to pay for special education out of district tuitions. The Collaborative was considered out of district because it was not a school-run program.

However, the new preschool charges regular education students $1,500 per year to attend the program and the school department has also cut the cost of having to send its special education students out of district because it can now provide those students with the services they need. The program also brings in enough money to cover the cost of the program's two teachers at $30,000 each. One teacher is with the 3-year-olds in the morning and the other is with the 4-year-olds in the afternoon.

Gill said the school department was able to obtain early childhood grant funding to cover the cost of supplies. In addition, Curriculum Coordinator Nancy Mrzyglod provided some grant funding that allowed the program to set up its classrooms. The program has two classrooms, one for literacy and small motor skills, such as working in a play kitchen, and the other for large motor skills, such as crawling through a play tube. "It's a very exciting place to be," Gill said.

Full-day kindergarten

The kindergarten program is off to a fantastic start this year as well, reported Osgood principal Janet Sheehan. "We've gotten really positive feedback for both the full and half day classes," she said.

There are 99 total students enrolled in kindergarten this year. The full-day program, which is tuition-based, currently has 89 students enrolled, as two students have moved since the beginning of the school year. She said there are five full-day classrooms, four of which have classes of 18 and one which has 17. The half-day kindergarten program, which does not charge a tuition and is the same program as existed at the school prior to beginning the full-day classes, has one classroom of 10 students.

The school committee was pleased to hear of the small class sizes but Sheehan said that may not last.

"I think you should brace yourself for next year's class," which is expected to be 40 more than this year's, she said. Sheehan said with the increase in students, there will need to be some shifting in the program. However, she said the preference of the parents will determine the ratio of full- to half-day classes moving forward.

The full-day program charges parents roughly $1,800 a year in tuition, which is enough to cover the salaries for three of the six kindergarten teachers.

Sheehan said teachers are reporting with the full-day program, they are getting to know the students better. She said both the full- and half-day students are learning the same concepts, although the full-day classes are able to include enhanced components.

For students in the half-day class, teacher Beth Owens-Rigby has been working on enrichment packets that can be taken home to parents to allow the opportunity to continue the learning after school.

Sheehan said the school is very fortunate to have such a dedicated bunch of teachers, and "I really can't say enough about the enthusiasm of this kindergarten team," she said.

School committee member Rick Flynn asked whether having the full-day kindergarten class changes the first grade teachers expectations of what their students should know. Sheehan said there would likely be more students entering first grade as readers.

For more information on the integrated preschool or the half- or full-day kindergarten classes, please contact Principal Janet Sheehan at (781) 383-6117.

School surplus could go into reserve fund with voter OK

Could still be used for SPED tuitions

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"Clearly, Denise deserves the utmost credit for her fiscal magic."
— Rick Flynn, school committee

Town Hall and the school department have come to a resolution regarding where to put $110,000 in left-over fiscal 2005 school department funds.

The school committee voted Nov. 17 to allow the town's director of finance to certify the funds as free cash, and from there, voters at the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting will be asked to transfer the money into the reserve fund. The reserve fund is like a savings account which requires advisory committee approval to be utilized. Once in the reserve fund, the money would be earmarked for out-of-district special education costs.

At its Nov. 17 meeting the school committee praised Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh for her budgetary management, saying without her oversight, the school department would not have ended fiscal 2005 in the black, let alone with money left over. Fiscal 2005 ended June 30.

"Clearly, Denise deserves the utmost credit for her fiscal magic," said school committee member Rick Flynn.

Flynn also praised Walsh for keeping the lines of communication open between the schools and town government.

The schools have money left over for a variety of reasons. In October, Walsh announced the school department did not use $190,652 of its fiscal 2005 funds. She said while interviews for new employees were being conducted, a number of positions were left vacant for a portion of the year. The savings from those months left the schools with a surplus.

The business clerk position was not immediately filled which yielded $14,772; the SPED director/secretary position was open for a portion of the year which yielded an additional $20,225; the medical therapeutic contract services were overestimated and the schools ended up with a $33,721 surplus; teacher aides were laid off which yielded $97,668; and one custodian position was not filled freeing up $24,266, for a total of $190,652.

In light of the situation, Walsh proposed using the excess funds to pre-pay out-of-district special education tuitions for fiscal 2006, which state law allows. Fiscal 2006 started July 1.

Walsh said when funds are left over, school departments can either use the money to purchase materials and supplies (purchases must be made and supplies must arrive before the close of the fiscal year) or pre-pay out of district tuitions for the next fiscal year. As the money was not "found" until after the close of fiscal 2005, the only option for Cohasset schools was to use it to pre-pay the tuitions, she said.

Walsh said she conducted similar transactions in other districts where she has worked and recently won the approval of the Cohasset School Committee to do the same.

However, due to the fact that the town worked hard to find funding for the school department during the fiscal 2005 budget season, both the selectmen and advisory committee were not pleased to hear the school department had a surplus and would use those funds without first consulting with them.

In fiscal 2005, the town passed a $400,000 override for the school department; and an additional $160,500 ($93,500 for utilities and $67,000 for unemployment) was added to the budget at the November 2004 Special Town Meeting. Then because the schools said they were in tough financial shape, the April 2005 Annual Town Meeting added another $100,000 to the school budget as well as $100,000 to the reserve fund to cover any additional fiscal 2005 expenses that might crop up. All tolled, the town allocated an additional $760,500 for the school department.

However, $322,000 was not used ($132,000 of the reserve funds on top of the $190,000 surplus) prompting some to question whether the $400,000 fiscal 2005 Prop. 2-1/2 override was really necessary.

The school department, which had already used roughly $80,800 to pre-pay out of district tuition costs, has now agreed the remaining $109,800 should be put into the reserve fund.

School committee member Alfred Slanetz said he thinks putting the money into free cash, to then be voted into the reserve fund by the town is a smart move. He said he sees this action as extending an "olive branch" to work together with the town as a whole.

Schools accept donation

The school committee has happily accepted a $100 donation given by Bernadette and Liam O'Connell of Linden Drive. The donation will be used to help boost the Cohasset Swim Club, a new joint-swim team between the town of Scituate and Cohasset. The swim team is not affiliated with the Cohasset Swim Center. The school committee publicly thanked the O'Connells for their support.

Schools, police, fire depts. get connected

The school department has changed its cell phone service, which has enabled it to save money and be in communication with the police and fire departments in case there is an emergency. The schools are now using Nextel phones with direct connect that enables all three departments to speak to each other using a walkie-talkie-like function on the phone. School business manager Dave DeGennaro said he will be sitting down with members of the other departments to program the phones to ensure everyone has the phone numbers they need to contact each other.

Rusty Skippers perform holiday pops concert

Horn player John Chapman rehearses for the Rusty Skippers concert that will take place at noon, Dec. 3 at First Parish.

Event is at First Parish Dec. 3

The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset's own adult concert band, will be performing its Annual Holiday Pops Concert at First Parish Church on Saturday, Dec. 3 at noon. The Skippers have been preparing a variety of new holiday selections throughout the fall. Pieces include "Sleigh Ride" made famous by the Boston Pops, "Jingle Bell Rock" and many other familiar tunes and carols of all styles. The concert is free and appropriate for all ages. Donations for Cohasset Food Pantry will be taken. In addition to giving a concert preview at Sunrise Assisted Living in Cohasset on Sunday, Nov. 27 at 2 p.m., The Rusty Skippers will give a repeat performance of the concert at Harbor House in Hingham on Saturday, Dec. 10 at 2 p.m. The Skippers will also be at the lighting of the town tree Friday, Nov. 25, playing other selections.

The Rusty Skippers were formed in 1995 as part of Cohasset Harborfest at the enthusiastic suggestion of the late Rev. Ed Atkinson of First Parish in Cohasset. The Rusty Skippers play under the direction of Steve Biagini, instrumental music director at Deer Hill School. The Band welcomes new members at the beginning of each season. After the December concert schedule is completed, they will reconvene in the early spring to prepare selections for upcoming concerts at the South Shore Festival of the Arts and American Cancer Society Relay for Life, as well as at various nursing homes. Those interested in joining may contact Steve Biagini at the Deer Hill School or email sbiagini@cohassetk12.org.

The Book Sale at Saint Stephen's benefits scholarships for needy children to the Barbara C. Harris summer camp. Hundreds of fair-goers browse books of every description finding gifts for others of just something to pass a few quiet hours themselves.

Alongside the book sale is the Country Store with a Hostess Gifts section along with baked goods and home-made candy. And what book sale would be without a Café to buy coffee, tea, soup and lunch and look over what great reads each one will be taking home? You can find it all upstairs at Saint Stephen's.

On the first floor of Saint Stephen's parish house, the Appalachia Service Project will hold its famous secret room for children. Children pick out and purchase gifts and are helped to wrap them by ASP volunteers so they can be kept "secret" until Christmas.

Down the hill at Second Congregational Church Bates Hall is turned into a holiday boutique filled with hand-crafted holiday gifts and decorations. There is a Kids' Craft Corner where children can make an ornament of their own. A Chowder Bar serves the best Clam Chowder, and each hour fresh lobster and filet mignon are raffled off hourly to "surf 'n turf" winners.

In Parish House of First Parish there awaits treasures such as jewelry, decorative objects, small furniture pieces, toys and more in an unusual "Estate-ish" Sale. At the Swedish Bake Shop shoppers can find cinnamon buns and baked goods served with coffee, juice and tea. The Rusty Skippers concert band will perform a holiday pops concert in First Parish Church at noon.

Santa Claus will make a guest appearance on Cohasset Common from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Children can visit with Santa, and parents can purchase photos in support of the Appalachia Service Project. Finally, The South Shore Choral Arts Society will hold their Christmas Concert the day following the fair, Sunday, Dec. 4 at 4 p.m.

Taking care of our own

The adage that charity begins at home may have even more significance this winter.

Most social service agencies on the South Shore will tell you they're girding for a tough season. They already are seeing a measurable increase in the number of people in need. Couple that with declines in donations and they've got a real problem on their hands.

It's been a tough year all around. The devastation of Hurricane Katrina rightly focused our country's attention on the need to rebuild the lives of people living on the Gulf Coast. Many Americans answered the call to help with contributions to the Red Cross and various other relief agencies. The effort truly brought out the best in the American people.

But it also tapped resources often earmarked for other worthwhile groups. Numerous charitable organizations across the nation and right here in our communities report a decline in giving as people justifiably donated to assist residents in Louisiana and neighboring states.

Now we approach another New England winter, bracing ourselves for skyrocketing fuel costs – just last week it was reported that oil prices have spiked 40 percent; natural gas by 24 percent. It presents a serious challenge for countless families. They'll be relying more than ever on church groups, social service agencies and food pantries to hold it together.

The Great Boston Food Bank expects to distribute more than 30,000 turkeys with all the trimmings this Thanksgiving. The bank works with more than 600 food pantries, soup kitchens and other agencies in our area. The organization can tell you first hand how difficult it has been for many people.

In its first year of operation, the food bank provided 100,000 pounds of food — 24 years later that figure has risen to 25 million pounds of food per year. The organization estimates that 1 in 10 Americans uses a food pantry. That's a lot of hungry customers.

The food bank is not alone in serving the needs of our communities, though. As readers will discover over the course of our six-week Gifts of Hope campaign, there are numerous food pantries filling an important void in our towns. Demand is high and supplies are short.

As part of our annual holiday campaign, we will focus attention on the demands of the food pantries, those who benefit and how we can all offer some assistance. We'll provide readers with addresses and information about each food pantry serving our South Shore communities.

It's not easy asking generous people to reach down and give more. We're all contending with those high fuel bills and fluctuating gas prices. But for those of us who can spare the price of an extra bag of non-perishable goods or forego that $4 latte, we urge you to think about sticking close to home this winter by giving to our Gifts of Hope campaign.

It may sound parochial, but it just might be your neighbor or a family member who benefits.

Readers invited to sign up

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

FAST FACTS

Cohasset held its first Town Meeting on May 7, 1770 in the meetinghouse on the common. Previously, Cohasset had been part of Hingham.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bradley praised on Melanie's Law

TO THE EDITOR:

Now that Melanie's Bill has become "Melanie's Law," it is an appropriate time to give thanks to those in the legislature who worked so hard to make it a reality. One of those people is Garrett Bradley who represents the 3rd Plymouth District.

Within 15 minutes of meeting with Melanie's parents and me, Garrett used his position as vice-chair of the House Judiciary Committee to lobby aggressively for an expedited hearing date for the bill with both the House and Senate Chairs. This was absolutely crucial in assuring that this bill, unlike so many others, would not be buried in study.

As the bill worked its way through the judicial process, Garrett was with us every step of the way encouraging his colleagues to support it. He encouraged us to stay course, fight for our principles and not accept anything less than the most powerful bill possible.

When the final vote came, Garrett backed the Governor on all three of the amendments that were proposed. Two of those amendments passed, and the final product is something we are proud to have Melanie's name associated with.

The 3rd Plymouth District should be proud of Representative Garrett Bradley.

Pedestrian access to train station

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Flash...The MBTA has told us that they may be working on the Pleasant Street crossing very shortly. That's all we know right now. Stay tuned…

Around Town Hall we are known as the "Greenbush Guys." Of course that is our primary focus, but from time to time the Town Manager has asked us to get involved in other projects. We'd like to review one of these projects with you.

The project we're going to review does peripherally involve the Greenbush. By way of explanation, it deals with sidewalks and pedestrian access to the new Greenbush rail station. As you know, the station will be on Route 3A just north of the commercial center where Mary Lou's News, Aveni Dry Cleaners and several other businesses reside. The Greenbush project does not have any pedestrians to access the station from Town. Interestingly enough, Hingham residents will have a pedestrian sidewalk to the Cohasset station, but not Cohasset residents. A number of our residents have expressed concern about this lack of access, going back a number of years ago to the original mitigation discussions. The Town approached the Greenbush Project to offer possible pedestrian enhancements along the railroad right of way. The MBTA will not consider these issues citing cost and safety issues.

Since we started working on the Town's behalf, we have looked for alternate economic ways to construct pedestrian access to the station. Currently sidewalks extend from Scituate to the village to N. Main / Forest Ave. Now, how to best get to the station from here? The first approach was based on the fact that the MBTA has a 12-foot-wide gravel maintenance road parallel to the tracks from the station to Lower King Street. We thought this would be a perfect place for pedestrian access. And, it would be a very direct route. But, the MBTA refused to even consider the idea based on safety concerns.

Next, we looked at the feasibility of a sidewalk along North Main Street from Forest to the station. One look at this potential pathway convinced us that this would be a major engineering and permitting nightmare with the wetlands, and severe drop-offs along side N. Main St.

This left us with the option of Lower King St. to Route 3A and then to the station. Now the big part, "How do we pay for it?" The Cohasset Water Department is helping by designing and permitting the section from the station to King. St. along Route 3A.

Just coincidentally, about a month ago we received notification of a grant program from the Executive Office of Transportation for Transportation Oriented Development (TOD). The objective of this grant is to encourage development in close proximity of transportation hubs in concert with the Commonwealth's "Smart Growth" program. A sub portion of this grant is for increased bicycle or pedestrian access to a transportation hub. Bingo!

Clearly the Greenbush station is a new transportation hub and the sidewalk along King and Route 3A are in close proximity to MBTA property. And, as Route 3A is developed, sidewalks become important to connect the various offices and businesses. A sidewalk to the station also allows pedestrian access to Wompatuck Park, since the MBTA is constructing a 1.5 mile walking path from the station into Wompatuck Park.

So, we were able to put together a grant request (Request # 11.14.05 A) for this sidewalk route. We were fortunate to obtain a number of endorsement letters for this grant request which included, the MBTA, Sen. Bob Hedlund, Rep. Garrett Bradley and local endorsement, among which are, the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, the Planning Board, the Recreation Board, and the Board of Health.

We also added a second grant request (Request # 11.14.05 B) for sidewalk from Forest & King to Surrey Drive along Forest Ave. and for sidewalk access from N. Main St. to Rocky Lane. (Note, that the Town has already agreed to construct sidewalk from its current ending south to Surrey Drive.) The reason we included the Rocky Lane portion is for accessibility to this neighborhood. The MBTA will place sidewalk on the bridge deck itself, but none from N. Main to the bridge, or from the bridge to the residential area. We feel that this is very critical for pedestrian safety, especially considering the severe slope of the approach to the bridge from N. Main St.

We will not hear from the TOD authorities until February or March of 2006. Let's all hope the Town gets a favorable response.

Teachers' points are spelled out

COMMENTARY

ED LEONARD & ED LEARY

Why are those teachers doing this? Why are they taking it out on the kids? I overheard these comments the other day, an obvious reference to the decision of the Cohasset Teachers Association to institute a limited work to rule policy as a result of the continued intransigence of the School Committee in its negotiations with the teachers.

For those who are not familiar with the term, "work to rule" means that teachers will perform only those duties and responsibilities specifically mandated by the now-expired contract. After a long and emotional debate, teachers have agreed not to participate in certain activities that they have voluntarily provided in the past, including such uncompensated actions as chaperoning dances, coaching powderpuff, conferencing with parents outside school hours, offering extra help sessions beyond contractual requirements, participating on voluntary committees, etc. In addition, teachers have established a deadline of Dec. 1st for the submission of requests to write college recommendations.

Please understand this important point: we undertake these actions with great reluctance. By nature, teachers are non-confrontational; we are in this profession not for the financial rewards, but because we are committed to the children. Unfortunately, we quite literally have no other choice at this point. We have been negotiating in good faith for over a year, with minimal progress being made. At an open forum conducted before the school committee elections, two candidates expressed their intention to participate in regular informal discussions with teachers; unfortunately, they have not seen fit to follow through on these promises. We have conducted informational pamphleting at open houses; we have expressed our concerns at school committee meetings; we have communicated our concerns in the local newspapers.

All to no avail.

A limited work to rule has one function: to demonstrate the extraordinary amount of time and effort that teachers voluntarily donate to the schools and the students.

•The Camp Marist experience involves teachers and other staff giving up two days away from their families, in addition to countless hours of preparation and planning to make this valuable experience work for the freshman class. Unpaid.

• For the eighth grade field trip to NYC 10 teachers arrive at the school by 5 a.m. and leave the building at 11:30 p.m. Unpaid.

• The Social Awareness Organization involves students in such laudable activities as the Relay for Life, the Multiple Sclerosis Walk, trips to Father Bill's, the Breast Cancer Walk, etc. These are weekend activities; the advisor is unpaid.

• The science department's trip to Belize requires an astounding amount of time preparing and coordinating this international scientific experience. Unpaid.

• The Foreign Language exchange likewise requires an immense commitment of time. The unpaid advisor was dismayed to learn that the Scituate advisor receives a stipend.

• A faculty member for the Summer Institute has estimated over 400 hours of voluntary time writing grants to fund this educational experience. Unpaid.

• For the annual Powderpuff Game, a 35-year tradition, faculty members spend two weeks after school working with the teams to ensure that they enjoy the experience, learn something about football, and play safely. Staff members officiate. Unpaid.

• Elementary teachers conduct countless parent meetings outside the school day. Unpaid.

• One teacher spent this past week writing 65 letters of recommendation. While this may be an unusual number, most teachers of seniors, particularly in the math and English departments are inundated with requests for recommendations. Unpaid.

• Literally, hundreds of hours of staff time were spent preparing for the recent NEASC accreditation, in which CMHS received glowing commendations. Unpaid.

• There are teachers at the high school before 6 a.m.; others do not leave the building before 4:30 in the afternoon. This is time spent outside contract hours preparing for classes, correcting papers, working on other professional responsibilities. Unpaid.

• Teachers chaperone dances and other activities. Unpaid.

What's the point? The teachers have decided to institute a limited work to rule with great reluctance. We understand that it will be difficult for the students and their families when they don't receive the level of service that they have become accustomed to. As stated above, we have no other options. Teachers can't go on strike; we are bound by the provisions of a now-expired contract. We honestly hate to do this; it has already produced a great amount of conflict and anxiety for the staff. We feel that we have been misled about available funds; we have been disrespected in the negotiations process; our efforts to move forward have been spurned.

There are four points that the teachers have proposed:

• A wage package that is commensurate with surrounding towns, shows respect for the efforts of the staff to provide a quality service to the town, and represents a sincere effort to retain and attract qualified staff in an extremely competitive environment.

• Adequate provisions to provide tuition reimbursement for professional development.

• Compensation for nurses that isn't at the bottom of the scale when compared to other towns.

• Adequate planning time for elementary teachers to conduct parent meetings, SPED meetings, team meetings, class preparation, etc.

These proposals do not seem unreasonable to us. We ask the parents and the townspeople to help us solve this dilemma by urging the school committee to settle this impasse and to provide a fair and equitable contract that will benefit the staff, the schools, and, ultimately, the students.

Ed Leonard and Ed Leary, for the Cohasset Teachers Association.

One answer to Prop 2-1/2

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Here's something for mayors and selectmen across the South Shore to consider when they put together the municipal budget after their insensitive voters have rejected once again a Prop. 2-1/2 override.

The two-member town council of Clark, Texas, has just voted unanimously to change the name of the town to Dish, Texas.

In return, each of the 55 homes in community will receive free Dish satellite TV equipment and basic service for the next 10 years from EchoStar Communications of Englewood, Colo., the operator of the Dish Network.

The advantage is obvious. The money that would have been spent foolishly on the boob tube can now be directed to the town treasury where it belongs in the form of taxes and, who knows, maybe Dish, Texas, can have a Little Dig of its own someday.

"We really look at this as kind of a rebirth for our community," said Mayor Bill Merritt, noting that the lure of free TV might even attract business and residents to Dish, although some of the TV I've seen lately might have the opposite effect.

Who knows, this may be the coming thing in municipal finance, renaming the town in return for a generous slice of the corporate advertising budget. If you don't like it, there's always a Proposition 2-1/2 override as a last resort.

After all, it has been going on for years in the sports world. Take that building in Boston's North End, for example. It started as the Shawmut Center, switched to the Fleet Center when Fleet bought Shawmut, then to TD Banknorth Garden when Bank of America bought Fleet.

What's next? Stay tuned to the financial pages.

It wasn't that long ago when semi-pro baseball was big in these parts and members of the Braintree White Sox wore Woodsum Lumber Company ads on their backs and the Weymouth Town Team advertised Rhines Lumber.

Myself, I even wore a softball jersey with the logo "EB Fin," for East Braintree Finishing Company, now a housing development, and a basketball jersey bought and paid for by Torrey's, a now defunct South Braintree Pharmacy.

Didn't I read the other day that one of the towns hereabouts was thinking of putting ads on its police cars?

Renaming towns as advertising gimmicks is not new, either, although it seems to be happening more and more lately as taxpayers begin to drag their feet around budget time.

Five years ago, the 345 good folks of Halfway, Ore., up and voted to change the name of their hamlet to Half.com for a year, for which they received $100,000 and a new computer lab for their school.

"Word of mouth is the most powerful form of communication and marketing out there," said Mark Hughes, the CEO of Buzzmarketing, the genius who negotiated the Half.com deal.

He said that to the Associated Press by telephone from a town now named Santa in Idaho. He is trying to get them to change the name to "Secretsanta.com," for reasons that escape me.

HEALTH NOTES

Tips for managing those neat new devices

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The onslaught of holiday advertising is sure to cause installation of a number of neat new devices in homes all over the country. It's not necessarily appropriate to become paranoid about the effect these gadgets will have on us or our kids, but simple caution indicates that some rules may become important as things like ipods, TV in cell phones, central media stations and improved communication devices become more pervasive.

Cell phones

Let's face it, cell phones are used in motor vehicles. With a cell phone in the car you can call for help or report a dangerous situation. However, many accidents have been linked to cell phones. If you drive with a cell phone, avoid unnecessary calls and always make the driving task your top priority. Here are a few basic safety tips from the Canada Safety Council:

• Be observant —Don't concentrate on looking or listening to the extent that you miss the common external visual and audible warnings. Remember when you're about, your senses have several purposes: The most important is to keep you out of trouble.

• Keep your eyes on the road — Learn how to operate your phone without looking at it. Memorize the location of all the controls, so you can press the buttons you need without ever taking your eyes off the road. If your phone is new, practice using it and the voice mail while your car is stopped. Practice will make you feel more comfortable — and safe — using it when you are on the road.

• Use a hands-free model — A hands-free unit lets you keep both hands on the wheel while you talk on the phone. Attach the microphone to the visor just above your line of vision, so you can keep your eyes on the road. You can then talk on the phone as if you were talking to a passenger.

• Stay in your lane — Pull into the right-hand lane while talking, so you only have to worry about traffic to the left.

• Use speed dialing — Program frequently called numbers and your local emergency number into the speed dial feature of your phone for easy, one-touch dialing. When available, use auto answer or voice-activated dialing.

• Never dial while driving — If you must dial manually, do so only when stopped. Pull off the road, or better yet have a passenger dial for you.

• Take a message — Let your voice mail pick up your calls in tricky driving situations.

• Stop talking — Keep conversations brief so you can concentrate on your driving. If a long discussion is required, if the topic is stressful or emotional, or if driving becomes hazardous, end your call and continue when you're not in traffic.

• Keep the phone in its holder — Make sure your phone is securely in its holder so it won't pop out and distract you when you are driving.

• Don't take notes while driving — If you need to take something down, use a tape recorder or pull off the road.

• Be a wireless samaritan — Wireless enables you to report crimes, life-threatening emergencies, collisions or drunk drivers.

iPod safety

• Stop iPod theft!. - stay alert - keep your ipod out of sight - don't stay by train doors when using electronic devices. Be alert for pickpockets when listening to music; change the earpiece color when riding in public. — Compliments of the NY Public Transit System & NYPD.

Online safety for kids

• Don't give out personal information such as address, telephone number, parents' work address/telephone number, or the name and location of your school without parents' permission.

• Tell parents right away if you come across any information that makes you feel uncomfortable.

• Never agree to get together with someone you "meet" online without first checking with parents. If parents agree to the meeting, be sure that it's in a public place and bring a parent along.

• Never send a person your picture or anything else without first checking with parents.

• Don't respond to any messages that are mean or in any way make you feel uncomfortable. It is not your fault if you get a message like that. If you do, tell parents right away so that they can take care of it.

• Talk with parents so that they can set up rules for going online. They should decide upon the time of day to be online, the length of time and appropriate areas to visit. Do not access other areas or break these rules without their permission. Courtesy of Safe Kids'

• Don't give out your Internet password to anyone (even best friends) other than parents.

• Check with parents before downloading or installing software or doing anything that could possibly hurt your computer or jeopardize your family's privacy

• Be a good online citizen and not do anything that hurts other people or is against the law.

• Help your parents understand how to have fun and learn things online and teach them things about the Internet, computers and other technology. Courtesy of Larry Magid.

Cook Estate has been making news for 2-1/2 years

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For years, plans have been in the works to build a senior housing development that could help keep the town's eldest residents in Cohasset long into their golden years.

The town is currently in negotiations with Cohasset Associates to develop the Cook Estate, which may or may not be the last chapter in the town's Sohier Street senior housing tale.

For years, plans have been in the works to build a senior housing development that could help keep the town's eldest residents in Cohasset long into their golden years. Town Meeting approved allocating the money necessary to purchase the land and embark on a double-closing with a developer in 2003. But this year's Town Meeting may have voters considering whether it would like to see the property purchased outright by the town, which could buy it some time. Up against deadlines from the Cook trustees, the town would have more flexibility to develop under its own timetable if it was the property owner.

While the town has entered what could be its last round of negotiations with Cohasset Associates, which is eager to develop the site with the town, and it appears the Cook journey could be nearing its end, there is no doubt it has had many unforgettable twists and turns along the way.

• Fall 2002-June 2003 — Discussion begins between the town and the heirs of the Cook Estate, who took over responsibility of the property when owner Jane Bancroft Cook passed away in July 2002. The town asks if the heirs would be willing to grant an easement to access the town property that abuts the Cook property, allowing the town to build senior housing on the town parcel. The heirs say they are not interested in an easement, but would be interested in working together to create senior housing on two combined parcels. Selectmen hold a series of discussions in executive session about the possible acquisition of the Cook property.

• July 2003 — Selectmen give permission to Town Manager Mark Haddad to approach the advisory committee for a reserve fund transfer of $25,000 to hire a consultant to formulate an offer to the Cook trustees. The advisory committee gives its permission.

• August 2003 — Selectmen give Haddad approval to begin negotiations to purchase the Cook Estate.

• September 2003 — The town offers to purchase the Cook estate for $4.5 million. The Cook heirs accept the town's offer, and the condition that the purchase will be subject to both Town Meeting approval and the procurement of a buyer and developer for the property. Haddad says he is optimistic an on-site septic system will work for the site.

• October 2003 —Selectmen sign the purchase and sale for the Cook property, and Haddad says due diligence on the property can officially begin. He said he has received bids from three companies and hopes due diligence can be completed by the end of October.

• November 2003 — Voters at the fall Special Town Meeting approve the purchase of the Cook Estate for $4.5 million, with a selling price for the combined town and Cook property to an outside developer of $5.2 million.

• December 2003— Town begins advertising the Cook Request for Proposals and a due date for bid proposals is set for Jan. 22, 2004. Haddad announces residents will be asked to participate in the bidder selection process.

• March 2004 — Selectmen sign a revised purchase and sale agreement with the trustees of the Cook estate that extends the closing date to Oct. 31, 2004. Northland Residential is selected to work with the town to develop the Cook estate.

• April 2004 — The on-site system planned for the Cook Estate will not be feasible and Haddad says alternate solutions will be looked into. Northland Residential files for a town sewer connection and is denied. Testing is done behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library to see it that land can serve as a leaching field for the project.

• May 2004 — Haddad resigns from his position as Town Manager, leaving selectmen to take the lead for the Cook project. Additional soil tests are conducted at the South Shore Music Circus

• June 2004 — Test pits are dug on Red Fox Lane and Wheelwright Park is looked at as possible an alternate wastewater site for the Cook project. Talk begins regarding the possibility of allowing residents to decide through a Town Meeting vote whether the project should be given a town sewer connection.

• September 2004 — Concerned citizen Karen Quigley questions whether there is a signed agreement between the town and developers from Northland Residential to build on the Cook Estate and is shocked to find the only agreement in writing is the company's bid proposal.

• October 2004 — Developers say they have exhausted all wastewater options and without a connection, 95 units of senior housing cannot be built as planned. In light of the situation, the senior housing committee and council on elder affairs join forces to sponsor an article for the fall Special Town Meeting that would allow the town to decide whether the Cook Estate should become part of its own sewer district, and be allowed to tie-in to the town's sewer lines if it is found capacity exists.

• December 2004 — Article to allow the Cook Estate to have its own sewer district is taken off the Warrant, as proponents feel it is "polarizing" the town. Homeowners in the Little Harbor area of town who had been waiting for a sewer connection for years are also seeking sewer connections, which makes the Cook project a competing interest. An extension is given by the Cook heirs which will allow until April to find a wastewater solution.

• January 2005 — The extension granted by the Cook heirs requires the town sign a new purchase and sale agreement. Some selectmen feel uncomfortable about signing with the Cooks if there is no signed agreement with the developer. Town Counsel is consulted regarding how legally binding a verbal agreement is.

• February 2005— Time is ticking to find a wastewater solution and no progress has been made. The idea is floated to either begin negotiations to bring down the size of the project to make an on-site wastewater system feasible or begin looking to either the town itself or its neighbor, the town of Hull, for sewer connections.

• March 2005 —Northland Residential unveils plans for a hybrid wastewater disposal system. Plans include disposing of wastewater from market-rate townhouses on-site and wastewater from the affordable rental apartments thorough a town sewer connection. Northland also says without a sewer connection, the 95 proposed units cannot be built, as they will produce more wastewater than soils can accommodate. The company says only 60 units of housing can be accommodated with an on-site system.

• April 2005 — Northland Residential proposes reducing the project by 30 units, for a total of 65 units. Selectmen wonder with such a reduction in scope, whether the project will have to go back out to bid to satisfy state procurement laws.

• May 2005 — Town Counsel advises the project must be put back out to bid and selectmen begin working on a second Request for Proposals, which outlines what the town would like to see built on the site. The idea is floated to further reduce the size of the project down to 50 or 55 total units, and the possibility of building on the three acres on the Fairoaks Lane side of Sohier Street, on the property that was supposed to be designated as open space is discussed. Fairoaks Lane residents turn up in droves to protest the suggestion, and the selectmen eventually take agree to take that option off the table. Selectmen also decide to take the town's abutting parcel of land out of the deal.

• June 2005 — Selectmen finalize a new RFP and the 30-day response window gives developers until July 15 to submit bids.

• July 2005 — Northland Residential, Deer Hill Partners, LLC, and Cohasset Associates submit bids for the project. Northland bids $5 million and proposes building 65 units of senior housing, Deer Hill bids $4.9 and proposes building 56 units of housing, and Cohasset Associates bids $5.15 million and proposes building 65 units of senior housing.

• August 2005 —Developers present their proposed projects to selectmen and Deer Hill Partners is given the tentative bid award. Negotiations on the Land Disposition Agreement, a document similar to a purchase and sale agreement, begin.

• September 2005 — Cohasset Associates threatens to sue the town if it does not rescind its vote to award the bid to Deer Hill Partners. The company asserts the town has violated the RFP as well as state procurement laws. The pending law suit puts a damper on LDA negotiations. The town pays $20,000 to gain a 30-day extension for the project with the Cook trustees. Some residents are concerned about the project as it does not include any rental units and ask the board to reconsider its bid appointment.

• October 2005 — Residents come forward and ask the board of selectmen to include an article on the Town Meeting Warrant which will allow rental housing to be built on the town-owned land adjacent to the Cook Estate. The board of selectmen says the matter would be better if taken up in the spring, as negotiations with the developer are not yet final. The land would otherwise be kept as open space. Town Counsel tells selectmen they may not seek any purchase and sale extensions beyond the maximum extension date of Jan. 15, set by the Cook heirs, or they will be breaking state procurement laws. The town sends a letter to Deer Hill Partners asking for a firm commitment that it can close on the project by Jan. 15, as the LDA has not yet been signed. Deer Hill Partners replies that is not enough time to secure all permits and pulls out of the deal. The town sends a letter to runner-up Cohasset Associates to see if it can commit to the project. A citizens' petition is filed which would ensure the town-owned parcel is kept as open space through a conservation restriction.

• The present situation — Cohasset Associates replies in a letter that it is willing to work with the town to meet the deadlines and bring the project to fruition. It first suggests the town purchase the property from the heirs on or before the deadline, and it will then purchase the land from the town for $4.5 million and pay the remainder of its $5.15 million bid, or roughly $650,000, after permits are in place. It says it is also willing to purchase the property from the heirs itself and then pay the balance of the purchase price after all permits are in place.

Selectmen hold a meeting with Cohasset Associates to clear up some confusion about the letter and determine whether the company is fully dedicated to working with the town on the project. Selectmen report it does seem the company is interested in carrying out the project. Subsequent meetings are set up to discuss how to properly move forward.

Nov. 15 selectmen report Cohasset Associates has submitted another proposal which the town could potentially accept. The board goes into executive session to discuss.

Nov. 23 selectmen report they are still in negotiations with Cohasset Associates. "I think there is still a very good chance we'll make a settlement," said selectman Ralph Dormitzer. Selectmen say negotiations are centering around the premise that the town would be able to close with the Cook trustees on or before the January deadline set by the Cooks, and Cohasset Associates would purchase the land from the town in a double-closing. However, there are questions about permitting and carrying costs that will need to be ironed out before a deal can be finalized.

The town has paid for three one-month extensions for the property, totaling $60,000. That money will go toward the purchase price of the land at the closing. In the event the deal does not work out with Cohasset Associates or third-place bidder Northland Residential and the town comes upon the January deadline, the town will have no choice but to either pull out (and lose the $60,000 in extension fees as well as the $200,000 deposit and roughly $285,000 in due diligence costs) or ask Town Meeting to support the town's purchasing the property from the heirs. If the town purchases the property, a new RPF will be sent out to solicit a third round of bidders for the project.

Number of items cut from special town meeting Warrant

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While the first draft included 20 items of business, the latest tally indicates voters will most likely be tackling 13, which would be the smallest Warrant the town has seen in quite a few years.

As the Warrant for the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting continued to evolve through the drafting process, it seemed it was continually shrinking by the day. While the first draft included 20 items of business, the latest tally indicates voters will most likely be tackling 13, which would be the smallest Warrant the town has seen in quite a few years.

Warrants should have arrived at every household in town at the beginning of this week. However, some of the items included will not be up for consideration during the meeting as they were included due to printing deadlines, but have since been removed.

A placeholder article (#2) was put on the Warrant to reserve the space necessary for the town to pay unpaid bills. Town Manager Bill Griffin said fortunately, that article will not be needed, as there are no unpaid bills to pay. Therefore, the article has been indefinitely postponed.

At the time the Mariner went to press, there was a language issue with a water department article, which would have authorized it to purchase land in Cohasset to protect the water supply. Some selectmen thought the article's wording essentially gave the water department a blank check to purchase the land, and thought Town Counsel should provide an opinion. The article may be redrafted and placed on the Warrant, or postponed until the spring.

Three zoning articles (#11,12,13) being presented by the planning board have also been taken off the Warrant. Disputes among board members have not been resolved, and therefore all three articles have been withdrawn. It had been hoped the three articles could have been approved this fall, to allow zoning changes to be made which could help speed along the process of building senior housing in the downtown area. The articles will likely return to the

Carillon plays holiday music

Cohasset's Carillon fills the air with holiday music. Carillonneur Sally Slade Warner will be playing popular tunes in the Christmas Spirit on the 57 bell carillon in the tower of Saint Stephen's Church for the Jingle Bell Walk on Friday, Nov. 25 between 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. Ponies step in time to Christmas favorites as they pull their wagon of smiling children around Cohasset Common.

On Thursday, Dec. 1 from 12:15 to 1 p.m. the bells will be featured for the "Art of Christmas" House Tour sponsored by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. Assistant Carillonneur, Mary Kennedy will play music to put all the house tour participants in the holiday spirit.

The sound of the bells will also play over the Cohasset Village Fair on Saturday, Dec. 3. Mary Kennedy will play carols and popular holiday music from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. to fill the hearts of Fair-goers on that day.

The Cohasset Carillon was established in the gothic church tower of Saint Stephen's Parish in 1924. In 1989 the carillon was renovated with contributions from the entire town. Five bells were added bringing the total number to 57, the greatest number of bells in any carillon in New England. The largest bell of the carillon weighs six tons, the smallest, 29 pounds. All together they make some of the most beautiful music of the holiday season.

Caroling tradition

Once again, First Parish, Cohasset's Unitarian Universalist church, is sponsoring an old and well-loved Cohasset tradition, Caroling on the Common, on Saturday, Dec. 17. Participants will assemble at First Parish's Parish House on 23 North Main St. between 3:45 and 4 p.m. The event is open to the public. Carolers will circuit the Common, serenading selected homes and downtown businesses as weather permits. At approximately 5 p.m., everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies.

This is a community gathering for young and old, especially families with school age children. Exceptional singing voices are not required; caroling books will be available, but participants are encouraged to bring flashlights. For more information or to donate cookies for this old-fashioned holiday get-together, call Sandy Bailey at First Parish 781-383-1100 or Woody Chittick 781-383-3215.

Snowflake Fair

Stop by the Beechwood Church on Church St., Cohasset, on Saturday, Dec. 3, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to shop for the holidays. There will be handmade beach glass candy, which is a local favorite. Children will enjoy the game table and interesting White Elephant items.

For crafty types, check out the fancy work and Christmas tree decorations. A luncheon will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The menu includes homemade chowder or hot dogs. For dessert or a gift, baked goods will be offered as well.

Our World offers holiday programs

Have you been by to see us yet? Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum is open Wed. through Friday 10 a.m. -5 p.m. and Sat. 11 a.m.-5 p.m.. Be sure to stop in and check out the Biodiversity 911 exhibit and make a seasonal craft. December is all about holidays around the world. Help create a crafty holly wreath for the museum and make one to take home beginning on Nov. 30. Then stop in often throughout December to learn about Santas from around the world, Christmas in Japan, Hanukkah and Kwanzaa. Admission is $5 per person, free for members.

The museum is located at 100 Sohier St., just down the road from the Music Circus tent and behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Call for more information 781-383- 3198 or visit: www.ourworldcgdm.org.

Robert Murley (8) has had a major impact on the Cohasset football team with his placekicking, punting and defense.

Cohasset's top import

After moving from England last summer, Robert Murley at home in town, on football team

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

In his native England, Robert Murley was an avid rugby player.

Competing in the sport since he was five, he played for his school and club teams and, at the age of 12, played a game at Twickenham, the English national team's grounds in London.

The concept of football - American football, that is - was totally new to Murley when he first tried out for the team at Cohasset High School.

"I pretty much didn't have a clue about American football until six months ago," Murley said. "The coach had to tell me how many players were on the field. I didn't know any of the positions either. I didn't know what a weak corner was, or a nose tackle. It was completely foreign to me."

Originally from the English town of Salisbury, Murley and his family - stepfather Ken Hayward, mother Sara Stocks, younger sister Georgia and younger brother Joe - moved from Bristol, England to Cohasset early last summer. Hayward, who runs a software company, was transferred to Boston and began looking for a place for the family to live.

Hayward said he was attracted to "the beauty of the town" and its convenient location. He said he and his family have settled in well and that all three children have had little trouble fitting in. Georgia, a high school freshman, played field hockey this fall, while 11-year old Joe is in the Scituate-Cohasset youth football program.

As for Robert, CHS head coach Tony Rolfe said he first found out about him from school guidance counselor Ed Leonard. Based on Murley's rugby experience and the fact that he was in need of a kicker, Rolfe became interested in the idea, but admits he took an 'I'll believe it when I see it' attitude.

"Well, he did it," Rolfe said Tuesday. "This is the first time since I've been here that we've never gone for two unless the situation dictated it. Robert has missed just two extra points all year; it's virtually automatic with him."

According to defensive coordinator Bob Silvia, Murley apparently came in to tryouts with some doubts.

"I remember that first practice, Rob looked at me and said, 'I don't know if I can kick this ball,'" Silvia recalled.

Murley said a football is "a lot smaller and heavier" than the rugby ball he was used to. He's adjusted quite well, though. In addition to his placekicking, he is averaging over 40 yards a punt, rare for the high school level.

On top of kicking, Murley has also been a regular in the Skippers' defensive backfield when fully healthy. It is the part of the game that comes with playing defense - tackling, hitting, etc. - that Murley says attracted him to football.

"Being physical helps," said Murley, who also played cricket back home. "Getting used to the pads was different. You don't have to be quite as intense in football because you get breaks in between plays, whereas you have to play non-stop for 40 minutes each half in rugby."

Murley says he can play soccer, but the relative lack of physicality compared to football turned him off.

"People here have said I should play for the team, and the soccer players want me to play," Murley said. "I prefer doing physical stuff; soccer frustrates me sometimes."

Since moving to the U.S., Murley says he has taken a liking to the sport in general. He attended a New England Patriots game during the preseason, and has become a fan of the team.

Boys soccer has holes to fill

Nine seniors graduating from Div. 3 South semifinal team

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High boys soccer team will be losing nine seniors from this year's squad that won 15 games and advanced to the Div. 3 South semifinals.

Of those nine, seven were starters. Striker Aidan Buick, midfielders Brandon Smith, Ben Libby and Chris Ofsthun, defenders Sara MacDonald and Trevor Brady, and keeper Prescott Busk were all part of the starting 11. Cohasset will also lose Nathan Needle and Pat Bertovich.

Despite the losses - which include South Shore League All-Stars in Buick, MacDonald and Brady - head coach Rob Leary isn't lowering his expectations for next year.

"We should make the tournament and, as is the case every year, we strive to win the South Shore League title," Leary said. "Every year I've been here, we've lost good kids, and every year we've had others step up and do the job. I expect the same next year."

"Every year I've been here, we've lost good kids, and every year we've had others step up and do the job. I expect the same next year."
Skippers head coach Rob Leary

The Skippers had several underclassmen play a big role in this year's success. After the team's big season-opening win over Bridgewater-Raynham - which Leary says was one of his team's best games of the year - there was always at least one starter out due to injury.

"After that B-R game, we didn't have a full team again for the rest of the year," Leary said. "Other kids had to step up, and they did a nice job. The kids played well all year long. We beat a good Norwell team three times, and made it all the way to the semifinal."

Despite the season ending against Hanover - the eventual Div. 3 South champion - on a late second half goal, Leary has no qualms over how his team played.

"Our kids played very well, but I knew that Hanover was the team to beat in Div. 3," said the coach. "We gave them a game. It was probably our best game all tournament long. It took [Hanover's] absolute best to beat us."

Among the returning underclassmen are defenders Evan Deutsch and Danny Brady, midfielders Mike Grimm, Emmerson Oronte, Lenny Brown and Chris Donze, and forward Sam Roth, along with Tristram Norman and Andrew Clarke. Leary is also looking toward junior Ryan Kucinski, a JV keeper, to take over in net next season.

Roth, a sophomore, was a league All-Star this season and will likely shoulder a good amount of the goal-scoring load in '06. Donze came up big down the stretch in the midfield, and against Hanover in the tournament, played a great game at sweeper in place of Deutsch, who was out with illness. Oronte and Brown were both solid on the wings.

The Cohasset defense was arguably its biggest strength this season. While MacDonald and Trevor Brady were certainly the biggest reasons for that, the play of Deutsch and Danny Brady (Trevor's younger brother) were critical as well, and gave those two valuable experience for next year.

Turning it around

CHS field hockey hopes second half of '05 carries into next season

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Now that Thanksgiving Day has come and gone, CHS field hockey coach Deb Bostwick can put some perspective on her team's performance.

"I wouldn't have changed a thing!" she exclaimed.

The casual fan might wonder about the coach's remark, given the team's break-even 8-8-1 final record. Yet, it's all relative.

The 2004 season proved abysmal. Pardon the expression, but it seemed the Skippers were going to be gobbled up in 2005 as well. Starting out with a 2-5 record looked pretty ugly.

How did they turn it around? Bostwick shook up the roster on both offense and defense. She searched far and wide for the best strategic combinations. And the juggling worked in a dramatic way.

"Our come-from-behind win in our second bout with Mashpee gave us the real confidence," explained Bostwick. "This win became our season turning point. They [the players] really found out what they had in them."

With the confidence switch turned on, the Skippers buckled their seatbelts and re-focused on what they knew best: the game fundamentals.

Bostwick praised senior goalie Aaron Bigley for his steady play throughout the season.

"The team relied on Aaron. The players felt very secure with him in net," she said.

No question the four captains led by example. Remy Lee and Mia Lieb-Lappen repelled enemy fire on defense, while Kathrine Whoriskey and Katie James set up plenty of scoring opportunities.

"We really came full circle since last season," remarked senior Brooke Allen. "We had a lot of experience and good leadership this year. That is what really made the difference."

While the veteran Skippers kept the team together like glue, Bostwick also pointed to some less experienced players who excelled on the field.

"Sally Meehan and Corinna Durham contributed a lot in terms of their athleticism," said Bostwick. "Their skills and conditioning became evident in every minute they played."

The Skippers did meet their match in round one of the Div. 2 state tourney. Yet, who would have dreamed they would reach rare, Murley says, "unless you really want to go out of your way to watch it." As for the other popular sports in the U.S., Murley has taken little interest.

"I don't play basketball. I can't play basketball to save my life," he said. "Baseball is kind of a strange game to me. I find it boring; it's just kind of weird to see it."

Making the move

Before coming to America, Murley went on a long camping trip with friends.

When it came time to actually leave, he says he was more tired from that trip than anything.

"I didn't really appreciate what I was doing until I was over here," Murley said. "Overall, it wasn't that big a deal."

One of the biggest adjustments Murley says he has had to make was coming from a city like Bristol to the small-town environment of Cohasset.

"Living in a small community is different," Murley said. "Seeing the same people around town is different. Obviously it has its advantages and disadvantages."

Hayward said two of the biggest challenges have been getting used to American lingo and not having immediate access to public transportation. The family has also had to learn two new sports in football and field hockey.

Some of those who have come to know Murley here in the U.S., however, have had an education of their own.

Murley says the questions that have been asked of him about his home country have been vast and, at times, peculiar. Some have been geography-related, asking if England is attached to Ireland or France (they're not). Murley says he has also been asked if he had ever seen a black person before moving to America.

Hayward's transfer is for at least three years, and he said he hopes to stay at least long enough to see Robert through college and Georgia through high school.

Murley says he wants to study marketing in college and, unless a good professional opportunity arises in England, would like to remain in the U.S.

He says he would also like to play rugby in college, with Northeastern currently being his top choice, as they have a quality rugby program. Murley has also been in touch with U.S. youth rugby coaches and would like to play the sport for the country, but has to have two years of residency before he is allowed to do so.

For the immediate future, Murley said he will be working out at least three times a week over the winter after football season is out.

"I need to get in the gym for rugby. I'm probably going to be playing in a men's league, and I don't want to get killed," Murley said with a chuckle.

As for football, Murley says he would be interested in playing at the next level.

"If I have the opportunity, I'll definitely continue," Murley said. "It's just a matter of finding the right opportunity. I've come quite late into the system, so obviously no one has been interested in recruiting me. But that would be fun to play in college."

Rolfe says that with another year of practice, he believes Murley can be a good college kicker.

And no matter what he does at the next level, Murley has apparently left quite an impression on the high school community.

"He's a fixture in the school right now; he's kind of a folk hero," Rolfe said. "He's very popular with his teammates. He's made instant friends on the team. Within a day, 40 kids knew who he was."

Athletic Director Ron Ford says he is also impressed with how Murley has fit in.

"He's a great kid, and he has fit in great here," Ford said. "It's been a joy to have him around."

Midfielder Brandon Smith (top) is one of nine seniors - seven of whom started - that the Cohasset boys soccer program will lost to graduation.

Boys soccer has holes to fill

Still, filling in for the seven lost starters will be tough. Particularly in the case of Buick, the league's leading scorer and probably its best player. With his size and strength, Buick was a great target man, and possessed remarkable field vision to set up his teammates as well.

Ofsthun was a valuable, versatile wing player, contributing at both midfield and defense over the course of the season. When healthy, Smith did everything one could ask of a holding midfielder, controlling the game from the middle of the pitch. Playing on the left wing, Libby was always a dangerous offensive threat and wasn't afraid to mix it up with opponents, either.

The consistently strong play of Busk in between the pipes allowed defenders like MacDonald and Brady to be more aggressive with their tackles and in pushing upfield. Both were good at it, too, with MacDonald often starting counter-attacks in the middle of the field and Brady doing the same from the left side.

Coming into this season, though, the Skippers had to replace seven seniors from the '04 side. They still had a successful season this year, giving hope for next.

the playoffs after a 2-5 start? The Skippers clearly made great strides as the season progressed.

Improved passing in the middle and front of the field coupled with a steadfast defense in the back led to some very impressive Skipper victories.

So, how will 2006 stack up? Certainly, a tough call. Graduation will take its toll on the roster.

The players' accomplishments were acknowledged at the awards dinner on Nov. 17 at St. Anthony's Church. The awards went as follows:

Offensive Player Award – Katie James

Defensive Player Award – Remy Lee

Most Consistent – Erin Liddell

Game Ball Award – Mia Lieb-Lappen

Most Improved Player - Brooke Allen, Aaron Bigley, Whitney Condon, Katie James, Remy Lee, Erin Liddell, Mia Lieb-Lappen, Carrie Muir, Christie Muir, Vanessa Plante, Devin Smith, Ellen Tarpey, Jessica Wheelwright, Katherine Whoriskey, Laura Campedelli, Molly Gallagher, Caitlin Hurley, Sheelah Scott, Michelle Madge, Alida Tangerlini, Roxanne Tehranian, Virginia Spofford, Corinna Durham, Sally Meehan and Alyssa Mullin.

So, how will 2006 stack up? Certainly, a tough call. Graduation will take its toll on the roster. Bostwick will have to replace the Bigley presence in the goalie position. The exit of Ellen Tarpey, Remy Lee, Devin Smith, Vanessa Plante, and Whitney Condon due to graduation will leave significant holes in defense.

The midfield will look very different with the departure of Mia Lieb-Lappen, Christie Muir, Jessica Wheelwright, and Kathrine Whoriskey. Today's bench will have to reignite the offensive spark lost with the absence of Brooke Allen, Katie James, Carrie Muir, and Erin Liddell.

Given her 17th year in coaching and 100th career victory, Bostwick will certainly handle this transition with confidence. She looks forward with optimism.

"I hope my eight juniors will continue to work in the off-season to fill in these spots," she said. "I have some strong 9th and 10th graders coming up from JV to fill these spots. So we will continue to build on what we created this year."

She will evaluate the candidates very carefully. "You don't know who will try out, who went to camps or who is in the best shape."

COASTAL STARS

Squirt B-1

On Nov. 20, Coastal Stars B-1 Squirts extended their undefeated record to 10-0 with a chilly pre-dawn shutout against the Eagles.

Brendan Crane got things going in the first period with a rebound goal through a crowd in front of the Eagles net. The Stars' defense kept the greater part of first period play in the Eagles zone, with Tristan Wiggin, Chris Cohen and Patrick Graham policing the blue line. Breakaways by Max Montgomery and Matt Burchill were blocked as were numerous shots off the sticks of Dave Cataldo and Mickey Barry but spirits remained high as the Stars warmed up throughout the period. The Eagles drew their first of several penalties late in the first period, setting up another Burchill breakaway that looked promising but his shot glanced off a skate and went wide. The Eagles got possesion and fired off a rocket toward Stars goalie Connor Lemieux but Lemieux skated out to make the save, keeping the Stars up 1-0 at the end of the first period.

The Star's came out in the second period determined to put more points on the board. With the help of Aidan Beresford, Robert Gargano and Nick Mulrey, all three lines of forwards traded shots against the Eagles' net. Cohen covered the ice from end to end, alternately skating the puck all the way down the ice and protecting the Star's zone at the blue line.

Halfway through the second period, Cataldo, fresh out of the box, picked the puck out from behind the net slipped it around the corner to bring the Stars up 2-0. Crane and Cohen moved the puck around niely while Graham broke up nearly every Eagles' try. An eager Eagle forward got by the defense, barreling toward the Stars' net, but another great save from Lemieux denied the goal.

The Eagles drew another penalty, giving the Stars the power play. This time Barry skated in right off the faceoff and flipped it into the top corner. After another Eagles player went to the penalty box, Cataldo drilled in his own rebound, putting the Stars ahead 4-0 with fifty seconds left in the second period.

The third period opened with Stars defenseman Matt Burchill in the penalty box and the Eagles anxious to make good on the power play. But it was the shorthanded Stars who would score again as Cataldo drilled in his third of the game. Elegant passing between Joe Lasko and Gargano and numerous shots at the Eagles' net by Burchill and Montgomery highlighted the final period, but the Eagle's goalie hung tough and the game ended with the Stars 5, Eagles 0.

The Stars B-1 Squirts play next in a tournament on Friday morning in Taunton against the Seahawks.

Mite C3

HINGHAM (Nov, 12) - The Coastal Stars Mite C3 hockey team beat a strong Seahawks team 4 – 0 today at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham. The Stars received a strong goaltending performance by Seamus Ryan who notched his first career shutout.

Both teams were somewhat cautious coming out of the gate with most of the action taking place in the neutral zone. Midway through the first period, the Stars "Red" line consisting of Marshall Feeney, Harry Sheldon, Daniel Tobin, Jacob Latta, and Will Shaw went on the attack. After some good fore checking, Sheldon took a feed from Shaw and fired a back hand past the Seahawk goalie. Thirty seconds later, Sheldon doubled up the score when he picked up a loose puck in front of the net and scored on a one timer.

The Stars displayed some solid offensive play in the second period, Cole Mckenzie, Jack Kaetzer, Brodie Fuller, Derek McDermott, and Brian Neuls were all over the ice getting several scoring chances. Kaetzer made the score 3 to 0 when he took a feed from Derek McDermott and nailed a wrist shot to the far corner. Latta and Mathew Smith both stood out during the period with several heads plays.

The Seahawks increased their offensive pressure midway through the period with two breakaway scoring chances. Seamus Ryan, however, kept the Seahawks at bay by making to great saves and covering up both rebounds.

The Stars "Blue" line then caught fire. Jack McNeil and Sean Feeney moved the puck well leading to scoring chances by Colin Murray and Richard Reid. Then after stealing the puck in the Seahawks end, Reid made a nice pass over to Austin Sullivan who netted the Stars' fourth and final goal.

Squirt C2

Don't be misled by the lopsided score of 8-1 Stars over Whitman/Hanson/Kingston -- the excitement was pulsating throughout the game.

The first period belonged to the Stars with three unanswered goals. Starting off was center Mats Nelson assisted by Jake Moore. The second goal was burned in by Tom Pilat unassisted. Defenseman Jack Conlon closed off the period with unassisted goal number 3.

The second period sizzled because of the scoring efforts of Mats Nelson and the hard working defensive tandems of Brodie Jackisch with Jake Denton, and Joe Proctor with Jack Conlon, who kept the WHK team to only one goal. There was impressive back checking by the entire team, with special kudos to forward David Craig. Two second period highlights were defenseman Conlon scooping the puck out of our goal crease and Nelson's flying leap into the net to score his hat trick goal.

The third period had goalie Hugh Healey forming a wall in front of the Stars' net to keep WHK from scoring. Wings Tim Cavanaro, Cameron Mastrangelo, Daniel Cronin and Moore maintained the offensive pressure for three more goals - Conlon, unassisted for goal #6, center Derek Benson, assisted Tom Pilat for #7 and Denton, assisted by Conlon for the final game goal.

The next game for the Stars C2 will be against Pembroke on Sunday, Nov. 20 at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

Squirt B-1 - November 5

The heat was on in an otherwise chilly Hobomock Arena when Charlie Mulrey's undefeated Coastal Stars Squirt B skaters met their closest rivals from Pembroke on November 5th.

Not satisfied with their second place standing behind the red-hot Stars, Pembroke came charging out of the blocks at the drop of the first puck and clearly stated their intentions with goal number one coming just 14 seconds into the game. For the first time in the season, the action was spread evenly across the ice, with little rest for either goalie. Shots were fired fast and furious at both nets, lines changed with unusual speed and it was very clear that the Stars were in for a quite a fight.

Clearly unhappy with Pembroke's early goal, Dave Cataldo claimed mental ownership of the puck, and along with defensemen Chris Cohen and Patrick Graham, broke up several more Pembroke advances to return the action to the blue end. Despite repeated breakaways by Cataldo, Nate Morse and Jimmy Connors, Pembroke's determined defensemen continued to shut down play after play and the Pembroke goalie blocked shot after shot. This would be a continued pattern throughout the game.

Skating with increasing intensity, both teams cranked up the first period action. Stars' front liners Max Montgomery and Nick Mulrey followed Cataldo's lead and went all-out for everything, fighting furiously in the corners along with Joe Lasko and Brendan Crane to get in scoring position. Connors made a brilliant pass to Mulrey but the Pembroke goalie's glove was too quick. Tristan Wiggin kept the puck inside the blue line time and again, but it wasn't long before Pemboke claimed another point from goalie Max Hemingway and Pembroke led 2-0.

Montgomery was everywhere you looked, as he and winger Aidan Beresford controlled the puck well while Cohen did double duty and skated it in repeatedly to attack the Pembroke netminder. Matt Burchill got into the action with a beautiful diving shot into the net which although blocked, was appreciated by the crowd. After what seemed like the longest 12 minutes in hockey history, the first period ended with Pembroke leading the Coastal Stars 2-0.

The second period started much like the first, with a Pembroke goal just 30 seconds in, dropping the stunned Stars behind 3-0. Cohen and Graham continued to hold the line as Morse and Crane traded off trying to get around the blue wall of Pembroke's defense. It was a short, clean pass from Montgomery to center Cataldo that was finally powered past the Pembroke goalie to give the Stars their first goal of the game.

The rest of the 2nd period it was Burchill who was everywhere. Graham continued to protect the net as Pembroke threatened the Star's goalie, but it would be Burchill who broke up the next play and then skated it end-to-end and fired it in for the score. Fueled by a new sense of hope by Burchill's goal, minutes later Cataldo flipped another one in the net to tie the game, 3-3.

Pembroke's hopes of a win would not be easily dashed, when seconds later they made quick work of a go-ahead goal on another breakaway. With Pembroke leading 4-3, the Stars poured on the pressure. Mickey Barry, Connors, and Mulrey stayed on the attack but couldn't get by the Pembroke goalie. Cohen pulled it out of the green end for what seemed like the hundredth time and made a beautiful play toward the net with Montgomery matching stride for stride just off his shoulder.

The shot was saved again, but the Stars were making it clear that despite the score, they weren't considering this game over by any means. Another nice glove-save by Hemingway and the unyielding Stars' defense kept Pembroke to a one-point lead at the end of the second period.

Third period action was a frenzy as both teams pulled out all the stops. Shot after shot was blocked by Hemingway or broken up and sent back up the boards by Wiggin, Cohen and Graham. A nice backhanded shot by Crane and another Cataldo breakaway were blocked by the Pembroke glove. Burchill's skates were on fire as he weaved in and around a sea of blue jerseys.

With just over six minutes left in the game and both teams giving it their all, Patrick Graham chased down another Pembroke breakaway, keeping the puck in the zone with a diving block to set up Connors and Mulrey for a little back and forth around the net. Connors took a hard shot on goal which got sent back behind the net, but a quick Mulrey was waiting at the back door and stuffed the puck around the post neatly into the corner to tie the game.

Action continued at a fever pitch as both teams sought the winning goal. The Stars' offense kept the Pembroke goalie busy with every player firing off shots. Crane found the open net off a quick backhand pass from Morse, and he stuffed in a beauty for the go-ahead goal with just two minutes left on the clock. The clock finally ran out on this well-fought match-up with the score Coastal Stars 5, Pembroke 4. The win extended the Squirt B-1 undefeated record to 9-0.

BC HIGH REPORT

Eagles grounded in soccer and football

By Ryan Holt
CORRESPONDENT

•What if? The question circulated around the halls of BC High throughout the week as the disbelief of the week's events became known. What if the penalty kick had gone in? What if the opening play touchdown wasn't called back? What if a soccer game was a minute shorter?

•Well then things would have been different. Instead, the save was made, the flag was thrown and the clock was right. When all was settled, the Eagles were knocked out of the state soccer tournament and most likely eliminated from playoff contention in football for the fourth consecutive year.

The script wasn't written like this last week though, when the Eagles soccer team was riding high off of wins against eventual South Sectional champion Weymouth and Needham. The football team was rolling too, on a three game winning streak after defeating Xaverian, something that hadn't been done in four years. It looked like both were ready for two outstanding runs for state titles. Instead, both are wondering "what if?"

•Last Wednesday the soccer team made the trek down to Attleboro in the second round of the state tournament. Looking strong early, the Eagles found the first goal of the match seven minutes in when Elliot Rizzo of Kingston put a head on a loose ball to put the Eagles on top 1-0. Attleboro still had no answer for the Eagles' offensive attack as they found themselves with their back up against the walls for the next 10 minutes until an opportune penalty in the box put senior defender Brandon Ranalli on the spot. But Attleboro's keeper came up with incredible diving save on the captain as he tried to sneak it into the left corner. The play proved to be the game-changing play as Attleboro turned the tide. The Blue Bombardiers took a timeout and came out of it with the momentum. The momentum carried them until with 10 minutes left in the first half; they found the equalizer on a tremendous cross and volley.

The second half was a struggle as both teams looked to take the lead. It was Attleboro who finally found the game-winner with a controversial goal in stoppage time. What appeared to be an obvious foul when the Attleboro forward pushed defender Derek Foye down inside the box, wasn't called and allowed the forward to walk in unobstructed and blast it by goalkeeper Dan Nash. The goal ended the chances of a repeat for the Eagles. They'll return key members next year such as Nash and Rizzo but the losses of tri-captains Mark Meskell, Kevin Smith, and Ranalli will be felt.

•The Eagles football team traveled to face the Eagles of St. John's Prep Saturday afternoon in Danvers. Senior Dan Capeless appeared to get the Eagles off on the right foot as he took the opening kickoff 90 yards for an apparent touchdown. However, it was called back due to a late holding call. The offense struggled for the better part of the day but both defenses played well. Prep found the first points of the game as they nailed a 33-yard field goal midway through the third quarter. With nine minutes and change to go in the fourth quarter and leading by the 3-0 score, Prep recovered a fumble deep in BC High territory and took the next play into the end zone to take a 10-0 lead. The Eagles of Dorchester didn't give in easily though as Mike Pecca lead the team down the field on the next drive which was capped off by a Mike Duffy touchdown run with five minutes to go. That turned out to be the last time the Eagles would see the ball as Prep ran out the clock and won the game 10-7. The loss dropped BC High to 3-5 on the year with an extreme outside chance at making the playoffs.

"It's disappointing but they just played better today," said senior Matt Snow.

BC High take on Taunton in a make-up game this Friday in Taunton before the Thanksgiving Eve tilt against the Knights of Catholic Memorial.

its focal point."

So when Taylor, who now lives near West Corner, parted ways with the corporate world for good, getting into the fix-it business seemed like a natural. Working for Walsh and Packard proved to be a nice match because he had gotten to know the store's then owners, Tom Hamel and Norman James.

Taylor plans to continue offering the same type of service at the Service Center that he did at Walsh and Packard by focusing on window and screen repairs, small appliance and small engine repairs, and sharpening. He will also provide various small, in-home repair services, such as fixing a leaky faucet.

He readily admits that his days on a ladder are behind him, so he plans to offer a referral service for jobs such as cleaning the gutters by providing a contact list to customers. Taylor also explains he is not a licensed electrician or plumber, so while he can repair a flapper value in a toilet or rewire a lamp – he cannot do larger jobs. For example, if he goes to a home to repair a leaky faucet and discovers there is a lot more involved he would recommend a plumber to come in.

Taylor says he had been "wanting to break out" on his own for some time, so the closing of Walsh and Packard provided him with the impetus. "It pushed me to get out and do something," he says.

Taylor expects the lion share of his business to be dual-income families that have no free time to devote to home repair and maintenance and want to hire it out, and senior citizens, who need some small jobs done. Taylor will also assemble Christmas toys for grandchildren or the new barbecue grille with stainless steel rotisserie for the cook of the house. He notes that many smaller stores have cut back on services and staff to stay competitive with Home Depot and Lowe's.

"The large box stores have shown no interest in the local services market," he says. "It is this void that the Service Center looks to fill."

Taylor says times have changed since he was young spending summers on his grandfather's farm where he couldn't run to the corner store and had to learn to fix things himself. He notes many today including his own children "don't know which end of a screwdriver" to use.

He discovered the space at Cohasset Hardware after he spotted the "for rent" sign while helping out a client in town.

Taylor would also like to pursue providing "repair workshops" at local Senior Centers where he can show seniors how to replace a washer in a faucet and handle other small repair jobs.

Taylor explains that repair work can be an intellectual enterprise. "Try decoding what someone did 200 years ago and make it work," he says. Case in point, one of his favorite jobs at Walsh and Packard was rewiring a "gorgeous" antique chandelier that still had the old cloth-covered, single-strand wiring.

Sometimes Taylor will try to talk customers out of fixing an item. For example, a senior citizen might come in with a shorted-out toaster that makes toast just the way he likes it but doesn't want to part with it after 15 years. Taylor says he would explain a new one would cost half as much as fixing the old one.

On the other hand, a 50-year-old Waring blender that is the focal point in a customer's family room is worth repairing. Taylor says, however, that getting parts for older appliances can pose a problem.

Taylor plans to open the Service Center on Monday. Hours will be from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Saturday with the afternoons reserved for in-home services, pickup and delivery.

The number of the store is 781-383-6936. Taylor expects his in-shop rates to be $30 an hour with a $15 minimum plus parts, and at customers' homes the rate is $40 an hour, with an hour minimum. He can also be reached by email at: servicec@localnet.com.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

First edition of this year's Spinnaker debuts

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

Hope you had a Happy Thanksgiving! A holiday filled with feasting and football, turkey and pies, and of course news and events.

Indeed, the first issue came out this past Tuesday, and it was a true-blue hit.

This week in the high school has been a rather quiet one, aside from the uproar that the first issue of the award-winning Spinnaker created. Indeed, the first issue came out this past Tuesday, and it was a true-blue hit. The outstanding staff sold a solid 350 copies to students, an additional 30 mail-away subscriptions, and 40 advertisements to businesses.

Congrats Spinnaker staff, a job well done!

If anyone is still concerned about the layout of this year's yearbook, rest easy. The debate over whether to have the names of students appear in alphabetical order or in reverse alphabetical order has finally been resolved thanks to an impromptu meeting of the entire senior class. Students came to the conclusion that tradition was the best way to go and overwhelmingly voted for the conventional alphabetically ordered layout.

Now, let me regale you with the glut of news that I have for this week.

• Report cards were handed out to High School students on Tuesday, Nov. 22. Middle School report cards were handed out on the 23rd.

• Wednesday was a half day for the high school.

• The annual Powder Puff Game between the Juniors and Seniors will have taken place on Wednesday, the 23rd, at 12:30 p.m. on Alumni Field.

• The Middle School accumulated 65 bags of groceries last week in their Food Drive, and over 100 pieces of used soccer equipment for their "Pass back" drive.

• The Debate Team will have their first debate on Dec. 7.

• The Math Team, fresh off of an impressive performance at Whitman-Hanson, where they placed third, will compete in their second meet on Dec. 8 at Hingham.

• The Cohasset Center for Student Research was recently granted second-year funding. The center received $11,000 dollars, which will help pay for a teacher to guide the program, new stipends for student leaders, supplies, and professional consultation from engineers. The funding is to aid in the program's research on the Gulf River, and students will be testing the water in the river to help the town regarding storm run-off, and septic leakage.

• Mr. Buckley's Law class is taking a field trip on Nov. 30 to the Plymouth County House of Corrections.

• Athletes don't forget that you must have an updated sports physical by the start of your team's season, updated means within the past 13 months.

• Acceptance letters have begun to flow into the high school, and seniors don't forget to check your college's website for upcoming deadlines.

• "Friends, Romans Countryman…"a special thanks to Mrs. Cronin, who is retiring this week after 35 years of dedicated services to Cohasset High School English Department

• Most winter sports will begin on Monday, the 28th.

All is well in the high school for now. The Spinnaker advisor has not received any complaints as of yet regarding the newspaper, but then again, it was just on sale this morning.

I hope you enjoyed your Thanksgiving Day festivities and got out to support the Cohasset Football Team on as they took on rivaled Hull, in Hull Gut.

The esteemed Spinnaker staff celebrates a successful first edition of the award winning paper.

Sebastian Braga and Sam Game of Cohasset, who are eighth-graders at the Inly School in Scituate, recently served as UN Youth Ambassadors at the United Nations.

UN Youth Ambassadors from Inly School

Cohasset residents Sebastian Braga and Sam Game recently participated in a four-day professional conference as UN Youth Ambassadors at the United Nations in New York, N.Y. As members of a nine-person team of eighth graders from Inly School in Scituate, they collaborated with students from Montessori schools across the U.S. in the "Youth Visits the United Nations Program" to learn more about the mission and operations of the UN.

The UN trip was an integral part of this year's Inly Middle School curriculum.

Model UN and Youth Ambassador programs involve young people in the study and discussion of global issues, but also encourage the development of skills useful throughout their lives, such as research, writing, public speaking, problem solving, consensus building, conflict resolution, compromise, and cooperation. They are designed to promote interest in international relations and related subjects, increase the capacity for students to engage in problem solving, and teach valuable aspects of conflict resolution.

The UN trip was an integral part of this year's Inly Middle School curriculum, serving the school's mission to inspire and nurture students to become global citizens.

The Unicorn Singers will shed their Victorian garb and transport the audience to Mexico this year in 'Fiesta Navidad' Dec. 11 at the First Parish meetinghouse.

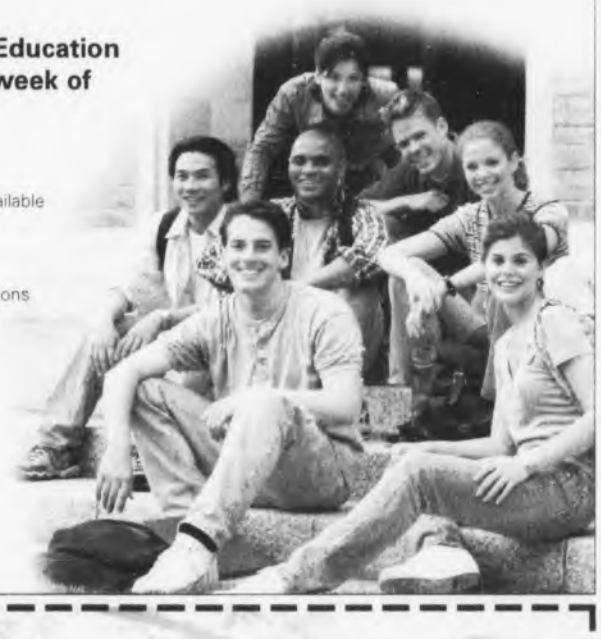
Unicorn Singers to perform in 'Fiesta Navidad'

Dec. 11 concert at First Parish

Christmas Carols for the audience sing-a-long will have a decidedly Latin feel, accompanied by Mariachi trumpets, guitar, and marimba.

The 27th Christmas Concert of The Unicorn Singers with Margo Euler will be held at First Parish Church in Cohasset on Sunday, Dec. 11 at 4 p.m. Tickets are $15, $10 for students, and can be purchased at First Parish by calling 781-383-1100, as well as at the door.

The Unicorn Singers will transport the audience to Mexico this year to celebrate 'Fiesta Navidad' with carols and customs from south of the border.



The well-loved annual visit of this choral group – their 27th consecutive holiday concert at First Parish – features 'La Fiesta de la Posada' by Dave Brubeck, a cantata that tells the familiar Christmas story. It will be exuberantly accompanied by a Mariachi Band of both professionals and students from Weymouth, organized by teacher and marimba player John Duff.

A children's chorus from Hingham's Congregational Church led by Unicorn Singer Ed Bartholomew, will also contribute to the program. Amy Martin of First Parish will sing the role of Mary. The concert will dramatize the Posada custom of traditional petition for lodging as the time of Mary's confinement draws near.

Christmas Carols for the audience sing-a-long will have a decidedly Latin feel, accompanied by Mariachi trumpets, guitar, and marimba. The celebration will end with the traditional piñata for the children. The Concert is appropriate for school-age children comfortable with attending concerts.

Banking on relief this holiday season people are forced to make trade-offs. A lot of people decide to pay for other things and eat less or skip meals.

"This problem isn't going to get better. In this economy, it's going to get worse. Right now, one out of every 10 Americans uses a food pantry, a soup kitchen or an emergency shelter. And it's not just people who are poor. It can be anyone. All it takes is a lost job or a high medical bill."

According to the Greater Boston Food Bank Web site, "Many of us are just one bad break away from hunger's devastating reach."

D'Amato said senior citizens often fall victims to hunger because they are on fixed incomes and have to deal with the high cost of prescriptions. She added the people at the Greater Boston Food Bank are working hard every day to fight hunger, a concept that has not changed in almost 25 years.

She said the food bank is a 65,000 square-foot food warehouse located in Boston. She noted there are 65 staff members who work at the food bank and 12,000 volunteers. The food bank is part of the Second Harvest national network, the country's biggest hunger-relief organization.

D'Amato explained the food bank was founded in 1981 by Kip Tiernan with the purpose of "acquiring donated food for redistribution to food pantries" and other non-profit groups.

"In the first year it was open, the food bank redistributed 100,000 pounds of food," D'Amato said. "In our 24th year, we distributed 25 million pounds."

She added the food bank currently serves 60 to 70 agencies per day.

"We have a variety of food sources," D'Amato said. "We cooperate with businesses like Stop & Shop, Shaw's and Star. We also have manufacturers like Ocean Spray, Kraft, Proctor & Gamble and others. It's really a big mix. Twenty-five years ago, the food bank survived on donated foods alone."

These days, 60 percent of the food bank's stock consists of donated foods. Forty percent of the product is acquired through federal and state monies, along with purchase programs.

"If a non-profit group relies on one source these days, they'll be in trouble," D'Amato said, noting that food pantries and other charitable groups use the food bank for about 60 percent of their stock.

"The demand for food is fairly constant all year," she added. "But the demand simply peaks around the holidays."

Right now, the food bank is gearing up for the holiday season, its busiest time of year. D'Amato explained the food bank will be distributing a total of about 30,000 turkeys with all the trimmings for Thanksgiving.

She said the demand for food will typically last through Christmas and then drops off. D'Amato said so many people think about hunger during the holidays and are generous with their donations but noted after the holidays are over, the problem is not as recognized.

"The need is always there, 365 days a year," she said.

D'Amato said the food bank's goal is to collect 3-5 percent more food each year.

"We know the demand will grow and we need to keep pace with it," she said.

D'Amato said while collecting food is extremely important, getting nutritious food is even more imperative.

"We want people to have the best quality food," she explained. "Everyone deserves that. People shouldn't have to eat maraschino cherries and sauerkraut. They need fruits, vegetables and fresh meats."

DíAmato said the food bank is always looking for monetary donations, food donations and new volunteers. Those are the three factors that made the food bank the successful entity it is today.

Roni Lahage, director of the Marshfield Food Pantry, said the Greater Boston Food Bank provides about 40 percent of what she has on the shelves. She said volunteers from the pantry go to the food bank two times a month to pick up food in bulk.

"It's an enormously valuable service," Lahage said. "It makes our daily routine much easier. I think it was a brilliant idea."

When asked what life without the food bank would be like, Lahage said, "I think we'd certainly be struggling like other organizations to do more fundraising and get more donations."

Pat Adams, director of the Weymouth Food Pantry, said she wholeheartedly agrees with Lahage.

"I go to the food bank every Friday," Adams said, adding 25-30 percent of her stock comes from the food bank. "It's invaluable."

Like Lahage, Adams said operating a food pantry would be much different without the food bank.

"It would be incredibly difficult," she said. "The food bank doesn't just supply food, it provides advocacy and informational support. The people there are always encouraging us at the grassroots level."

D'Amato said one of the most distressing things about hunger is that those who are stricken by it are usually too embarrassed to come forward to help themselves.

"There's a stigma attached to it for those who are hungry," she said. "And when it comes time to ask people for help, it's hard for people to believe that people are actually going hungry in a country like this.

"The message is that hunger is definitely a local issue. It's in every community. It's usually not that visible but it's there."

For more information on how to help the Greater Boston Food Bank, log onto www.helpfighthunger.org.

To donate to the Gifts of Hope, simply make your check payable to one of the food pantries listed in the accompanying story and forward it to Anne Rodwell, CNC/South, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050. All donations will be published in the paper, unless the donor requests otherwise.

Religious traditions at Glastonbury Abbey

This seventh annual series of "Listening to Other Voices" has the theme of "Religion and the World We Live In." The title was motivated by the abundance of news items that were defined or interpreted by a religious perspective, from the Tsunami to stem cell research, from war to political elections, from creationism to end of life issues. Although religion can be polarizing among people, this year's speakers have found it to be inspirational in shaping their life's work and its potential to draw people together. The series will include presentations by speakers representing the Christian, Jewish, Hindu, Buddhist and Muslim traditions. Each of us is asked to listen to these voices in dialogue with our own particular religious tradition.

The remainder of the series includes:

- A Documentary — Produced by Rachel Antell, narrated by Dr. Diana Eck, featuring three women — Jan. 19, 2006 — "Acting on Faith: Women and New Religious Activism in America."
- Dr. Mohammad Dadrass and Westy Egmont — Feb. 16 — "One Nation? Under God."
- Tania Leontov — April 6 — "The Common Heart, and Inter-Religious Dialogue Lasting 21 Years."
- Margaret O'Brien Steinfels — May 4 — "Catholic Culture and American Culture."

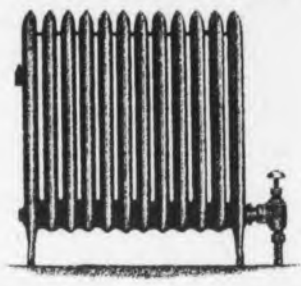
First Parish welcomes all to its second annual Blessing of the Animals Dec. 4.



Blessing of the Animals at First Parish on Dec. 4

The second annual Blessing of the Animals will be held at First Parish Unitarian Universalist on Sunday, Dec. 4 at 3 p.m. in the Meeting House. Once again it's time to share the excitement with your four-legged friends, or your feathered friends, or even your friends who slither. Yes, we're talking cats and dogs, hamsters and gerbils, birds and even lizards and snakes.

In this season of Advent, how can we forget the tradition of a crèche with animals watching over it all, bearing witness to the babe in a manger? The service will feature animal-friendly music, readings, prayers, and a short homily by our minister, Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull. Everyone will be invited to come to the chancel for individual blessings of your companion animals (live, stuffed, or a photo.)

Please bring your pets into the Meeting House on a leash or in a carrier. To prevent "accidents," please make sure that your pets are house-trained and under your control at all times. This is an event open to the community. Come and share the blessing. For more information, phone First Parish at 781-383-1100.

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127
DOES IMPAIRED HEARING LEAD TO IMPAIRED MEMORY?
Recent research suggests that older adults with mild to moderate hearing loss may use up so much cognitive effort trying to hear and understand speech that it undermines their ability to remember what they have just heard. The study found that when older hearing-impaired adults heard words well enough to repeat them, they were not able to memorize and remember those words as well as older adults with good hearing. This study shows that there are subtle effects of hearing loss on memory and cognitive function that may have escaped the notice of the average individual. Now that attention has been called to the matter, it behooves all older adults with hearing impairments to address the issue with a hearing test.
If you have a hearing loss, you are missing more than just the understanding of words. Hearing keeps you in touch with the world, lets you respond to sound, and reassures you of changing surroundings. After the age of 50, a regular hearing test should be considered as important as a yearly physical checkup. FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, offers comprehensive hearing services, including evaluations, custom fittings, a full line of hearing instruments, follow-up support, accessories and repairs. Call us at 781-337-1144 to arrange a free hearing test at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg in Weymouth.
P.S. Previous studies have shown that hearing loss in older adults increases their sense of social isolation.

DESTINATIONS

Time to think ski!

And you don't have to travel far to enjoy the best of the slopes.

The mountains of New England boast attractions fit for a variety of winter sports types -- from high-adrenaline seekers and parents with toddlers to singles and apres ski hounds. The Herald - with the help of ski writers Felicity Long and Michael O'Connor - has singled out its picks for the season. See you on the slopes!

Old World ski hotel

Picture a mix of bygone luxury with a pinch of Stephen King and you get a hint of the ambience at New Hampshire's The Mount Washington Resort, which owns and operates Bretton Woods Mountain Resort across the street. Settle by the roaring fire with a good book after a day on the slopes or explore Stickney Street, an intriguing recreated indoor street. Even if you don't stay there, reserve a dinner in the dining room for a meal light-years above the usual ski-vacation fare.

Sure, there are only 16 trails and two chairlifts, but The Balsams in New Hampshire has been drawing families for generations with its mix of post-Civil War elegance, scenic ski runs and serious cuisine. There is a terrain park for the extreme fans among us. Small fry can try out their mountain legs on a separate slope -- and yes, there is snowmaking on 80 percent of the terrain.

You'll feel like you stepped into Bavaria at the Trapp Family Lodge in Stowe, Vt., where guests can bundle up for a ride in a horse-drawn wagon or strap on cross-country skis for an afternoon in the pristine snow. Founded by the von Trapp family of "Sound of Music" fame, the property is surrounded by 2,700 acres of forest land.

Luxurious ambiance

If a facial and a stellar wine list are as important to you as vertical pitch, Stowe Mountain Resort is the mother lode of all things self-indulgent. Try a Vermont Maple Body Sugar Polish at the Stoweflake Mountain Resort and Spa, followed by dinner at Winfield's Bistro, which features New American cuisine and routinely wins kudos from Wine Spectator for its wine cellar.

Follow a morning on the slopes at Stratton Mountain Resort with an afternoon of Armani and Escada. The shops at Manchester Village will give your credit card a workout. For further indulgence, try a Flowing Water Swedish massage at the Equinox Resort & Spa, and be sure to stay for the plush Sunday brunch at the resort's Colonnade.

Sugarbush Resort may have great snow, but it's the ultra-toney Pitcher Inn nearby that will put the special stamp on your upscale weekend. This 1850s inn has morphed into a very luxurious, 11-room boutique hotel -- the top digs are in the barn -- with gourmet dining.

Ski town

There are so many ski areas to conquer, restaurants to sample and outlet shops to troll in North Conway, N.H., that we bet you won't be able to do them all. There are four ski resorts within sneezing distance of town -- Cranmore, Attitash, Black Mountain and Wildcat -- where you can do everything from ski and ride to snow-tube and sled. Save some time for outlet shopping -- LL Bean has a factory outlet store here -- and for dining at the landmark, family-friendly Horsefeathers Restaurant on Main Street.

There is more to Bethel, Maine than just a pit stop on the way to Sunday River ski resort. Take the kids ice skating on the town common, then hole up at the cozy Bethel Inn Resort and Country Club, which links guests to the slopes via shuttle bus. Bad snow day? Head for the Big Adventure Center for laser tag, an indoor rock-climbing wall and even bowling.

Skiing at Stratton Mountain Resort

We love ski-in/ski-out, too, but for a real ski town experience, you can't beat the charm of Warren, Vt., at the tip of Mad River Valley. Stroll the historic village center and nip into the Warren Store, a general store with attitude. Wash down the gourmet sandwiches with a heady Pinot Noir. As to skiing, your only difficulty will be choosing between Sugarbush Resort and Mad River Glen.

Family mountain

Vermont's Smugglers Notch is credited with practically inventing family ski, and the folks there still know how to do it. Toddlers rule at the new Little Rascals on Snow, which includes everything from intro skiing to afternoon naps. High-adrenaline teens can get the jump -- literally -- on their parents on the new Airboards, a kind of inflatable sled that 13-year-olds and older (even nonskiers) can use to bomb down the mountain.

Okemo Mountain Resort, also in Vermont, is the kind of place that caters to kids while not neglecting Mom and Dad. The Penguin Playground offers day care for nonskiing youngsters, while the Mini Stars program gently introduces 3- and 4-year-olds to the slopes. Best of all, a Kids Night Out evening gives parents a dinner alone -- try the Coleman Brook Tavern at the newly opened Jackson Gore base area.

In New Hampshire's White Mountains, Bretton Woods offers everything frazzled parents want when skiing with kids: an all-in-one equipment-rental/ski school-registration location; wide runs, and friendly mountain ambassadors who will even help you unload junior's skis from the car.

Apres ski

We love Loon Mountain for its proximity -- just two hours, barring traffic -- and the town of Lincoln, N.H. itself has its fans for apres ski. Try the Gypsy Cafe Bar & Grill for martinis and margaritas -- oh, and they serve food, too. Or catch live entertainment at the Indian Head Profile Room/ Thunderbird Bar & Grille, where you also can rustle up a seafood or steak dinner.

Why settle on one apres ski hot spot when you can have a whole road full -- Killington Road, that is, which is below Killington Resort. Love live music? Head over to the Pickle Barrel Nightclub, which proffers up plenty of noise and pizza.

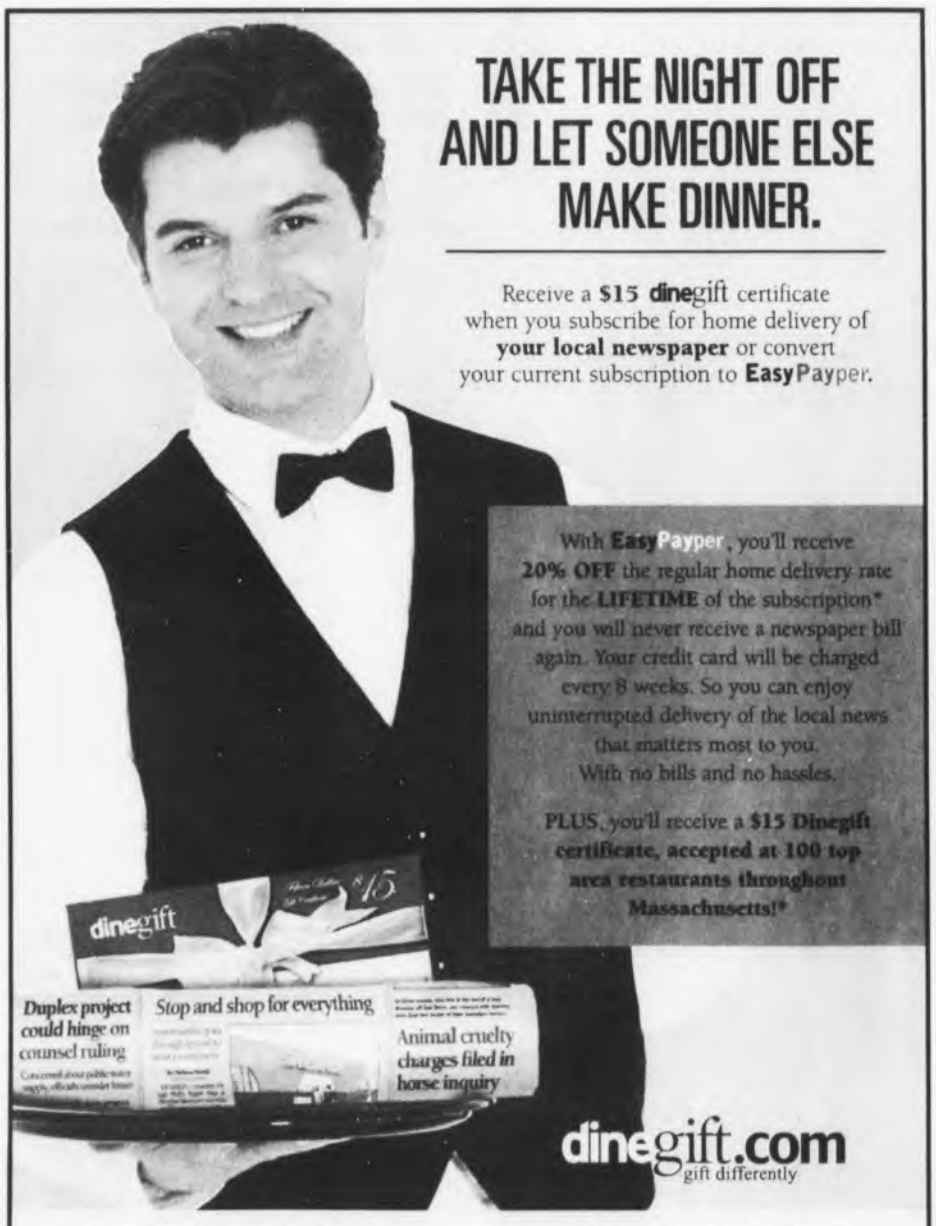
Yes, we know Ascutney Mountain Resort is known as a great family mountain, but don't overlook the apres ski possibilities at the Skunk Hollow Tavern, which serves up great food until 10 p.m. with live music on Fridays. Show off your own pipes at open-mike night on Wednesdays.

Snowmaking

It's tough to be a stand-alone ski area in this era of consolidation, but Vermont's Okemo has been a major independent for decades. And a large part of its success can be tied to its ambitious snowmaking program, which covers 95 percent of slopes and trails including the rolling, rollicking slopes of Jackson Gore, the resort's newest terrain.

When eastern Mass. skiers and riders see only brown or green in their back yards, they've come to understand that all will be right -- and white -- at Sunday River. This is the former mom 'n' pop area in western Maine that industry visionary Les Otten developed into the Northeast's King of the Hills. And super snowmaking was absolutely key.

Time was when southwest New Hampshire's Mount Sunapee was a state-owned area slowly going to seed. That was before the folks just across the Connecticut River at Okemo took over management five years ago; today, Sunapee is a snowmaking behemoth, pumping out machine-made cover in very heavy doses. For those seeking a dependable experience less than two hours from Boston, this is a solid bet.



Snowboarding

Stratton Mountain Resort may have the reputation as a destination for New Yorkers with serious disposable income, but the southern Vermont mountain also has been a rough 'n' ready riders' mecca for 20 years. In the early '80s, snowboard pioneer Jake Burton Carpenter used its slopes as his outdoor laboratory; now Burton boards are the F-150s of the sport -- and Stratton has hosted the U.S. Open, the biggest riding competition in the world, ever since. This season Transworld Snowboarding mag has named it one of the top 10 riding resorts on the continent.

Carpenter has since moved his board biz north to Burlington, and Stowe has become his home turf for riding. The evolution of multiple terrain parks and a monster superpipe -- as well as a multimillion-dollar upgrade/expansion at its sun-splashed Spruce Peak slopes -- has meant a massive influx of rider energy.

As Sunday River morphed into a major player, the good news for snowboarders was that the designers kept riders in mind all the way. There are parks and pipes and the wild descents of OZ, with some truly challenging glades in between.

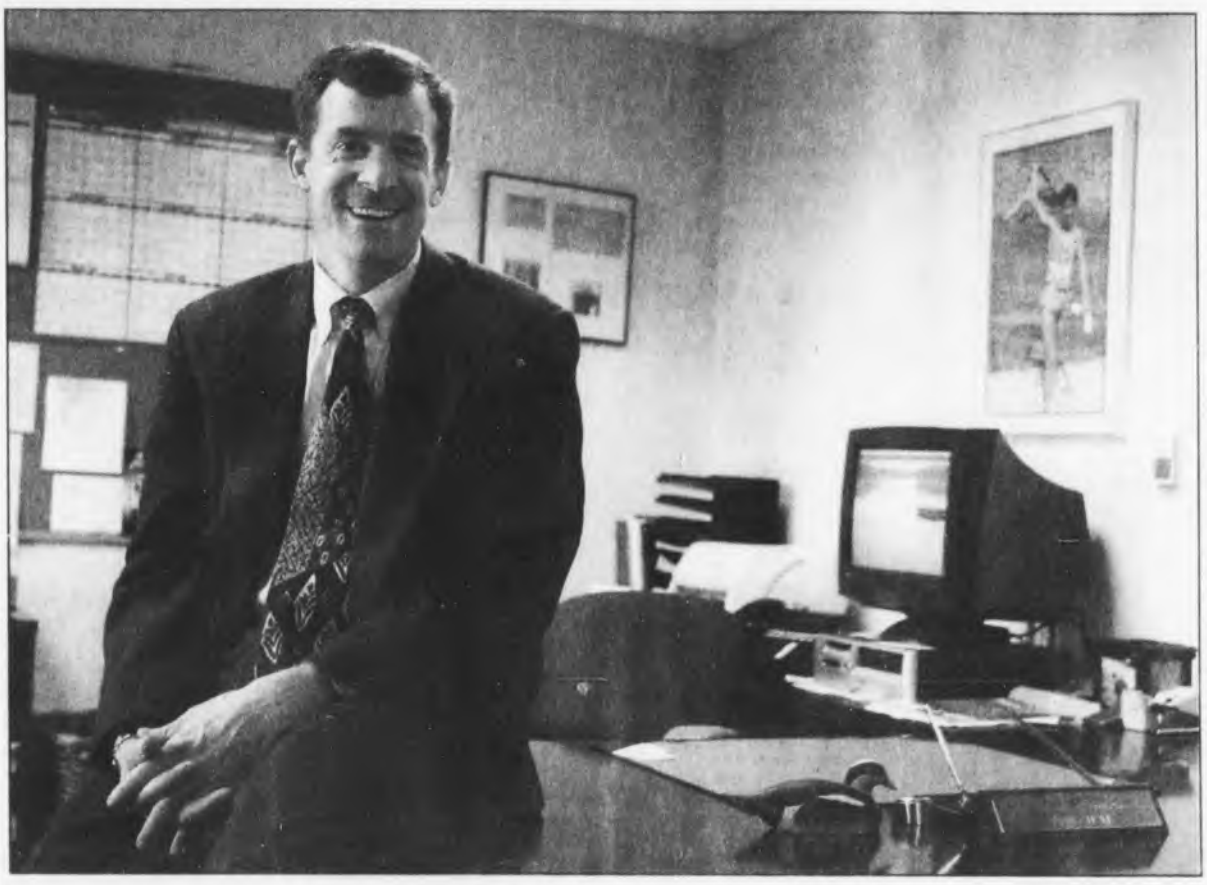
Cook done?

Town stands to lose $1/2M

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Two down and one to go. That's the latest news reported by the board of selectmen which announced Tuesday Cohasset Associates has followed in the footsteps of Deer Hill Partners and has pulled out of the deal to build on the Cook Estate.



The heirs of the Cook Estate have set a firm deadline to close on the property Jan. 15. That means any developer that chooses to work with the town on the project must either have all permits to build in hand on that date, or feel comfortable closing on a piece of property which is not permitted.

In a letter dated Nov. 29, Donald Staszko of Cohasset Associates states the project is too much of a risk for his company to embark upon.

"The present timeframe only allows the developer to purchase the property and hopefully obtain the necessary permits thereafter," he stated. "This presents a risk to the town that the

Joel Antolini, a teacher and track coach at CHS in the early 1990s, took over the reins as principal at the middle-high school on July 1.

Is happy to be back at CMHS

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Joel Antolini's day begins when even the sun is still asleep. As principal of Cohasset Middle High School, he arrives at the building around 6 a.m., and often doesn't leave his office until 4 in the afternoon — unless, of course, he stays late for a meeting or school event.

"By the time you get home and catch up with the family, it's practically bedtime," he said. But there is no other profession he'd rather have, or town where he'd rather be.

Antolini took over at the helm of Cohasset Middle-High School July 1, and was happy to return to a building he holds near and dear to his heart. At the beginning of his career, Antolini had taught technology education for four years in Cohasset, and jumped at the opportunity to work in the town once more.

Upon his arrival, Antolini was glad to see things hadn't changed much since he left. "There were a number of new faces, an additional grade with the sixth grade class, the walls had different colors, the gym

Fed-up teachers take to the streets

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Members of the Cohasset Teachers' Association made a bold statement this week, as they held an informational picket on the corner of Pond Street and 3A before school Thursday morning.

From roughly 7 to 7:45 a.m., teachers carrying signs gathered together to spread the word to all those who drove by that they have been teaching since the beginning of the school year without a contract. The teachers and the school committee have been negotiating the new contract for more than one year and remain apart on key issues that the CTA says "Will impact the district's ability to attract and retain highly qualified educators."

Bargaining chairman Ed Leonard issued a press release on behalf of the CTA prior to the picket. "Our salaries lag behind neighboring, high-performing districts like Duxbury, Hingham, Scituate, and Norwell," stated Leonard, a school counselor at the high school. "Our members are extremely frustrated that the school committee refuses to offer long-term, competitive salaries that will allow our district to compete for the best teachers."

The police department was informed of the picketing prior to Thursday morning and Chief James Hussey said he arranged to bring on two members of the day shift 1-1/2 hours early (at 6:30 a.m.) to stand by and assist

Search is on for special citizen

See nomination form on page 10

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In keeping with a 13-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the means by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored John Coe as Citizen of the Year, a WWII veteran, whose volunteer service at the Senior Center helps make it a warm, friendly place. He was also recognized for his service as the beloved Town Crier at the Village Fair and for his countless other good deeds behind the scenes.

The deadline for nominations for the 2005 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 6. Please see the nomination form on page 10. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Letters of nomination by email to mford@cnc.com are also welcome.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2005 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2006.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal work-

MBTA municipal parking lot plans are not up to par

Town looks to resolve dispute

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"If you've ever tried to park an SUV in a T parking lot, you know you have to inhale to get into them."
— Tom Gruber, Greenbush liaison

The town will soon begin the dispute resolution process with the MBTA. Greenbush liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan feel the mitigation agreement between the town and the MBTA has been broken, as the latest drawing for the municipal parking lot shows roughly 20 parking spaces less than the town had been told it would receive.

Gruber said the original agreement shows the MBTA agreed to reconstruct and expand the municipal parking lot and ensure a total of no less than 182 parking spaces. However, the latest drawings show a total of 161 spaces. He said the agreement can only be modified if all parties who signed the original agreement sign off on the changes, and that hasn't happened.

"There are some compelling reasons why the town could go to dispute resolution," said Gruber, including the fact that not only are there less spaces, the size of the parking spaces the MBTA is using are smaller than the town's bylaws regulate. "If you've ever tried to park an SUV in a T parking lot, you know you have to inhale to get into them."

The board of selectmen agreed something should be done to ensure the town has enough parking and said it would support the dispute resolution process, but wanted to know what it entailed. Gruber explained the process begins with a phone call to the MBTA and it must respond within two days. If the problem is not solved, the next stage of action is to have a face-to-face meeting with the General Manager of the MBTA within three days of the phone conversation. If a resolution still cannot be found, "We are left with the forces of the law," Gruber said, and advised Town Counsel be brought into the loop before the first phone call is made, as the three stages of dispute resolution can progress quickly. Gruber added, "There is no cost unless the first two stages of dispute resolution don't bear fruit.'

One potential solution to the parking problem is blasting the ledge behind the Teen Garage to enable roughly 20 to 30 parking spaces to be added to the municipal lot. Planning board member Peter Pratt suggested potentially carving out a spot where maybe 30 cars could park, but the possibility to expand upwards, perhaps with a parking garage exists. Once the train begins running, blasting will not be allowed in the municipal lot as it will be too dangerous that close to the tracks.

Due to the fact that two senior housing projects are in the pipeline for the downtown area, Pratt said the more parking, the better. Gruber added in speaking with downtown merchants, they say there is currently not enough parking to meet their needs.

Brennan said while the town looks for a resolution with the parking spaces, it could also look for a resolution dealing with the Pleasant Street edge of the parking lot. The amount of sidewalk which was supposed to tie-in with the Village Revitalization project has been changed, and not in the town's favor.

"They have reduced the limits of construction, and if we're going to dispute (the parking spaces) we might as well go for both," Brennan said.

The board of selectmen agreed to go to dispute resolution with both issues and Town Manager Bill Griffin said he would be in touch with the Greenbush team to decide when his schedule would be able to accommodate meeting with the MBTA if necessary.

Volunteers sought to adopt an island

The median barriers in place at the Beechwood Street Greenbush line grade crossing are currently filled with concrete, but will soon be filled with loam ready for planting. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said there was a mistake during construction and the barriers were filled in, but he has contacted the MBTA and it has agreed remedy the situation.

However, once the loam is in place, Dormitzer said it might be nice to have either local businesses or residents adopt the islands to keep them looking beautiful all year long. Because the train crossings are located on the major thoroughfares in town, he said they essentially serve as the gateways into town and greeting people with flowers and foliage would be nice.

Anyone interested in adopting a median-barrier island should contact the selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Shops open during MBTA construction

The Greenbush line is taking shape around town and the grade crossing at Pleasant Street is next on the list. Shop owners at James Brook Crossing (the former ABB Optical building), including the Windsor Tea Shop and Tea Room, Platinum Spike model trains and sports cards, Emporium Naturals fine soaps and gifts, Cohasset Antiques, Cohasset Greenery, and All the Best natural foods would like residents to know construction will have no effect on their business hours.

Annual Town Meeting date set

The Annual Town Meeting has been scheduled for Saturday, April 1. Therefore, citizens wishing to include an article on the Warrant must do so by Jan. 17. For more information, please contact Town Clerk Marion Douglas at (781) 383-4100.

What's cooking at Special Town Meeting on Monday

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The past few Town Meetings — both Special and Annual — have been full of fireworks. Controversial issues have led residents to call for the resignation of officials on the floor of the meeting, have pitted neighbors against neighbors, and have led to hours and hours of discussion spanning more than one night.

This year, there will still be a few hot items on the Warrant, or Town Meeting agenda, but the Warrant itself is smaller than usual, as voters will likely take up 13 articles, or items of business. Warrants have been mailed to every household in town and extra Warrants will be available at the meeting.

The meeting will begin promptly at 7 p.m. at the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium Monday, Dec. 5, and Town Manager Bill Griffin said he is hopeful all business will be concluded that evening. The Moderator typically allows discussion to continue until 11 p.m.

"Though I do not have a lot of experience with Cohasset town meetings, I do think we can do the meeting in one night," said Griffin. While it may not take much time for some items of business to come to a vote, Griffin said the agenda has many important issues, so attracting a quorum should not be a problem.

A quorum of 100 registered voters is required before Town Meeting can begin. Once a quorum is determined at the start of the meeting, it is assumed a quorum is present unless challenged. If challenged, the number of voters will be counted, and if a quorum does not exist, the meeting will be adjourned.

"If we do not get a quorum, we will need to come back another night since we have to balance the budget before we set the tax rate," Griffin said.

If it comes forward, Griffin said the biggest issue to be taken up will be article 17, which would allow the town to purchase the Cook Estate directly from the Cook trustees. At the time the Mariner went to press, it was still unclear whether that article would be taken up at the meeting.

Cohasset Associates, which had tentatively been designated as the developer for the project, pulled out of the deal Tuesday, which then required the town to ask third runner-up in the bid process, Northland Residential, if it would like to develop the project, per state procurement laws. Northland Residential had until today (Friday) to respond either way. "If there is a motion on that article, I would expect it to take a while," Griffin said.

On a related note, article 14, which would place a conservation restriction on a town-owned parcel of land adjacent to the Cook Estate on Sohier Street could spark discussion as well. As a citizens' petition, the article was placed on the Warrant by residents who want to see the town's roughly 8.7 acres located adjacent to the potential senior housing site preserved as open space.

By placing a conservation restriction on the land, it would preserve the land as-is, which would protect the abutting Peppermint Brook, one of the main tributaries to Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply. Consequently, putting a conservation restriction on the land means it cannot be built upon. In the past, the land has been looked at as the potential site of a new fire house or police department, and more recently, as a site for affordable senior rental housing.

Also anticipated to generate discussion is the budget. Article one will ask the town to balance the fiscal 2006 operating budget, as it is off by $435,633 due to a failed $400,000 override (which passed at the Annual Town Meeting but was voted down at a subsequent ballot box vote) and some other costs which have come up throughout the course of the year. To make up those funds, various cuts and adjustments have been made.

Article two was a placeholder article which has since been taken off the Warrant, as there are no unpaid bills to be paid.

Since the budget was voted, negotiations with the police union have been completed which requires some budgetary tweaking via article three. There is $20,715 in retroactive cots for fiscal 2005 to be dealt with, as well as an increase of $64,918 for fiscal 2006. The town has negotiated a new three-year contract with the police union for fiscal 2006, 2007, and 2008 which will all see 3 percent increases. The police union took a zero percent increase for fiscal 2005, which means over the course of the four fiscal years being dealt with, the average increase of the police officers' contract will be 2.25 percent.

Article four will ask the town to approve the Community Preservation Committee's recommendations for spending its funds, which includes using $20,000 to hire a housing consultant. The consultant would be available to help the soon-to-be-formed Cohasset Housing Partnership, an advisory committee to be appointed by selectmen to advocate for affordable housing in town. In addition to aiding the partnership, the consultant would be available to help the planning board or other boards in need of housing expertise. The consultant would be paid $10,000 to review the draft housing plan which is part of the town's draft Master Plan and another $10,000 to help educate town boards and the housing partnership on affordable housing issues.

The town will also be asked to approve the CPC's wish to rescind a recommendation to set aside $98,500 for the schools for an overhaul of Alumni Field. The school department decided not to complete the renovations it had in mind, and made other adjustments to the field instead, and therefore the $98,500 is no longer needed.

Article five will ask the town to help the board of assessors keep up with deadlines set by the state. The Department of Revenue requires towns go through a triennial revaluation program every three years, and in order to make that happen in a timely fashion, more staff is needed.

To that end, the town will be asked to appropriate $15,000 which could be put toward hiring some part-time help to aid in the revaluation process, as well as making sure all equipment, including cameras and software, is current.

Article six is a fairly routine article that asks the town to grant real estate tax exemptions to qualified applicants for fiscal year 2006. This kind of article is typically passed at the Annual Town Meeting.

Articles seven and eight are both water department articles. Together, they will allow the water department to investigate the possibility of acquiring or placing conservation restrictions on parcels of land in both Cohasset and Scituate which abut tributaries of the town's water supply.

Article nine would allow the Cohasset Board of Library Trustees to begin a new non-profit branch dedicated to raising funds for, and managing the funds in the library's $900,000 endowment. The non-profit company would be known as the Cohasset Library Trust, Inc., and would have a board of directors, to be appointed by a majority vote of the Trustees. Its purpose would be to help supplement and increase library services to the community.

The Trust will not in any way conflict with the more than 30-year-old Friends of the Cohasset Library non-profit organization. The Friends was formed to enrich the library by funding projects beyond the scope of the library's appropriated budget.

Article 10 will ask the town to allocate the funds necessary to ensure the local Office of Emergency Management has the tools it needs to function properly during a time of crisis. One of the most critical elements of any emergency situation is communication, and to help keep those lines of communication open, voters will be asked to allocate $30,000 to purchase a "Reverse 9-1-1" calling system.

Reverse 9-1-1 systems allow towns to send out blanket telephone messages to every household in the community. A database is set up to hold every street address, household names, and telephone number, and depending on the company offering the reverse 9-1-1 service, messages can be sent by either a computer generated caller or a pre-recorded voice message from an official in town.

Currently, the school department is using the Connect-ED telephone system, which has proved to be very valuable in getting messages out to parents, but the town does not have such a service at its disposal. The new system would service both the town and the schools.

In addition to the funding for the reverse 9-1-1 system, there is an additional $5,000 request to help purchase more supplies for the town's emergency shelters. While the town has some emergency supplies left over from the Civil Defense days of the 1960s, in this new era of Homeland Security, there are many items which are a must in order for the town to be prepared.

Articles 11, 12, and 13 were zoning articles which have been taken off the Warrant.

Article 15 would establish a scholarship in memory of Gia Barresi, a member of the Cohasset High School class of 1983. Barresi passed away in September, 2001 and her classmates have been busy raising funds for the scholarship fund ever since.

While formal Town Meeting articles are not necessary to establish scholarship funds, and the board of selectmen can approve them at an ordinary meeting, taking a Town Meeting vote will ensure there will be a permanent record of the scholarship's establishment. Town Meeting votes become part of the annual town report, which means the good work of Barresi's classmates will be forever remembered as a part of the town's history, not lost forever in the minutes of a selectmen's meeting.

The recipient of the scholarship will be a female student graduating from Cohasset High School who has achieved high honor roll three of four terms, has engaged in athletic or other extra-curricular activities two of three seasons during each academic year, has enrolled in a full-time, four-year accredited college or university, and has exhibited outstanding leadership qualities in school or in the community.

Article 16 will ask the town to vote on whether it would like to see roughly $100,000 borrowed for the purpose of constructing a new sidewalk on Beechwood Street from South Main Street, roughly to its intersection with Norman Todd Road. Residents feel with the train on its way and no sidewalk on Beechwood Street, even near the crossing itself, installing a sidewalk at least for a length of the road will be a huge safety improvement.

The Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Dec. 5 in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium, and will begin promptly at 7 p.m. There will be additional Warrants, or agendas, available at the meeting. Residents must be registered voters in order to cast any votes at the meeting. Non-voters may attend, but must sit in the non-voting section.

Cook project hopes dim as second developer withdraws project may not be permitted as specified. It presents a greater risk to the developer, if permits were denied, and the land forfeited back to the town. A $200,000 deposit and developmental 'soft cost' loss is an acceptable risk. A possible $4,800,000 forfeiture is an unacceptable risk."

Staszko urged the town to seek the authority at the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting to purchase the property in January from the Cook heirs and then issue a new RFP that could give Cohasset Associates and other interested parties the opportunity to submit new proposals.

Members of the board of selectmen said they were disappointed with the latest development. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who had been working with selectman Rob Spofford to negotiate a deal with Staszko, said while he understands the risk is a big one for the company and that he made the decision in his best interest, "It's disappointing after many days and weeks of discussion." Dormitzer said he had been very hopeful something could have been settled upon to make the project work.

Spofford echoed Dormitzer's sentiments and said the negotiation sessions were very positive and Cohasset Associates "negotiated in better than good faith," and he too was disappointed an agreement could not be reached.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said while he agreed that Cohasset Associates certainly bent over backwards to try to make something work, "Let's call and ace an ace. When Deer Hill was designated and Cohasset Associates wrote a letter to the Inspector General, it probably had a lot to do with Deer Hill backing out." He said Cohasset Associates, "Made such a stink," about not being chosen, that problems arose and by the time Deer Hill decided it needed to back out, the town's already short timeframe in which to work had further deteriorated.

What happens now?

Both Deer Hill Partners, which was originally, tentatively awarded the bid to build on the Cook Estate, and now Cohasset Associates, which was second runner-up in the bid process have pulled out of the deal which means the town, under state procurement laws, must contact the third and final bidder, Northland Residential to see if it would like to work with the town to build on the land. If it does, it will be required to close the deal with the town on Jan. 15, just as the other two companies would have been required to do. The town sent a letter to Northland Residential to inform it of the situation and said it needed a response by Friday (today).

Not knowing what Northland will say, the board thought it would be best to discuss every available option for the project, as there is the possibility the town will be asked to purchase the land at Town Meeting, and the board should be prepared to present all the facts.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said in his opinion, the town is really looking at three options. It could decide to take its losses and walk away; purchase the property and put it on the market and sell it to whomever wants it; or it could purchase the property and draft another RFP and begin the process all over again.

If the town does not purchase the property and walks away now, Town Manager Bill Griffin said the out-of-pocket expenses paid to date, coupled with the anticipated next round of legal bills the town is slated to receive, mean the town could lose roughly $544,000. That figure includes the three extensions the town has asked for at $20,000 each, as well as the $200,000 non-refundable deposit and all due-diligence and legal fees.

If the town decides to purchase the property and sell it right away, the probable interest the town would need to pay on the money it borrows for the transaction would be $20,000 per month.

However, if the town decides to purchase the property and go through the RFP process once more, it will have to own the property during the permitting process, as past experience has shown a developer is not likely going to enter into an agreement to buy a piece of land that may not support the development they have in mind. Assuming the permitting process takes six months, the town would have to spend $120,000 just to keep it in its possession. If the process takes a year, $240,000.

"We might have to increase the minimum asking price," said selectman Gary Vanderweil, who then floated the option to ask the Community Preservation Committee to help pay the costs.

Chairman of the Community Preservation Committee Stuart Ivimey said there are only three reasons the CPC can spend money: for open space, for affordable housing, and for historical preservation. He said therefore, if the town wanted to purchase the land itself and keep it as open space, or build affordable housing on the site, the CPC could help. If market rate units are built as part of the project, the CPC would run into some issues.

However, planning board member Peter Pratt said many projects throughout the state are now being built with mixed income sources. He said a project could be divided and built with a pool of three funding sources, as the town, a private developer, and the CPC could all pitch in for various aspects of the project.

Vanderweil said the town has already voted to allow the town to work with a private developer to build on the Cook site, and perhaps that is the route that should still be taken.

But Spofford said the circumstances have changed since Town Meeting voted in favor of working with a private developer to build on the land. He said when the vote was taken, people were told there would be no risk, and that had a lot to do with why people supported the venture. But today is a different story, and "People are going to say we're using taxpayer money to speculate on real estate. We are now getting into the real estate development business."

Spofford said it is very ironic that the town could very soon find itself in the same position it had put potential developers in — needing to make a decision as to whether it should purchase a piece of property that may or may not be able to be developed the way it wants. "I'm not sure the town is ready to make a $5 million commitment when we haven't done the due diligence," he said.

Dormitzer said there is always the risk the town could purchase the property and not receive any bids from private developers and then where will it be?

Dormitzer and Spoffod were scheduled to meet with the Cook trustees Wednesday morning to inform them Staszko has pulled out of the deal. The board of selectmen was scheduled to meet Thursday after the Mariner went to press to discuss its options. The board was slated to receive a response from Northland Residential by Friday. The board plans to make a decision by Monday's Special Town Meeting as to whether it would like to ask voters to approve purchasing the property directly from the Cook trustees.

What now?

The board of selectmen still has a few options left regarding how to proceed with the Cook Estate:

- Back out of the deal and lose roughly $544,000 in deposits, legal, and due diligence fees.
- Purchase the property and sell it on the open market to whomever wants it.
- Purchase the property (potentially with CPC funds) and leave it as open space.
- Purchase the property, draft another RFP, and give the process in place another chance.
- Work with the CPC and a private developer to create a hybrid project with mixed funding.

If the board of selectmen decides it is in the town's best interest to purchase the property, Town Meeting will be asked to approve that purchase Monday, Dec. 5. The town would have to pay the interest on the money borrowed to purchase the land until it can close with a developer.

Cohasset students receive a quality education from highly qualified teachers.

■ Cohasset's MCAS scores rank in the top 15 percent statewide.
■ The vast majority of our graduates attend competitive, four-year colleges.
■ More than 95 percent of Cohasset's teachers are "highly qualified" under new federal standards.

But Cohasset teachers do not have a quality contract.

Nearby communities pay teachers thousands of dollars more per year.

Master's Maximum Salary Comparison

The School Committee's proposals are unacceptable and would put Cohasset schools at a further competitive disadvantage.

The key problems are:

■ Inadequate salary increases that widen the gap between Cohasset and comparable communities.
■ Drastically lowering the cap for tuition reimbursement.
■ Failure to increase instructional planning time needed to improve classroom learning.

Great Teachers = Great Schools.

Local furniture, antique business is a family affair

Rte. 3A shop continues to thrive

By Catherine O'Callaghan
CORRESPONDENT

Peering through the display windows at Country House Furniture and Antiques can be deceiving. Stepping into the store, located on Route 3A (almost at the border of Cohasset and Scituate) one gets the sense of entering into a comfortably furnished home; decorated with beautifully crafted furniture, fabrics, carpets, wallpaper and home accessories. Continuing through the store, accompanied by owners, Bob and Arlene Ferreira and their daughters Kimberly Jalewski and Lisa Evans, you begin to realize the wide range of merchandise that Country House Furniture and Antiques offers. It is a complete home design center that offers a full line of home decorating products and design consulting services.

Long time Cohasset resident, Bob Ferreira started a floor covering business in 1962, selling quality carpeting and vinyl flooring. Town & Country Flooring, located on Route 3A in the former Cushing Plaza (now Shaw's Plaza) supplied the flooring for a great majority of homes in Cohasset and Scituate. In 1979 Ferreira and his wife, Arlene purchased a small commercial building at 818 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A), where Arlene opened up Country House Antiques. Home decorating had always been an interest of Arlene's and after helping her friends decorate their homes and taking some decorating courses, she decided to use her talent and resources to open her own antique store.

At this time, Country House Antiques specialized in country antiques which the Ferreiras found at auctions and by traveling to antique dealers all over the country. Over the years, Arlene found her clients needed additional pieces besides the antiques she sold to fill their homes. She then began carrying furniture, fabrics and wallpapers to go with the antiques in her store. Country House Antiques went from a 1,000 square foot store to a 6,000 square foot store after several expansions, now called Country House Furniture and Antiques.

"We can provide 90 percent of the items used to decorate a home from our store," Arlene says. "We have evolved from a small antique shop to a resource that can furnish an entire home.

"We went from country antiques to a more sophisticated, traditional look, providing casual elegance for our clients."

— Arlene Ferreira

"We also offer a discount on all major brands of furniture, fabrics and wall coverings. There is no reason to go outside of Cohasset to find quality and reasonably priced home furnishings," she says.

Fifteen years ago, Talbots whose headquarters is based in Hingham, used Country House Furniture and Antiques to supply furniture and antiques for its stores. Working with Talbots, the Ferrieras developed custom tables for Talbots stores all over the country. They expanded this custom furniture line to include tables, bookshelves, beds, trunks in a choice of wood; cherry, maple and pine for their clients. They now have a custom workshop where their clients can order any size table and a variety of different styles and types of furniture all custom made to their specifications.

Bob and Arlene Ferreira (first and third from left) and their daughters, Lisa Evans and Kim Jalewski, stand behind a solid-cherry, custom-made table with custom-finished chairs from England, in their family business, Country House Furniture and Antiques, off Rte. 3A.

The Ferreiras' daughter, Kim Jalewski joined the family business nine years ago and their other daughter, Lisa Evans came onboard a year ago. Both assist with the design consulting, while Jalewski enjoys working with the upholstered furniture lines and Evans purchases and merchandises all the gift items under the Accents gift division of the store.

Evans brings with her a knowledge of color, presentation and style cultivated after 18 years as a fashion buyer for Talbots.

"Trends in home design are very similar to trends in fashion," Evans says. She saw the need for a more developed giftware line to add to the full-service decorating approach of Country House Furniture and Antiques. Clients are now able to purchase dishes, bed comforters and accessories for their homes, as well as find interesting gifts for all occasions.

"We provide a vertical approach to merchandising," Jalewski says. "We offer everything for the home to our clients."

Design center

This December, Country House Furniture and Antiques is opening a second floor design center which will be filled with furniture, comprehensive fabric library and carpet samples. The Ferreiras will use this space to work with their clients on their home design. While continuing to offer in-house design consulting, this new space will allow Country House Furniture and Antiques to expand their furniture inventory and provide a quiet location for clients to take advantage of their samples and design resources.

Bob and Arlene Ferreira's seven grandchildren are the sixth generation of family in Cohasset. You can find their grandchildren helping out in the store or playing among the racks of fabrics and carpet samples on the weekends and school holidays.

Doing business on Route 3 A for 40 years, the Ferreiras have seen many antique and consignment stores come and go. They say they have managed to stay in business and be successful because they have changed with the times.

They have evolved from an antique store when their clients were interested in more formal decorating styles to a design center for clients who are now interested in having a wide range of home decorating products and services under the same roof.

"We went from country antiques to a more sophisticated, traditional look, providing casual elegance for our clients," Arlene says.

The Ferreira family has watched other stores change ownership, move to new locations, or close their doors. Country House Furniture and Antiques has stayed in business for the longest period of time and with the help of their children and grandchildren, it looks like they are here to stay.

Fed-up teachers take to the streets

with traffic, but said the light at the intersection was all the traffic regulation necessary. Everyone stayed off the street, and "There was no negative impact on traffic," he said.

"It was a very orderly assembly," Hussey said, adding he estimates between 40 and 50 teachers attended, with some arriving late and others leaving early. He said some cars honked their horns and some waived as they drove by. Overall, from his standpoint, he said the morning was non-eventful.

The Rte. 3A picketing is the latest in a string of job actions taken by the CTA. On the second day of school, teachers held an informational picket at the middle-high school both before and after school, to let parents know their contract had still not been settled. At that time teachers also began cutting back on voluntary activities, such as chaperoning dances and the Camp Marist trip for incoming freshmen students. Teachers also said they would no longer use their planning time to substitute for other teachers who were not in school for the day.

"Our members are extremely frustrated that the school committee refuses to offer long-term, competitive salaries that will allow our district to compete for the best teachers."

— Ed Leonard, CTA

In early November, actions were taken to the next level as teachers at every school began gathering just after the end of the school day, to exit together one time per week. Teachers would then assemble holding signs outside their school. In addition to their collective exiting, at that time they began further reducing their availability for parent conferences from two to one day per week at the elementary schools, middle and high school teachers became available for office hours only two days per week, and teachers also put a deadline on college recommendations and said either students or parents must request them by Dec. 1. After that date, teachers said they would not accept requests to write college recommendations.

Since the beginning of the school year, teachers have been wearing red buttons to show their solidarity in trying to work out a new contract. Among the issues to be addressed before a contract can be settled are:

- Fair raises in an amount that keeps up with inflation.
- Maintaining tuition reimbursement rates.
- More preparation time for elementary level teachers.
- Fair compensation package and benefits for nurses.

After the second round of job actions were taken with the implementation of mass exiting, the teachers' buttons changed from plain red to red with a white "SOS" which stands for save our school. Teachers have also begun wearing their veteran teacher pins, awarded for longevity, alongside their buttons.

Cohasset teachers, still without a contract, demonstrate before school Thursday morning at the corner of Pond Street and Rte. 3A.

Principal Joel Antolini comes full circle at CMHS

had moved, and there were a few more classrooms."

But he noted, "It's the kids that make the school and they haven't really changed. They still want to learn."

While this is Antolini's first administrative role in Cohasset, he comes with years of experience under his belt. He holds a bachelor's degree in industrial arts from Fitchburg State College as well as a master's degree in education administration from Boston University.

Antolini began his teaching career in 1983 and his first job was teaching technology education at Acton Boxboro Regional High School. However, he said during that time, young teachers were hit hard as Prop. 2-1/2 restrictions led to cutbacks and often the youngest teachers were the first to go.

After Acton Boxboro, Antolini taught at Wellesley High School for two years before contemplating a career change. He began his own business, Olympian contracting, which had him completing home renovations as well as hanging wallpaper and painting. As a teacher, the business had always gone well during the summer and had provided him with a change of pace, so the prospect of turning that into a full-time business venture was exciting.

However, as the year went on, Antolini began to really miss working with students, and that February — at the half-way point of the school year — he took a job working at Marshfield High School, where he spent the next 3-1/2 years.

After Marshfield, Antolini made his way north to Cohasset where he stayed from September 1991 through June 1995. Not only was he teaching the students in the classroom, he became further involved in the school as its track coach. Antolini said he would often accompany students on long runs from the school up through Whitney Woods and back again.

But in the classroom, Antolini began to notice the need for more than just woodworking and mechanical drawing, which traditional industrial or technology arts programs called for.

"We realized there was a certain level of interest in avocational areas" and a need to help bridge the gap between what students were learning in math and science classes and real-world engineering experience. To that end, Antolini said he began offering courses in pre-engineering, and the students really began taking an interest.

During Antolini's teaching years, he was busily pursuing his master's degree. While in Cohasset, he became eager to put his knowledge to use and become an administrator. However, job openings at the administrative level were scarce, which led him to seek out opportunities in other towns. While he was sad to leave Cohasset, Antolini could not say no when the opportunity to become assistant principal of Mansfield High School presented itself.

Antolini spent the next seven years of his career in Mansfield before leaving to take on the role of Principal at Holbrook Junior/Senior High School, where he spent the next three years. However, as fate would have it, a job opening in Cohasset sparked his interest in the town once again, and he happily accepted the offer to become the middle-high school's principal.

New challenges

Antolini's prior experience in Cohasset led him to have certain expectations for this school year. However, he said the events which have taken place during his short tenure have been anything but anticipated.

"We have teachers participating in a work to rule, bomb and gun threats, students being searched upon entry, it's been wonderful," he quipped. "However, in spite of all the distractions, you can walk into the classrooms and see learning taking place. We're very focused on academics and challenging the kids. Through it all, the school still enjoys a very good reputation," he said.

Because the Cohasset Teachers' Association has taken job actions, due to the fact that its members are working without a contract and have been since the beginning of the school year, Antolini said he has found himself in a somewhat ironic position.

"I was president of the CTA when I left here, so I can relate. I know what they're talking about, and I know they're well-intentioned," he said. While Antolini said the job actions have made for a difficult start to the year, "It hasn't hurt us terribly from getting the job done."

Antolini said the acts of violence which took place at the beginning of the year, including a bomb threat and gun threat, in some ways showed the strength of the community, as parents showed a tremendous amount of support for the students and school administration. "It's was very draining for a lot of us. It's not a fun way to start off the year," he said.

Going forward, Antolini said he has big plans for the middle-high school. He said within three years, he would like to see the Presidential Flag of Excellence hanging outside the school. Schools are eligible to receive the flag only if their MCAS scores are within the top 10 percent across the state. If a school does perform within the top 10 percent, it is then invited to participate in the next level of "scrutiny," and Antolini has no doubt the flag will soon be flying.

"We'll see what happens, but the students, staff, and the community deserve it. It would be nice to recognize the efforts of the teachers as well as the students," he said.

When not at school, Antolini said he enjoys being with his family, including wife AnnMarie and their 8-year-old daughter Rosalie. "I'm a very outdoorsy kind of person," he said, adding he enjoys fishing and golfing. Antolini has a family cottage in Maine with a pond "five steps from the back door," which serves as a favorite fishing spot. Antolini jokes he'll golf "at any course that'll take me" as his busy schedule makes it hard to find the time to play a round.

But Antolini said despite the time commitment and the chaos that sometimes ensues as the principal of a high school, he always looks forward to being able to recognize students for their good work. He said he signed the report cards given to every student who made either honor roll or high honors this term, as a way to personally congratulate them on a job well done.

He said what sets Cohasset students apart is their willingness to set high standards for themselves and work hard to meet those standards, "And that is the reason I was most interested in coming back."

Budget tweaking expected to kick off Special Town Meeting

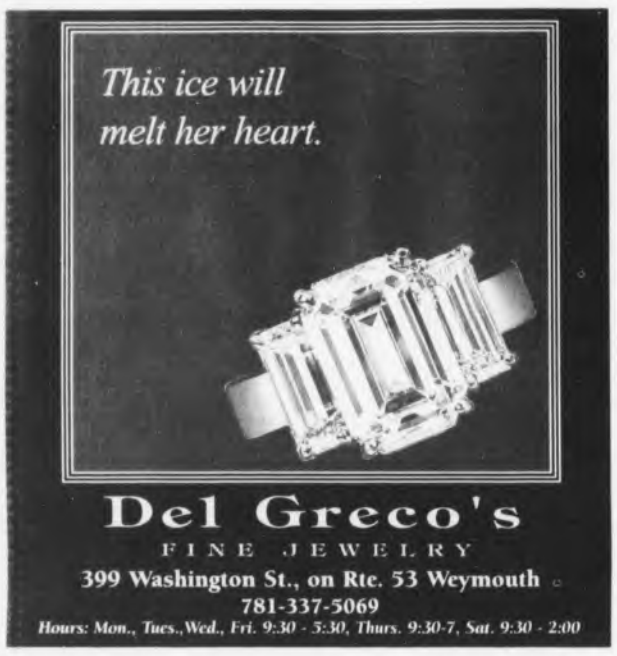
Failed override comes into play

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Meeting voters will be asked Monday to balance the fiscal 2006 budget. The Special Town Meeting will begin at 7 p.m., Dec. 5 in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium.

As the first item on the Town Meeting Warrant, balancing the budget could lead to some discussion among voters. Not only will voters be asked to approve the recommended actions for balancing the budget due to the failed $400,000 override last spring — there will also be a $109,000 reserve fund transfer, specifically earmarked for the schools, on the table.

The operating budget is off by $435,633 due both to the override failure and other costs which have come up during the year. Of the $400,000 override figure, $360,000 was slated to go to the schools and $40,000 was slated to go to the town to pay for school building maintenance. When the override failed, the town and school department agreed to split up the cost, with the school department picking up $285,000.



In July, the school committee said the school's portion of the cost would be made up by not including four teaching positions in the fiscal 2006 budget. Two privately funded positions from fiscal 2005 were not added to the fiscal 2006 budget nor were two newly proposed positions. By not adding those positions, the schools would save $180,000, and anticipated circuit breaker (special education) funding was expected to make up the remaining $105,000 balance. However, it is unclear whether that is still the plan for the school department.

On the town's side, the town manager clerical line item was reduced by $23,000 as well as the treasurer/collector line item by $5,000. The building maintenance line item will be decreased by $10,000, which means of the $40,000 (that would have been given to the town for school building maintenance through the override), the town has been able to come up with $30,000. The pensions line item has been decreased by $20,000 as have the worker's compensation and property and liability insurance, which came in less than expected, for a total of $60,000. Unemployment costs, however, increased and $30,000 will need to be added to the budget.

In addition to approving the school and town budget shifts, voters will be asked to approve a $109,000 reserve fund transfer, which will be earmarked for the school department. In October, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh found there was roughly $190,000 in funds left over from fiscal 2005. Some positions had been left open for a portion of the year before they were filled, which resulted in some cost savings. Walsh asked the school committee to approve using the left-over fiscal 2005 funds to pre-pay out of district special education tuitions for fiscal 2006, which it did.

However, because the town had made roughly $360,000 available for the school department on top of the $400,000 override passed by voters for fiscal 2005 — using the money left over for its own purposes without consulting any town officials did not sit well with either the advisory committee or selectmen.

After meeting with the advisory committee, the school committee decided the best course of action would be to allow the town to take back $109,000 into free cash (the school committee already spent roughly $81,000 to pre-pay special education costs). The town will therefore be asked to approve transferring the free cash into the reserve fund, to be earmarked for future school department out-of-district tuition costs.

Griffin clears up the myths surrounding surplus funds

Budgetary lingo can be confusing

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"A few years back, the DOR ran a contest to rename free cash, since as someone said at the time, it is neither 'free' nor actual 'cash."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

Getting to the root of Town Meeting jargon is half the battle in making an informed vote. For example, the Special Town Meeting Monday will ask voters to approve a $109,000 transfer to the reserve fund, but the average citizen may not know what the reserve fund is, or why a town has one.

To help clear up the confusion, Town Manager Bill Griffin explained there are three areas of "surplus" funds in the budget: the stabilization fund, the reserve fund, and free cash.

Griffin said of all three, the reserve fund is the simplest to explain. Each year, the town votes to appropriate a sum of money ($125,000 in fiscal 2006) into the reserve fund, which is under the control of the advisory committee.

"It is to be used for 'unexpected and unforeseen expenses,' as determined by the advisory committee. Every town has a reserve fund so they can handle unexpected and unforeseen expenses during the course of the fiscal year without having to call a special town meeting," said Griffin.

At this year's Special Town Meeting, Griffin said the town will be asked to put an additional $109,000 into the reserve fund, which are funds in addition to the $125,000. The $109,000 will be available for unexpected and unforeseen expenses relating to special education tuitions or other needs as determined by the advisory committee.

The town has other money available at its disposal which are essentially in reserves. Griffin said the stabilization fund is an actual trust fund that has actual money in it and earns its own interest. Town Meeting can transfer money from the stabilization fund for any lawful purpose. Other than interest being earned, the only way the stabilization fund increases is if Town Meeting votes to put money into it.

Free cash is more complicated than the other two accounts. At the end of every fiscal year, Griffin said the Director of Finance prepares the balance sheet as of June 30, the last day of the fiscal year. "In essence, a snapshot is taken of town finances as of that date," he said.

After the Department of Revenue reviews the balance sheet, it certifies the amount of free cash, or surplus, the town has. Those funds can then be transferred by Town Meeting for any lawful purpose. "From one year to the next, free cash can vary greatly based on how much money the town collected in revenue over and above what was predicted, how much money was turned back to surplus from budget appropriations, and a bunch of other calculations by the Department of Revenue," he said.

As an aside, Griffin said free cash is probably the most misunderstood concept in Massachusetts municipal finance and the most difficult to describe since it is more of an accounting calculation than an actual account that has actual money in it (like the stabilization fund).

"A few years back, the DOR ran a contest to rename free cash, since as someone said at the time, it is neither 'free' nor actual 'cash.' There was no consensus for a new name, and the term free cash remains to this day," he said.

Griffin said in the simplest of terms, the three accounts can be explained like this:

- Reserve fund: would be similar to an individual having a liquid savings account to be tapped for unexpected expenses.
- Stabilization fund: would be similar to an individual having a longer term certification of deposit as an investment, for major emergencies, or for a larger expense in the future.
- Free cash: would be similar to someone's "net worth" where it is more of an accounting calculation than actual in-hand money. A person's net worth can go up and down based on the value of their property, how much they owe on the mortgage, performance of investments, and so on.

The Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Dec. 5 at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium.

Meeting floated for Village development

Planning board member Mike Westcott, who serves as an ex-officio member of the economic growth and development committee, came before the board of selectmen Tuesday to gain feedback on a public forum he would like to see take place.

He said with at least two major projects in the pipeline for building housing downtown, he would like to see a public forum held before the end of the year that would allow all parties with a vested interest in the village to get together to discuss how change will affect things. The meeting would also help the economic growth and development committee in its recommendations, which it will be giving to the board of selectmen in January.

Westcott said the tentative date for the meeting is, Saturday, Dec. 10 from 9 a.m. However, because December can be a particularly busy month, the board of selectmen suggested it be pushed back. The purpose of having the meeting before the end of the year was to allow the discussion to become part of the feedback for the economic development committee's recommendations, and therefore the board of selectmen said it would be willing to extend the deadline for the committee's comments to allow the meeting to take place after the first of the year. With the board's OK, Westcott said he would go ahead and begin planning the meeting and would return with more specifics at a later date.

Historic home seeks federal façade easement

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Homeowners at 59 Highland Ave. will be the first to become eligible for a special tax break given to homes of historical significance.

Selectmen voted Tuesday to allow Gabriel Gomez to file for a façade conservation easement, which is essentially an agreement to preserve the historic exterior of the home in perpetuity. In return, he will receive a tax break of between 10 and 15 percent of the value of the home. Many homeowners use the money received through the easement to pay for the upkeep of the home.

Mory Bahar of the National Architectural Trust attended the meeting on Gomez's behalf, and stated façade easements have been granted many times in Boston, but this would be the first in Cohasset. He said only houses that are listed on the National Register of Historic Places, either within a district or separately, are eligible to participate. Cohasset has a nationally recognized Common Historic District, which includes the Gomez house.

The façade easement is a legal agreement between the property owner and Trust to protect the building's historic façade. By granting the easement, the owner agrees not to change the exterior portions of the house — which are visible from the street — to ensure the architectural integrity of a historic property is maintained.

In Cohasset, homes within the Common Historic District are required to apply to the Common Historic District Commission to make exterior changes, and the façade easement would not change that process. Bahar said local and federal restrictions work together in their preservation efforts and if a change is not permitted at the local level, the Trust may not overrule that decision.

The Gomez home, 59 Highland Ave., is seeking a façade conservation easement through the 1976 Federal Historic Preservation Tax Incentive Program.

The program falls under the auspices of the National Architectural Trust – a Washington, DC- based non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of historic architecture.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil asked why homes that are already restricted in what they may do would feel it was necessary to have another restriction imposed. Bahar explained some local ordinances do not cover all the aspects of preserving the exterior of a home, and the federal regulation helps further preservation efforts. He reiterated both the local and federal regulations work together, and if a change is floated that does not work for one or the other, the change doesn't go through. "The objective of both is to preserve the exterior," he said, and homeowners who participate at the federal level will be rewarded financially for their efforts.

In addition, Bahar said sometimes local preservation bylaws change depending on the people in office, and Congress passed the 1976 Federal Historic Preservation Tax Incentive Program, which makes the tax break possible, "To ensure historic gems of the nation are preserved regardless of the current political climate in town."

The façade easement is considered a charitable donation under the tax code, and Bahar said the amount of the tax break is determined by an appraisal of the home. Bahar explained if the house is visible on all four sides, the tax break is larger because there is more house to preserve, whereas a building which is sandwiched between two others only has an easement on the front because that is the only readily visible part of the building. Bahar said people typically receive 7-10 to 15 percent of the fair market value of the building."

The program falls under the auspices of the National Architectural Trust – a Washington, DC- based non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of historic architecture. To participate through the NAT, the homeowner pays the Trust 10 percent of the value of the easement. In other words, if the easement is valued at $100,000, the homeowner would pay the trust $10,000, which is also tax deductible. The homeowner also pays the cost of the appraisal.

Selectman Rob Spofford asked whether the tax break is only at the federal level. Bahar said it is, and will therefore not have any effect on the local tax base.

Cedarmere to get some neighbors

Subdivision planned on abutting 14 acres

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Plans for a single-family home subdivision are in the works for a 14-acre parcel of land next to Cedarmere. David Calhoun of Sheldon Road has presented the planning board with an informal presentation of what he intends to formally file within the next few weeks.

The existing house on the land has an address of 215 South Main St., but is accessed from Castle Road. It will remain as one of the six homes in the subdivision. Five additional houses will also be spread throughout the property.

"The neighbors wanted to see a residential development," said Calhoun. He said with the minimal number of houses "the character of the neighborhood will be maintained."

Calhoun and his wife Kelli, along with their business partner Tom Ragno of Lexington, were the original owners of Cedarmere. Before selling that project to Leggat McCall Properties, the Calhouns purchased the 14 abutting acres from Charles Flint. Architect Jim Sandell designed the shingle-style buildings for Cedarmere and has been working with Calhoun to design this subdivision.

Calhoun explained the property will have three means of access. There are pillars marking the roadway to the property on South Main Street and there is also an easement through Cedarmere. He said therefore, property owners will be able to use not only the South Main Street entrance, but either the Beechwood Street Cedarmere entrance or the Rte. 3A Cedarmere entrance to reach their homes. The previous owners of the Flint property had an easement through Cedarmere which was carried over when the Calhouns purchased it.

Calhoun said he will be ready to formally file the project as a subdivision in the next few weeks and hopes to be included on the agenda for the planning board's Dec. 14 meeting. For more information on meeting times or agenda items, please contact the planning board office at (781) 383-3517.

Cook Estate

This is one of those weeks when circumstances could change by the time you read this.

But as of yesterday morning when we went to press, the future of the Cook Estate was still very much in limbo and plans for property could still come before voters at Monday's Special Town Meeting.

Selectmen had scheduled a meeting at 7 p.m. yesterday (Thursday) to discuss options for the 19-acre site.

After nearly 2-1/2 years (and countless barrels of newsprint, we might add), it seems a shame that all the hard work and good intentions that went into planning for senior housing for the Cook Estate might all be for naught.

But time appears to have run out for the town to embark on a deal with a private developer who would have no guarantee that he could obtain the necessary permits in time for the Jan. 15 deadline to close on the property.

So where do we go from here?

Northland Residential – the third bidder on the project – is being asked if it is still interested. It's unlikely, in our view, that Northland would be willing to take the financial risk of closing without permits in hand after both Deer Hill Partners and Cohasset Associates withdrew their proposals for that very reason.

The town could bow out altogether and lose the upwards of $500,000 it has spent so far.

The town could also buy the site, with voter approval, and start the RFP process all over again.

What hasn't been discussed much — perhaps because hopes to provide affordable and market-rate senior housing were still viable — is buying the estate and keeping it as open space.

The Cook Estate is one our favorite Cohasset vistas and it is located at one of the "gateways" to our lovely town. As one climbs the Sohier Street hill from Rte. 3A and looks to the right – the Cook Estate provides open acres of lovely rolling terrain.

Cohasset's public Atlantic vistas continue to get absorbed by ever bigger houses and more inland property is eaten up for housing developments. We think the Cook Estate, as open space, could provide a wonderful respite from all that. Maybe the existing home on the property and some surrounding acreage could be sold to help offset the cost. Wouldn't that be preferable to a large, single-family home subdivision there? We're not against single-family homes, most of us live in them – but when open space can be preserved, it's worth pursuing.

We're not sure what the future of the Cook Estate holds. We don't think it's anyone's fault that we find ourselves at this juncture. Tons of hard work and negotiations went into trying to make plans for senior housing there work, perhaps that dream can still be saved.

Supports protection of Peppermint Brook

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing in strong support of Article 14 on the Warrant for the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting. I urge all residents at Town Meeting to vote a strong "YES" for this Article which is long overdue, which is the personification of Common Sense and which has no cost for the Town and Selectmen to implement! Article 14 calls for a perpetual conservation restriction to be placed on the several acres of land that the Town has owned for quite a few years now and which is a key wetlands for the protection of Peppermint Brook that flows into Lily Pond and which is a primary water source for our Town Water Supply.

This plot of land, which is partially wetlands, has severe topography and which has no access to Sohier Street, has been considered for a spectrum of possible Town uses over the years but, given its nature, has never been selected. Not a surprise if you are familiar with its drawbacks. The most recent use considered was to toss it in with the Cook Estate land — not for any development but simply to add a few acres to the much larger Cook land to meet land space ratio requirements for the now obsolete plan to build 95 housing units on the Cook property. Given that-other barriers, primarily wastewater disposal, have ruled out a development of that size, this Town owned, small parcel of land is no longer included in any of the several, downsized housing proposals for the Cook Estate property development.

Further, this parcel, with no possible access now or in the future to Town Sewer, and with its key Town water supply protection role and excessive costs to try to develop it for a multi-unit apartment rental complex, cries out for the only viable, indeed essential, disposition — that of doing what should have been done years ago –committing it to formal, protected conservation status! Voting "YES" on Article 14 will yield that result as we now have a Board of Selectmen that listen to the voters/taxpayers and who are environmentally knowledgeable, sensitive and firmly committed to putting the best interests of the Town far above the monetary interests of developers and the interests of non-residents/non-taxpayers who may wish to move to Cohasset and rent apartments paid for in part by existing residents/taxpayers.

Please join with all of your neighbors, the Water Commission, the Water Resource Protection Committee, the Cohasset Conservation Commission and the majority of the Board of Selectmen who support your "YES" vote on Article 14.

Take another look at the Cook Estate

COMMENTARY

TERENCE A. MCCARTHY

There is no evidence that the Town of Cohasset ought to be developing the Cook Estate. Make no mistake; the town clearly is the co-developer of the elderly housing planned for that tract of land. My question is why?

A few years ago I attended several meetings of the Senior Housing Committee discussing senior housing to be built on town land behind the Stop & Shop. At the time the chairman was illustrating the need for elderly housing with two situations: [1] an elderly person owning a large house valued at $800,000 faced with downsizing and a desire to continue living in Cohasset; [2] an elderly person living in Pennsylvania whose spouse died and wanted to move closer to her kids in Cohasset. These were given as examples of why Cohasset needed to build elderly housing. I felt then that this was not a motivation for me to support town-sponsored housing, as it appeared to be a subsidy beyond what I felt the town should be doing for its citizens.

Then the basic argument shifted to a more sensible claim that there were enough Cohasset seniors requiring modest housing to justify development of town housing. The Senior Housing Committee relied upon the McCormick Institute research to base its claims. I tried to obtain a copy of the full research study to help determine specifically how large that population was, how that population was constituted, what questions they were asked and what the base data was in effect to see how much people might be willing to spend on rentals or purchase of housing. My first request was to Town Manager Mark Haddad. His office said they could not find the document. Next were the folks involved in elderly affairs that produced a four-page executive summary? It seemed that nobody advocating the housing project had anything more than the summary of this research. The summary provided no evidence of a housing need.

So what then is the benefit to the town of developing the Cook Estate with public monies if the private sector could do it at no cost to the town?

HEALTH NOTES

Meeting on Medicare D plan is Tuesday

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

At the risk of overkill this is another reminder about the forthcoming meeting on Tuesday, Dec. 6 at 1:30 p.m. at Saint Anthony's parish hall, which will explain the new prescription drug plan (Medicare Part D). As discussed earlier, about 1,600 individuals in town above the age of 59 are expected to be affected to a greater or less extent.

The new system is set up so that, if you already have health insurance covering prescription drugs, your plan administrators must have already contacted you to tell you whether your plan is better or not as good as the new Medicare D(MedD) plan. If you don't remember such a notification, it's a good idea to get in touch with your plan and ask. Once notified, you only have to do something if you have no prescription benefits or your plan is not as good as MedD or if you're not now satisfied with your present drug benefits and want to potentially pay less for drugs.

If you feel you want to change, get in touch with someone who knows about the available plans and will help you. In Cohasset, Carol Barrett at Cohasset Elder Affairs is an excellent source of information and can help. Further, Murray Campbell has an article in today's Mariner which has the best roadmap as to how to proceed if you wish to go it alone.

If you feel you want to change, get in touch with someone who knows about the available plans and will help you.

Avoiding cancer risk

Many often worry about the threat of cancer. However based on world statistics, things here may not be so bad. According to a recent article in Reuters, if people avoided major risk factors for cancer, more than a third of the 7 million annual deaths worldwide, from the disease could be prevented.

In a report in The Lancet, a British medical journal, researchers estimated how many deaths from 12 types of cancer were caused by exposure to nine risk factors. They calculated that smoking, alcohol, obesity, poor diet, unsafe sex, lack of exercise and other factors contributed to 2.43 million cancer deaths worldwide in 2001.

"A third of cancer deaths could have been avoided had those risks been reduced," said Dr Majid Ezzati of the Harvard School of Public Health in the United States. "Prevention is probably still our best bet for reducing cancer deaths. It is by far larger than what we may be able to achieve using medical technology."

Smoking, which is linked to lung, mouth, stomach, pancreatic and bladder cancers, is the biggest avoidable risk factor, followed by alcohol and not eating enough fruits and vegetables.

"Of the 2.43 million deaths, 37 percent of them are from lung cancer," said Ezzati. "The total lung cancer deaths in the world are 1.23 million and of those 900,000 of them are caused by these risk factors." Smoking has increased in developing countries in the past few decades so the number of avoidable deaths could grow, he added.

Obesity also plays a role in colorectal and breast cancer in high income countries, according to the research.

Infection with the human papillomavirus (HPV) through unsafe sex is a contributing cause of cervical cancer in women in sub-Saharan Africa and parts of Asia, mainly because of a lack of screening and clinical services.

Urban air pollution is a risk factor for cancer in eastern and southern Asia, while indoor smoke from burning coal is a particular problem in China. Ezzati said hepatitis infection, which is linked to liver cancer, is sometimes spread by the use of contaminated syringes in health centers in poor countries.

The good news is that considerable evidence exists that the incidence of many forms of cancer is being reduced in the United States, and the overall death rate is lower than in many other developed countries.

Help with making 'Med D' less complicated

COMMENTARY

R. MURRAY CAMPBELL

Cheer up, seniors, dealing with the new prescription drug plan (Medicare Part D) is not complicated if you go about it right. Don't start by getting buried in the literature sent out by the 39 plans available in Massachusetts. All have contracted with Medicare and are approved by Medicare and operate essentially the same way, as explained later. Only "the numbers" are different. Fortunately, Medicare has a computer program that calculates the cost to you for any specific list of drugs and the dosage of each All you have to do is have somebody with a computer enter "Find a Medicare Prescription Drug Plan" or www.medicare.gov and then follow the steps indicated to enter the list of your drugs and dosage, and to choose one, two or three pharmacies from the list suggested for your zip code. All of the numbers and parameters of the many plans are already stored in the computer memory, so you don't need to know them for the computer to estimate the cost to you of each plan for your list of drugs, and to print them out for you in order of ascending cost. The cost estimate for each plan may be understated, but it is close enough to determine the order of ascending cost.

You can enroll in the selected plan at the same web site, or you can then look in the Medicare booklet recently mailed all seniors having Medicare part A and B for the phone number of the lowest cost plan (or the lowest three if you wish). Phone the plan (or the three plans) and confirm that the plan (or three plans) of interest cover all drugs on your list and your preferred pharmacy or pharmacies, and ask that their literature be mailed to you. (The wait on the telephone is the only hard part of all this).

It is important to enroll in some plan before May 15, 2006, rather than to dither and delay. Each month you delay the premiums increase 1 percent, or 12 percent in a year.

The enrollment form in the plan literature is what you really want, which you should fill out and mail. The relax and go on to other things; the chosen plan will send you all you need to get your drugs and the applicable part D assistance in paying for them. The literature will inform you of the amount of your co-payment for each of the three categories (or tiers), for the one plan you selected (presumably the lowest cost plan as indicated by the computer). If your drug list changes over time, another choice might then be better, as indicated by another computer run using your modified list. You can change plans in the next annual enrolment period..

It is important to enroll in some plan before May 15, 2006, rather than to dither and delay. Each month you delay the premiums increase 1 percent, or 12 percent in a year. That percentage increase in premiums will be with you for the rest of your life, after you belatedly enroll. Enrolling before May 15 starts your "financial assistance" sooner, but no need to rush , just in case there are some beneficial clarifications coming out.

Now to the common features of all plans, as mandated by Medicare acting in response to recent legislation. All have a monthly premium; only the amount varies. Many have deductibles, which is the total cost you have paid each year for prescription drugs before the plan begins paying part of the cost. Your cost is the "co-pay, which varies from plan to plan and depends on which tier each drug is on. (Generic drugs are tier 1, with the lowest co-payments. "Preferred" brand name drugs are tier 2 and more expensive and with a higher co-payment. Tier 3 are brands not on the preferred list, still more expensive and with a still higher "co-pay"). All plans terminate this assistance when the total cost of drugs in the year reaches $2,250. In all plans, you then bear the full cost of drugs each year until your cost reaches $3,600 (equivalent to $4,000 to $6,000 in drug costs, depending on your particular mix of drugs). This period is commonly called "the donut hole"). If your annual cost not including premiums exceeds $3,600, all plans pick up almost all of the remaining cost, varying slightly with the plan, but usually about 95percent.

As stated earlier, you don't need to know any of these numbers to determine the plan with the least cost to you. The computer will do the work, so no need to worry (except about the payments you still will have even with the help of Medicare part D).

Teachers salaries don't tell the whole story

COMMENTARY

LEE JENKINS

There is an unfounded theory that teachers salaries determine our school system quality and our home values. It is the same misguided old story that more money alone can improve quality and solve problems. Look at what is happening in the competitive labor market today, it is time off and benefits not more money that attracts employees. In the case of the teachers they work 182 days/year and additionally receive 15 sick days, 3 personal days, 2 religious days and 5 bereavement days. Compare this to professionals outside academia who are on the job for 240 days/year earning similar salaries. It would indeed be difficult to give our teachers more time away from students and have any quality education accomplished.

To those who believe the fallacy that we are way out of whack in what pay our teachers, I would suggest that everyone reread the Sept. 30 Mariner page 4, esp. the sections regarding the misinformation that was purported by the CTA about the inequality of the 'average ' Cohasset teacher salary compared to Hingham, Hanover, Scituate, Norwell and Duxbury. School Chairman Jamie Williams answered some of the misleading statements.

• Why "average" salaries are misleading — What readers have to understand is that using "average salaries" in their claim is an extremely easy way to lie with statistics because these numbers will vary greatly from town to town. Average figures are dependent on the current step and grade level of the employees which are indicative basically of the age of the staff and the years in service. Towns with older staffs have a higher "average" salary and towns like Cohasset who have already replaced most of their older employees will naturally show a lower "average" salary.

A more logical way to look at salaries is to view the top salary offered. This can also be flawed however since towns have different numbers of steps, columns and requirements in their contracts. For example: in Scituate and Hingham a teacher cannot achieve the top salary without having a PhD. This is not true for Cohasset or Norwell so in the following '05 comparisons I have eliminated the PhD salaries to reduce the skew.

Norwell - $75,495; Cohasset - $73,323; Hingham - $73,086; Scituate - $71,224.

These figures alone indicate that Cohasset is very competitive

• A teacher's pay is more than just the salary schedule — There are other monetary considerations to take into account such as longevity and benefits where it's already proven Cohasset is very competitive. Comparing Cohasset and Hingham in longevity payments, Cohasset teachers receive an additional $1,000/year for every year stating on the 15th year of service. In Hingham, the teachers receive $500/year between 15 – 19 years, then $600/year between 20 - 24, then $700/year from 25 – 30. Within the five years between 15 and 19 years of service the Cohasset teacher is making $2,500*more* than the Hingham teacher. This translates in salary at the 15th year for the Cohasset top teacher to $74,323 compared to the Hingham teacher's $73,586.

It is worth noting here that Cohasset pays more toward insurance than Hingham, which also impacts the bottom line total salary package.

There will be some who will consider the above more "meaningless and irrelevant statistics and numbers" but how can we make any determinations when the teachers only present us with erroneous average salaries to cry for more money. Some in the community prefer to ignore the concessions given to the teachers over the last 14 years and just look to the current contract salary figure. Has anyone compared the contracts and perks with the other towns always mentioned. When you do, you discover that one town may be higher in contract salary but between perks and extra duty pay it levels out. So it is very disingenuous to look at only one 'average' figure.

• Extra duty pay — Through the years teachers have lobbied to receive more and more money for additional time spent with our children outside the classroom. These payments have expanded beyond coaching to include extra duty pay for: Athletic Director ($10,483); Cheerleading ($1747); M.S. Athletic Coordinator ($1647); M.S. Student Council ($ 1647); H.S. School Student Council ($1747); M.S. Yearbook ($1647); H.S. Yearbook ($2397); Debating ($1952); Dramatics ($4969); School Newspaper ($2221); Math League ($2221); Senior Class Play ($1952); M.S. Team Leaders ($2612); Senior Class Advisors ($1600); Whispers and Shadows ($534); and Camp Bournedale ($235).

It is important to note that towns differ in extra-duty rates and those activities for which teachers receive compensation.

With "the other side of the fence" syndrome, the teachers have found that there may be other services they are performing that they feel should be compensated. It is getting to the point as one teacher told me a few years ago "they are not paying me to read the instruction manual." In other words instead of acting like true professionals in other industries, it appears, teachers want to be compensated like hourly employees for each and every minute they spend with the children. From the article in last week's Mariner, it sounded as though teachers now want to be paid to write college recommendations. Plus they have implied teachers should be paid by taxpayers to do work for a private business — do they think we are clueless regarding their extracurricular careers.

In addition to everything else, teachers require paid "free time" during the day. Elementary teachers are pressing for more free time in addition to the lunch, recess and 45 minutes/day planning time. Also during the "free time" teachers already have they can contractually earn extra money ($25 - $35/class) by acting as substitutes.

No one begrudges teachers respect or a decent wage but they do cross a line in their attempts to influence opinions when they use the students as pawns, especially in the student newspaper. We all wonder what is wrong with the media today and by reading the recent edition of The Spinnaker we can see where budding journalists learn not to do investigative reporting and just regurgitate a party line.

My objective has always been to expand opportunities and turn Cohasset into the leading school in the state. How long have I asked about having the high school join in the Robotics Competition, Model UN, or, film, investment, more Latin courses, etc., etc. Through my years of following Cohasset education I have actually seen a decline in the curriculum and a hiring of some middling individuals while turning away true stars. Good programs, eager students and competitive salaries and work conditions, which we already have, attract great teachers.

Norwell always comes up in any salary debate but you never hear about their curriculum. FYI for several years they have had a high school Robotics Team plus they started one on the elementary level. Where has Cohasset been?

Christmas shopping

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The first shopping day of the 2005 Christmas season at the Wal-Mart in Quincy was enlivened by a fist fight between shoppers, which is tame compared to the Wal-Mart in South Philly where they had a full-fledged riot on their hands when the Big Box ran out of tantalizingly priced $378 laptop computers.

Boy, is that a great start to the Christmas season or what?

Bargain hunters started lining up Monday at 4 p.m. outside the Best Buy in Braintree and waited overnight in the rain and cold for the 7 a.m. Tuesday store opening so they could plunk down $399.99 for the new Microsoft Xbox 360 game console which promises to be the hot seller of Christmas 2005.

Bargain hunters started lining up Monday at 4 p.m. outside the Best Buy in Braintree and waited overnight in the rain and cold for the 7 a.m. Tuesday store opening to plunk down $399.99 for the new Microsoft Xbox 360 game console.

To paraphrase Ed McMahon: How hot is it? Well, hot enough so that those who are shut out in their first attempt and can't wait for another shipment to buy it at retail are spending between $1,000 and $5,000 for it on eBay. Or so I'm told.

The lucky teenager who finds one in his or her stocking Christmas morning may soon be playing "Call of Duty 2," which the reviewer for the Boston Herald calls a "can't miss game."

"The goal is to survive the bloodbaths of World War II by ducking through the ditches, shooting Nazis and blowing stuff up. War games this awesome bring history to virtual life in the most brutal way, killing and dying over and over," he wrote.

At the same time, the Rev. Jerry Falwell and Mayor Tommy Menino appeared to be going to the mattress over whether that Nova Scotian fir on the Common should be called a "holiday tree" or a "Christmas tree" while the logger who chopped it down in Novy was threatening to put it through the chipper.

I don't mean to be blasphemous but if I were Jesus Christ I'd opt for "holiday tree" just to keep my name out of it.

Check me if I'm wrong but didn't there used to be a reason other than the introduction of the latest electronic gadget for celebrating what used to be called Christmas and probably still is in sections of the country where civil liberties still include a spot for a crèche on the town common.

The headline of the year from USA Today as the shopping season opened told us "It's beginning to look a lot like Tech-mas." Tech-mas in the old days was a set of model trains, the wind-up kind, if you didn't have electricity.

In days of yore, when Christmas celebrated Christ's birthday, not Bill Gates' birthday, the big events of the holiday season were recorded in the news pages or the entertainment pages, if there happened to be a performance of Dickens "Christmas Carol" at the local high school.

Now one turns to the business pages to root for the projection of the National Retail Federation that Christmas spending this year will go up 6 per cent to $439.5 billion and that each of us will spend a little over $700.

Local pantries fighting the war against hunger

Editor's note: This is one in a series of articles focusing in the various food pantries which serve South Shore communities. This year's CNC/South Gifts of Hope campaign will highlight the work and needs of area food pantries.

By Seth Jacobson
CORRESPONDENT

It could happen to you.

People are going hungry in larger numbers every year, but because of the efforts of food pantries on the South Shore, fewer people will be hungry for the holidays.

Marshfield Food Pantry Executive Director Roni Lahage said 10 percent of Massachusetts residents are living under the poverty level and noted "people are ignoring those statistics."

"The economy right now is very tough on people," Lahage said. "To me, it's mind boggling how people can survive."

She added the number of families who visit the pantry increased dramatically in October from 125 to 152.

"This is a very real problem," Lahage said. "People can't really believe this is happening in a town like Marshfield, which is considered a fairly affluent community."

Lahage said the Marshfield Food Pantry was founded 20 years ago with the purpose of alleviating hunger for town residents.

"We just turned 20 years old," Lahage said of the pantry. "That's not something we're celebrating though, because this place was founded to end hunger. We're very happy to be able to feed people but it's a shame that this continues to be a problem.

"I think what people need to do is to start taking responsibility for their neighbors. If they did, I think hunger would be much less of a problem."

Lahage said she believes the problem of hunger could be better controlled if people were more aware of the issue.

"I think it's about education," Lahage said. "The thing is, anyone can find themselves in a situation where they are hungry. All it takes is losing a job or having to pay for health problems. The other problem is that nobody wants anyone to know that they're struggling, so a lot of people who need food aren't coming forward."

She added many of the people who are going hungry are senior citizens, mainly because they are on fixed incomes and are often forced to pay astronomical prices for prescriptions.

"About 30 percent of the people we serve are elderly," Lahage said.

She added she is very proud of what the Marshfield Food Pantry has accomplished over the years.

"We feel we have an awesome food pantry," Lahage said. "We have 50 volunteers who are consistently available and over the years, we have established a consistent fundraising approach."

Lahage said the pantry is funded in three ways. First, the Greater Boston Food Bank supplies it with about 40 percent of its stock. She added the pantry also gets money for food through the Massachusetts Emergency Food Allocation Program (MEFAP).

The third way the pantry gets food is through the donations from the public.

Through those venues, the pantry is able to keep nutritious food in stock, like hamburgers, hot dogs, chicken, fish, vegetables and canned goods.

Lahage said the number of hungry people each year seems to get higher and noted people are always hungry during the holidays. This year on Thanksgiving, the pantry distributed 185 frozen turkeys, along with all the trimmings.

"The bottom line is that the economy is a mess," Lahage said. "I think this country needs to prioritize. We're sending huge amounts of money out of this country when people need our help here."

Lahage said the Marshfield Food Pantry could always use items like spaghetti, spaghetti sauce, macaroni and cheese, canned foods and non-perishable items that are high in protein.

The need for food and donations is a common concern among all the food pantries assisting South Shore families.

"We've been serving roughly 30 families a month for a long time," said Barbara Itz, one of two coordinators at the Hanover Emergency Food Pantry. She explained Sally Boutin is the other coordinator with whom she works.

"Three years ago, our pantry had 363 visits the whole year," Itz said. "So far this year, we've had 560 visits. It's kind of scary."

Unlike the Marshfield Food Pantry, Itz said the Hanover Emergency Food Pantry depends solely on the generosity of Hanover residents.

"They always seem to come through for us," she said, adding a local foundation also helps in providing inventory. Itz said she preferred not to identify that foundation.

When it comes to awareness to the issue of hunger, Itz said, "I think it's taken more seriously in large cities than in small towns." Like Lahage, Itz stressed that going hungry is something that can happen to anyone.

"There are always people who are downsized who have to pay the high costs of utilities and mortgages. It can happen to anyone. Look at what happened to all those Katrina victims in New Orleans."

Founded in 1991, Itz said the pantry has always enjoyed a great deal of support. She added the residents of the town are the ones who are eligible to use the facility.

"Everyone who comes in here gets enough food to last about a week," she said. "And we're unique because we're comprised of five churches and a women's club. Each entity provides a group of volunteers."

When asked whether the hunger problem has gotten worse over the years, Itz said, "I think it's shifted. Some years are worse than others."

Itz agreed with Lahage in that senior citizens are one of the main groups affected by the high costs of living in Massachusetts and in turn are forced to visit the food pantry.

Itz said one of the most important messages she wants to convey is that people will be hungry past the holiday season.

"Food pantries get a lot of attention during this time of the year," she said. "It's tough getting a lot of donations outside of the holidays. This is a problem we need to keep in people's minds all year long."

Itz said people can visit the pantry on an anonymous basis and encouraged hungry people to come forward.

"Many of these people are embarrassed about their situation," she said. "Itf' not a crime be hungry, it's a crime to stay hungry. That's what people have to realize."

Tereza Prime is the food procurer for the Hingham Interfaith Food Pantry. She said she is not sure how big the hunger problem is actually getting on the South Shore but noted, "If one person is hungry, it's a problem."

Prime says her pantry serves 60 families from Hingham, one of the most prosperous towns on the South Shore.

"Some people can't believe there's actually a food pantry in Hingham but this is a problem that does not discriminate."

Prime said the pantry in Hingham, like the one in Hanover, depends on people and groups in the town to supply food. She explained schools, churches, Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts all do their part to help the pantry.

She added her pantry also uses the Greater Boston Food Bank.

"Hingham is a very generous town," she said. "And the kids in this town are amazing. So many of them find ways of collecting food for us. Many of the kids tell their parents about us and those parents end up helping us."

Prime said the pantry has about 35 volunteers who are always eager to lend a helping hand.

She added while many people who use the pantry are younger, there are a great deal of senior citizens who visit frequently.

"People are free to visit us whenever they want," Prime said. "We feel if you can keep people happy and healthy, we'll be helping the town."

Regarding the issue of awareness, Prime said, "That's the most important thing. After that, I think everything takes care of itself."

Like Itz and Lahage, Prime feels one of the biggest hurdles is getting people to stop feeling embarrassed about coming forward.

"I think 70 percent of people who are hungry feel that way," she said. "We try to tell them that everybody goes through hard times. Once people come in and see what's going on here, they realize there's nothing to be ashamed of. It's good for people to come in and see that there are lots of other people in the same boat."

When all is said and done, Prime loves what she does at the food pantry.

"It's a really nice thing to belong to," she said. "It's a great cause."

Weymouth Food Pantry Director Pat Adams said her facility serves 350-450 families per month and agreed the holidays are the busiest time of year. Since 1987, when the pantry was founded, things have not slowed down.

"Hunger is definitely a problem at the local level," Adams said. "Every town in the state has some sort of resource for people. That pretty much says it all."

Adams feels there is a good level of awareness in town regarding the issue of hunger but says she is not sure how far that level of awareness extends.

"For me, it consumes my life," she said. "I'm sure many people are aware of the problem but I'm also sure there's a lot of people who are not."

Adams said the Weymouth Food Pantry has more than 100 dedicated volunteers who work hard to alleviate the hunger problem. She added most of the pantry's stock is allocated through fundraising drives and grants.

"We can't function unless the community supports us, and the community does a great job. Luckily, we're able to meet the needs of everyone who walks through our door."

Adams said about 10 percent of the pantry clientele are senior citizens.

"They represent a big part of who we serve," she said. "But this can happen to anyone. We try to tell people that being hungry is only temporary. Once people leave here, they feel better."

Carol Ferguson, Carol Demers and Harriet Reed are volunteers who run the Pembroke Food Pantry, which was founded in the mid 1980s. The pantry serves 126 families.

"But we're expecting more because of the high cost of living," Ferguson said.

She added the pantry caters to a large elderly bracket but noted, "We have all kinds of people who walk through the door."

Ferguson said the pantry relies solely on the generosity of the town' groups and residents.

"We do very well," she said. "This is a very giving town."

Regarding what people can do to help people from going hungry, she said money and food is always appreciated but added there's a little more to it than that.

"People can really help by passing the word about food pantries," she said. "We're here and we want to help. This is a problem that needs to be remedied."

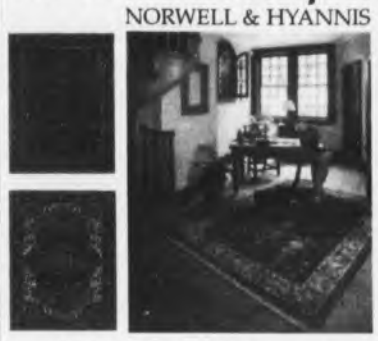
major real estate developments in Greater Boston. In every instance, with millions of dollars at risk, those development teams right up front assessed through market research what kind of project would succeed and how it should be structured. Before spending money on architects, engineering firms and speculative notions on site plans they wanted to know who their market was and how best to reach it. Unfortunately, Cohasset' s Senior Housing Committee did not have this priority and until recently there was no real market research on who in Cohasset would benefit from this housing effort. In fact at one of the SHC meetings I attended there was discussion on an architectural/engineering drawing of a two building, multi unit housing plan for the 8-acre site adjoining Peppermint Brook. This work was funded by the town.

And then Mrs. Cook died. Cohasset went from modest expectations to rather grander notions and decided to seize the opportunity to upgrade the senior housing effort. And, of course, at increased cost and risk to the Town.



Even today the Cook Estate Senior Housing effort lacks the following: Who specifically are we trying to benefit, how many are they, and can they afford/are they willing to pay for what is eventually built? As I understand it the developer of Cedarmere has observed something to the effect that most seniors in Cohasset would not be eligible for affordable senior housing based on research into the town's demographics. If I read the news reports correctly, they contend that most of Cohasset's seniors are wealthy enough to fail any means test for affordable housing. In other words, if the SHC was correct about a person selling an $800,000 home and then attempting to purchase or rent an affordable unit in Cohasset, he or she would be rejected or asked to give away their personal assets in order to access affordable housing. Of course, that person could always purchase a market rate unit in the senior housing if available. So what then is the benefit to the town of developing the Cook Estate with public monies if the private sector could do it at no cost to the town?

Sure, I think the concept of senior housing is great and probably needed. But I see no evidence that Cohasset ought to be doing what it is doing, or spending what it is spending. I do not think the proponents of this project are trying to bilk the town. In fact, I believe they are acting honorably and with compassion. But I also think the project's goals have never been made specific enough to justify the effort or cost. In fact, two arguments I've heard again and again in my business career and at town meeting: (1) we worked hard on this project for years (hence it should be approved); and (2) we've spent so much money on this we can't stop now (hence it should be approved.) If the project is flawed or just wrong-headed it doesn't matter how hard people worked and perhaps it doesn't matter how much money has already been spent if we have a chance to pull our chestnuts out of the fire. And, at the same time we've been working hard on the Cook project, the number of other senior housing projects in Cohasset has increased dramatically thus changing the total environment for senior housing.

At Special Town Meeting let's look real hard at the Cook Project and see if it deserves to be continued. Maybe the better course is to rely on the private sector and the protections in place to assure affordable and market rate housing for us elderly. It might save the town lots of money and perhaps the litigation that seems to have bedeviled Cohasset in recent years.

Murley kick, stout defense give Rolfe, CHS seniors a win in their final game

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

First for the bad news: Cohasset head coach Tony Rolfe could not have asked for worse Thanksgiving Day weather conditions on the Hull playing field.

The 25 mph northwesterly winds screamed across Hingham Bay, driving the rain through the thoroughly soaked player uniforms and fan sweatshirts. The temperature hovered around 30 degrees.

Now for the good news. With only 16 seconds remaining in the game, Cohasset senior kicker Rob Murley booted a stunning 25-yard field goal to give Cohasset an exciting 3-0 victory. Remind you of the Adam Vinitieri performance in the Patriots' recent Super Bowl win?

This Turkey Day kick provided the gravy to the end Rolfe's highly successful eight-year Cohasset coaching career. What a way to go out!

"There's really nothing more I could've wanted," Rolfe said. "It just completed the experience for me. Thanks to everyone!"

The weather influenced so many aspects of the game. The combination of cold weather and a wet football led to many fumbles for both teams. Several players experienced injuries to the knees and shoulders.

Few athletes could get traction on the field, and you could forget about a passing game. Hull's first possession set a tone for the defensive dominance. The Pirates were forced to punt only 2:50 into the game. The Skipper offense proved no better.

A stroke of bad luck fell upon Cohasset as starting quarterback Anthony DiPaolo jarred his shoulder from a late hit from a Pirate defenseman. One minute later, the Pirates recovered a Skipper fumble.

Once again, defense dominated. Cohasset contained Hull to only seven yards on the field before the Pirates had to punt from their own 30-yard line with 1:00 to go in the quarter.

The Pirates discovered a small

Buick MVP of Eastern All-Star Game

Cohasset's Aidan Buick was named the South MVP of the Division 3 Eastern Mass All-Star game, played at Canton High School on Nov. 25 between the North and South squads.

The North team players, coached by Rob Bilsbury of Manchester-Essex High School, came from such schools as Austin Prep, Medford, Matignon and Cambridge Rindge & Latin to name a few. The South squad, coached by Bill Altieri from Harwich High School, had players ranging from Martha's Vineyard to Ashland, Bridgewater-Raynham to Harwich and Dover-Sherborn to Westport.

Representing the South Shore League were Norwell sweeper Scott Kitchen, goalie Jake Trudeau of Carver, and Buick, a senior forward and leading scorer for the CHS boys soccer team.

In an exciting end-to-end encounter with Kitchen marshalling the defense and Trudeau pulling off several acrobatic saves, the South squad jumped out to a two goal lead. If it had not been for North goalie Michael Cugno of Medford, however, the game would have been over by halftime.

The North team gradually gained momentum, scoring two goals after the half. They appeared to have gained control of the game, but at the 60-minute mark, Aidan Buick picked up a through ball 30 yards out, maneuvered past two defenders to gain the 18 before drilling a left footed shot into the bottom left corner.

The lead for the South increased to 4-2 two minutes later on a goal by Ben Berube (Somerset). Buick completed the scoring four minutes later with a powerful right-footed shot to the bottom right corner resulting in the announcer's comment, "He's left, he's right, Buick doing it for the South."

At the game's conclusion, Cugno of Medford was named the North's MVP with the South MVP going to Buick. Both players will receive their awards at the Eastern Mass awards dinner in February.

treasure when they fell upon another Cohasset fumble with 30 seconds left in the first quarter. Skipper fans bit their nails for a few seconds as Hull's Ricky Stoltz caught a burst of wind and rushed for 20 yards to end the first quarter.

The second quarter began just as the first ended: with fans on the edges of their rain-saturated seats. Stoltz made a couple more short runs, only to be taken out on a fourth down jarring tackle by Cohasset linebacker Kyle Pinkus.

With DiPaolo back in the game at QB, the Skippers were psyched to begin a solid drive. DiPaolo and Cohasset's senior running back Shane Dorian worked together to push the ball into Pirate territory. In a string of short runs, Dorian bulldozed his way to three first downs. With a Teddy Bruschi-like defense Hull stopped the Skippers dead in their tracks on the Hull 20.

After another set of Cohasset and Hull possessions the clock hit halftime. Fans poured out of the stands and towards the concession stand. Hot chocolate and coffee cups passed over the counter tops faster than X-Boxes at a department store.

"I didn't say much at halftime," said Rolfe. "I don't even need to say anything before the game. These kids don't need a pep talk to get them ready for the game. They get themselves pumped up."

The Skippers kicked off again to start the second half. The skies cleared and more fans poured onto the sidelines.

a few short Stoltz runs, the Skipper defense forced Hull to punt.

At the 2:40 point in the third quarter Cohasset took over at mid field. Brian Hill subbed for an injured DiPaolo at the QB spot. After two short rushes by the consistent Dorian, the Skippers faced their biggest challenge yet.

"I also got hit, so I was watching with my face in the dirt. I'm just glad we could walk away with the win."

Rob Murley, on his game-winning field goal

Cohasset fans covered their eyes as Dorian hobbled off the field with a twisted knee. With the offensive line in shambles, the Skippers punted with 5:35 left in the third quarter.

For now though, everything looked OK. Tackles by Pinkus, Jeff Brown, and Dave McKenna forced the Pirates to punt for their fourth time of the game. Rolfe called a timeout with 3:33 remaining in the quarter to design a makeshift offensive line. After a quick turnover off a Hill fumble, however, the Skippers offensive line shuffled off the field shaking their heads in team frustration.

Cohasset's Dan McCarthy and McKenna managed to stop Hull's last third quarter drive. Yet things looked gloomy for the Skippers. The Pirates punted to end the third quarter with the infamous Skipper offensive line jogging on to the field with a scarred confidence.

With only 10 minutes left in the fourth quarter, Cohasset knew they had to get going offensively. What was Rolfe's strategy? Move Brian Hill from backup quarterback to backup running back.

It worked. Hill broke a number of tackles on his way to a brilliant 22-yard run for a first down. In subsequent downs the Hull defense once again stopped the Skippers.

For Hull's next drive, it seemed like a mirror image of prior attempts. A few short runs by Stoltz, only to be hit by senior captain Nick Arment and Zack Etkind. Once again the Pirates punted.

A few more Hill rushes progressed the Skippers to the Pirates 38-yard line, only to punt yet again. With three minutes left in the game, it appeared this battle would end in a scoreless draw.

"Our defense was really strong," said senior captain Nick Arment. "We knew we had the tools to work with, and it finally all clicked. Both teams were playing for pride."

The Skippers were left with two minutes to get some points, any points, on the board.

Enter Hill, who dominated the offensive effort. With Hill's key run to the Pirate 7-yard line, a light could be seen at the end of the tunnel. Then came three incomplete passes in a row.

Rolfe and company faced fourth-and-goal with 22 seconds left on the clock. This situation left the game outcome in the hands of one man: Murley.

The wind blew straight into Murley's face. The pressure could almost be seen resting on his shoulders. The snap came to the 15-yard line. Murley got the kick off. With 16 seconds on the board, the ball forced its way in slow motion against the wind and through the uprights. It was good!

"I was pretty confident going into the play," said Murley. "When I kicked it though, I saw the wind carry it back and to the right a lot. I also got hit, so I was watching with my face in the dirt. I'm just glad we could walk away with the win."

With 16 seconds remaining on the clock the scoreboard read Cohasset 3, Hull 0. A Stoltz 13-yard rush surely gave many Skippers fans on the sidelines a big scare. But a few short runs later, the Pirates' final attempt was crushed by a 3-man Skipper sack. Game over!

After winning his final game, Rolfe gave credit to his players for handling the adversity of injuries, a theme that has run throughout the season for the Skippers.

"We were not prepared to have all those injuries," admits Coach Rolfe. "But the boys handled it so well."

It was a very tough loss for Hull. In all the excitement, Cohasset fans felt a loss too... the departure of Tony Rolfe. A swarm of Cohasset alumni football players rushed toward the coach to wish him congratulations and thanks. He walked off the field for the last time.

COASTAL STARS

Squirt B1

The undefeated Squirt B1 squad extended their winning streak to 11-0-0 on November 27 with a hard-fought 4-2 win over Whitman/Hanson/Kingston.

With both team's regular goalies out with injuries, there was lots of action and excitement at both ends of the ice. Regular left wing Joe Lasko did a fine job in net for the Stars, only letting two goals by. The W/H/K replacement goalie stood up well to the Stars' relentless front line.

The Stars got things started just two minutes into the first period with clean pass from Nick Mulrey to Mickey Barry, who drilled it through the 5-hole. First period play continued with a string of rapid-fire shots by Dave Cataldo and Jimmy Connors, all blocked by the eager WHK goalie.

Defensemen Chris Cohen and Patrick Graham chased down a number of potential WHK runs at the Stars' net including a beauty of a pass to a WHK winger broken up by Cohen just in time.

Another nice pass, this time from Barry from Mulrey was knocked firmly into the net, but was called back by the officials for a crease violation and no goal was posted for the Stars.

A few Stars players found themselves in the penalty box, but it was after the power play had expired that WHK scored on a rebound, tying it up 1-1. Lots of back-and-forth action kept Tristan Wiggin busy along the boards as the ungroomed center of the ice got slower and slower throughout the game. Max Montgomery and Brendan Crane dug furiously in the corners to keep the puck in the zone.

Matt Burchill skated it all the way in to take a monster shot that looked sure to go in, but once again the W/H/K goalie made the save and the first period ended 1-1.

Midway through the second period Montgomery took control of the puck and skated it out of the green end. With a classic deke left and shoot right, the puck sailed into the net, giving the Stars a one goal advantage. Minutes later, Barry was sent to the box for tripping and W/H/K took advantage of the power play to poke in a rebound tying things up 2-2.

Burchill, Connors and Cataldo kept the W/H/K netminder busy fending off numerous shots while Cohen and Graham held the blue line. With two minutes left in the period, Nate Morse flipped a clean back-hander into the upper left corner of the net to put the Stars ahead 3-2.

Early in the third period it was the well-positioned winger Aidan Beresford who scored the final goal of the game, seeing a nice piece of net around the downed W/H/K goalie. More great skating by the Stars forwards highlighted the last few minutes of the game, including breakaways by Crane and Connors but the clock ran out with the Stars winning 4-2.

Squirt C3

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-3 team met up with Cape Cod 2 for an early Sunday morning game in Raynham on Nov. 13.

Although the sun was still resting when the puck dropped at center ice, the Stars where alert and prepared. Forwards Kevin Meehan, Thomas Coyne and Nevin Connor were in synch from the start and dominated puck control for much of the period. Dynamic defense duo Adam Jackson and Liam Rose aided in keeping the play in the Cape Cod zone consistently feeding the puck to their offense.

Cape Cod's defense worked non-stop trying to get the puck unsuccessfully to the Star's zone. The Stars had numerous shots on net when finally, Meehan was successful. He placed a rebound into the left corner. Stars lead 1-0. As the minutes ticked down in the first period, center Michael McPartlin came way from the pack with the puck. He skated forcefully toward the net and put one away. Stars lead 2-0.

Cape Cod's defense began to succumb to Stars' pressure at the outset of the second period. Jackson let one rip from just inside the blue line – Stars lead 3-0. Shortly thereafter, Coyne passed the puck to wingman Joe Deyeso who playing perfect position sent it sailing into the net for the 4-0 lead. Then McPartlin came away from the drop with the puck and put away his second goal for the 5-0 advantage.

Cape Cod's team struggled to contain the Stars' domination of play. They mustered several shots on net during the second period. However, Jeremy Archibald and Brendan Queenan helped goalie Cameron Lamoureux maintain the lead. The defense was solid and once again, Lamoureux was perfect, blocking each shot with confidence and precision.

Third period play, again, was controlled by the Stars. Forwards Neil Bjorkman, John Leahy and Jacob Timcoe continued to keep the pressure on and the play in the Cape's zone. Coyne, who played a solid game, took the puck in on his own and scored goal number six for the Stars. McPartlin made it a hat trick sending goal number seven in up high as the minutes ticked down. Timcoe netted the final goal of the game with a resilient rebound securing the Stars 8-0 lead.

It was a solid team effort. The team was impressive. Many players switched positions—defense to offence and offence to defense— all capable and competent. Six different players scored goals! In the locker room after the game, the team congratulated each other on the win and Lamoureux for another shut-out. The Stars' C-3 record stands at 7-2. Their next opponent is Seahawks 3. They look forward to the challenge.

Squirt C2

In a tough game against the Pembroke Squirts, the Coastal Stars came up two goals short, for a 3-1 loss.

The first period had a blazing goal by Tom Pilat, assisted by Cameron Mastrangelo. Wings Jake Moore, Tim Cavanaro, Dan Cronin and David Craig applied the pressure for another goal, but Pembroke answered back and the period ended even.

Several scoring attempts in the second period by Mats Nelson and Derek Benson unfortunately found their way to the Pembroke goalies glove. The Stars hard skating defense of Jake Denton, Joe Proctor, Brodie Jackisch, Sam Asnault and Jack Conlon many times kept Pembroke from breaking free. Eventually another goal found its way into goalie Hugh Healey's net.

In the third period the Stars continued their attacks on the Pembroke goal but to no avail.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Seniors are starting to hear from colleges

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

Members of Mrs. Berman's AP English class gets psyched up for their competition against the Scituate High Academic Team.

This month sure has been busy, but as it comes to an end, we welcome the festively cheery Holiday Season into our lives. Christmas and Hanukkah are just around the corner and if you haven't begun your Holiday shopping already, then it may be too late. I hope everyone enjoyed their Thanksgiving and the long weekend that accompanied it because now we students are back in school for what appears to be an actual full week.

Congratulations to seniors who have already heard back from colleges. Last week was a short one, and this week has been slow to start; the combination of those factors yields hardly any news to speak of. However, there are some exciting events going on right now in the Cohasset Middle-High School, and here they are.

• On Tuesday, Nov. 29, there will have been a meeting of the CHS Drama Workshop in the Middle School at 4:30 p.m. This workshop will have been held to discuss the Massachusetts Drama Festival, as well as auditions for single-thespian acts.

• Also on Tuesday, there will have been a meeting of the Art Magazine in Rm. 254 to begin compilation of the next magazine, which is slated to be released the same day as the next Spinnaker release. Anyone is welcome, and the editors will be taking any original art pieces and any writing samples that you may have for the magazine.

• The High School Library will be open Mondays and Fridays after school for the entire month of December.

• There will have been a Social Awareness Organization meeting on Wednesday after school in Mr. Newkirk's room, to discuss ideas and participation for the upcoming clothing drive.

• The National Honor Society will have met on Thursday during lunch to convene about their recent activities around town and in the Middle School.

• The Middle School Student Council will begin their "Gift of Giving" campaign on Monday, Dec. 5. The students will be collecting money from donators in order to buy CVS gift cards for the less fortunate who are in need of medicine.

• Winter Sports practices began on Monday the 28th.

• The Fall Soccer Banquet will have been held on Tuesday the 19th at the Black Rock Country Club in Hingham.

• The Football Banquet will be held on Sunday, Dec. 4th at Atlantica restaurant in Cohasset

• Katherine McCarthy is filling in as a long term substitute for Mrs. Lankow, who is taking a maternity leave from the Middle School Social Studies Department.

• Mrs. Heidi Olson, who is also on maternity leave from the Foreign Language Department, gave birth to a baby boy on Nov. 21st, his name is Soren Alberto Morales.

• There will have been a Middle School/High School PSO meeting on Thursday, Dec. 1st at 9 a.m. Also on Thursday, there will have been a School Committee meeting at 7 p.m.

• All seventh-grade students are required by the state to have their Tetanus booster registered in the nurse's office. That means that any seventh-grader who does not have documentation of a Tetanus booster must get one and forward it to the nurse's office. This is mandatory for all seventh-graders.

• Final call for Flu vaccinations, Mrs. Collins only has two left, so see her at some point this week if you are interested.

• Good luck to Mrs. Berman's AP English class who will be participating in an Academic Bowl on Friday, Dec. 2nd against Scituate High School.

• Congratulations to Coach Rolfe, who was awarded the Easter Massachusetts Football Officials Association Coach of the Year Award. The esteemed football coach also coached his final game on Thanksgiving in a win over the Hull Pirates.

There you have it, another riveting report on school news. Next week's column will provide you with the who, what, where when and why, and any brouhaha as we move closer and closer to the holidays, but for now, enjoy what has been conveyed and act upon any notions that dawned on you as you were reading.

Respected English teacher bids adieu to CHS

By Molly Trisler
SPINNAKER STAFF

On Nov. 23 Mrs. Fran Cronin's 35-year career as an English teacher at CHS was celebrated by the faculty, staff and administration at a Thanksgiving breakfast hosted by Principal Joel Antolini. Mrs. Cronin was praised for her work at CHS by Dr. Gill, Assistant Principal, and Mr. Ed Leary, Chairperson of the English Department. Ms. Hoskin's jazz band marched into the library playing Pomp & Circumstance to signal her "graduation" from CHS. At the end of the day, Mrs. Cronin was surprised with a standing ovation by hundreds of applauding students and many faculty members and was lauded by Mr. Antolini, in the upstairs lobby. She was then serenaded by members of Mr. Marks' chorus, who sang the Nightingale song. Mrs. Cronin expressed her best wishes to everyone and thanked them for their thoughtfulness.

The following appeared in the CHS newspaper, The Spinnaker.

This November, one of the English Department's most respected teachers bid Cohasset good-bye and began a well-deserved retirement. Mrs. Cronin, who has taught various grade levels at CHS for 35 years, sat down for an interview recently to talk about her career and her plans for retirement.

Our first topic of discussion was how she started teaching, and whether she ever considered any other careers. We found ever since she had pretended to be a teacher to her younger sisters in a "school" she'd set up at home in her childhood, she has only aspired to be a teacher. Her favorite subject was always English, though she became more interested in history once she took courses on it in college.

When asked about her favorite book, Mrs. Cronin described how important Harper Lee's "To Kill a Mockingbird" is to her. In addition to the "beautiful language" that the novel is written in, she enjoys the book's depiction of both the problems and positive traditions of the South. Mrs. Cronin's mother is from North Carolina, and reading about the South as described in Mockingbird allows Mrs. Cronin to relive her memories of summer trips to the South.

Mr. Bouchard described Mrs. Cronin as someone who "has high expectations and raises the bar for kids… kids come out of her class with better writing and thinking skills. She was also a member of the humanities team with me for many years, and she had high expectations for me, too."

This humanities team-teaching system is something Mrs. Cronin remembers very fondly. She and Mr. Bouchard worked together; planning curricula that allowed students to see connections between subjects — not just English and history, but also art and music. Students were taught about fine and various cultures from their teachers who visited the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and other cultural centers such as area synagogues.

Additionally, they took part in humanitarian projects, such as providing Thanksgiving dinners for underprivileged families. Mrs. Cronin also recalls a closer connection between the middle and high schools, which made it easier to plan ninth-grade classes that would logically continue what students learned in grades seven and eight. If she could change anything about the school, she says, Mrs. Cronin would bring back more interdisciplinary classes and create closer connections between the middle and high schools. Nonetheless, Mrs. Cronin continued to blend history with English in her mythology unit and brought glimpses of different cultures, from the Orthodox Jewish culture of The Chosen to the Native American traditions featured in I Heard the Owl Call My Name, to her students up until retirement.

Mrs. Cronin hopes to spend her retirement traveling, reading, visiting with family, and doing more volunteer work. She plans on going to Paris for the first time with her husband before attending her niece's graduation in Amsterdam in the spring. She also wants to join or start a new book group and see her mother for longer periods of time. While these retirement plans certainly sound enjoyable, it will take Cohasset High School some time to adjust to the loss of Mrs. Cronin.

Mrs. Fran Cronin, 35-year English teacher at CHS, is retiring.

English Department Head Mr. Leary stated his thoughts on Mrs. Cronin, which are undoubtedly shared by the rest of the school: "I have tremendous respect for Mrs. Cronin… Whether they know it or not, the students who do well owe their success to the solid foundation that her course has provided them. She has been an integral part of the English program at the high school, and I will miss her greatly."

for homes with hot water or steam radiator heat.
If a home doesn't have forced air heat, installing ductwork for central air conditioning can mean major remodeling and expense. But a Unique Indoor Comfort® system doesn't require large metal ductwork, or major remodeling.
Cool air is delivered through small 2" flexible tubing that can easily be weaved through walls and ceilings, around studs and other obstacles. All that's visible are small, round outlets in every room. What's more, Unique Indoor Comfort® offers Lennox high efficiency air conditioning.
Proven in thousands of homes, easy to install Unique Indoor Comfort® is the central air conditioning solution for the older home.

Temple celebrates 25 years at current site

Events planned over the weekend

By Jeff Cutler
CORRESPONDENT

"Twenty-five years in our own building is a tremendous milestone for our Congregation."
— Rabbi Shira Joseph

Community on the South Shore," said Rabbi Joseph. "This weekend we honor and celebrate the rabbis, cantorial soloists, congregational leaders, and everyone who made this center of worship, study and community possible."

With the dedication of the pergola on Saturday evening as a highlight, congregants Barbara Carlin and Joan Carr have helped organize the entire Sha'aray Congregation weekend. Other special events shall include: the honoring of past rabbis and cantorial soloists; Rabbi Joseph's 10th anniversary recognition; and a musical review performed by congregants.

Some of the people to be honored include: Rabbis Benjamin Rudavsky, Herman Blumberg, and Stephen Karol; Cantorial Soloists Rivka Isachar-Benjamin, Sharon Brown Goldstein, and Abby Gostein.

But member Mona Pohl pointed out that the Congregation is active all year long with special events and programs geared to individuals and families of all ages.

For example, Pohl said there's a Hebrew Marathon planned for Dec. 18 from 9a.m. - 2p.m. This one-day program offers students the chance to learn the basics of Hebrew.

In addition, she said there's a Chanukah party planned for Dec. 30 and a Purim Carnival in the spring; as well as numerous efforts on behalf of charities, the elderly, local community projects and even blood drives.

"The Congregation strives to be open, inclusive and compassionate to every congregant," said Rabbi Joseph. "And to extend itself with care and respect to newcomers and strangers. It is responsive to the varied needs of its own Jewish community, the world-wide Jewish community, the State of Israel, and to its non-Jewish friends and neighbors."

In fact, Congregation Sha'aray Shalom has planned its annual interfaith Seder for March 26, 2006. The event is open to clergy and congregants of all faiths.

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom is more than 45 years old and boasts a diverse membership of over 250 households interested in all aspects of Jewish traditions, heritage and faith.

For those interested in learning more about the congregation or attending any portion of the weekend celebration, please contact Congregation Sha'aray Shalom at 781-749-8103.

OBITUARIES

Charles C. Ford

Former owner and president of The Waterproofing Co. of Boston

Charles C. Ford, 78, of Cohasset, died Nov. 21, 2005, at the Norwell Knoll Nursing Home in Norwell, after a long battle with multiple ailments.

Born in California, he moved with his family to the South Shore at an early age. Upon graduating from Tabor Academy, he enlisted in the U.S. Army and served in the occupation and rebuilding of Japan. Upon his return, he attended Cornell University in Ithaca, N. Y., and Babson College in Wellesley, to pursue a degree in civil engineering.

Mr. Ford was the former owner and president of The Waterproofing company in Boston. His practical and creative traits, sometimes called "Yankee ingenuity," allowed him to lead and develop trends in construction as Boston's Skyline expanded.

Well known and loved by the community, he was most recently involved with the Cohasset Yacht Club, Hull Lifesaving Museum, Milton Academy sailing team, the Senior Shuttle, and The Old Goats. He was known around town as the guy who could fix anything, from leaking basements to stubborn boat engines, and his advice was often sought long after his retirement.

Boats and Maine were his passion, having owned and restored five sailboats from 20 to over 40 feet, all named "Tinker." In his retirement, Mr. Ford and his wife JoAnn, hung up their sails to cruise the coast from Maine to Florida, in their Trawler, "Interlude."

He leaves his wife of 48 years, JoAnn (Anderson) Ford; a son, Charlie Ford, and his wife Stephanie, whom Mr. Ford treated like his own daughter; and a sister, Jane Barkey, of Marion. He was the father of the late Scott Ford.

A memorial service was held Saturday in St. Stephen Episcopal Church in Cohasset. Interment was private. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Donations in his memory may be made to The American Foundation for Suicide Prevention, 56 Broad St., Boston, MA 02109.

Betty P. Enders

Retired secretary at Cohasset High School

Betty P. Enders, 90, of Cohasset, died Nov. 23, at Eagle Pond Nursing Home, after a long illness.

Born in Watertown, she was raised and educated in Cohasset, and graduated from Cohasset High School. She was a graduate of the Chamberlyn School in Boston.

A Cohasset resident for 85 years, Mrs. Enders worked as a secretary at Four River Shipyard during World War II, and as a secretary at D.S. Kennedy's in Cohasset, and for Cohasset public schools, retiring from Cohasset High School as a secretary in 1977.

Mrs. Enders was a member of First congregational Church in Cohasset, the Cohasset Historical Society, and Cohasset Elder Services.

She was an avid reader and enjoyed traveling.

Wife of the late Walter Howard Enders, she leaves a daughter, Elizabeth Krasnovsky; and two grandchildren.

Interment is in Woodside Cemetery. Arrangements by Nickerson Funeral Home, Orleans.

Donations in her memory may be made to American Red Cross, P.O. Box 37243, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Ruth B. Connolly

Worked many years as a bookkeeper

Ruth B. Connolly, 87, formerly of Cohasset and Sagamore Beach, died Nov. 23, 2005, at Bay Path in Duxbury.

Born in Boston, she graduated from Dorchester High School. After many years, she attended Massasoit College in Brockton, receiving her associate's degree at the age of 65.

Mrs. Connolly was a bookkeeper for many years in the real estate field.

Before moving to Bay Path in Duxbury, she resided at Sunrise in Cohasset for three years, and previously in Sagamore for 25 years.

Wife of the late William T. Connolly Sr. she leaves four sons, William T. Connolly Jr., and his wife Barbara of Weymouth, Michael J. Connolly, and his wife Clare of Plymouth, Dennis J. Connolly, and his wife Sumi of Alliance, Ohio, and Mark S. Connolly, and his wife Nancy of Cohasset; a daughter, Mary E. Brazao, and her husband Richard of Marshfield; 11 grandchildren; 12 great-grandchildren; and a brother, John Callahan, of Los Altos, Calif.

A funeral Mass was held Monday in St. Ann By The Sea Church, Marshfield. Interment is in Mass. National Cemetery, in Bourne. Arrangements by MacDonald Funeral Home, Marshfield.

In lieu of flowers, contributions in her memory may be made to Alzheimer's, 311 Arsenal St., Watertown, MA 02472.

Blessing of the Animals at First Parish on Dec. 4

The second annual Blessing of the Animals will be held at First Parish Unitarian Universalist on Sunday, Dec. 4 at 3 p.m. in the Meeting House. Once again it's time to share the excitement with your four-legged friends, or your feathered friends, or even your friends who slither. Yes, we're talking cats and dogs, hamsters and gerbils, birds and even lizards and snakes.

In this season of Advent, how can we forget the tradition of a crèche with animals watching over it all, bearing witness to the babe in a manger? The service will feature animal-friendly music, readings, prayers, and a short homily by our minister, Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull. Everyone will be invited to come to the chancel for individual blessings of your companion animals (live, stuffed, or a photo.)

Please bring your pets into the Meeting House on a leash or in a carrier. To prevent "accidents," please make sure that your pets are house-trained and under your control at all times. This is an event open to the community. Come and share the blessing. For more information, phone First Parish at 781-383-1100.

The second annual Blessing of the Animals is Sunday at First Parish. Here some local folks and their furry friends pose for the camera after last year's event.

Santa and his merry helpers wave to the children on the docks at Cohasset harbor as they arrived by boat for the Jingle Bell Walk. The Walk is hosted by the South Shore Community Center, and invites kids of all ages to enjoy a stroll from the harbor down to the Community Center, followed by a sing-a-long, open bowling, and face painting.

Lost Marshfield man found in Cohasset

By Ryan Bray
RBRAY@CNC.COM

"He had a lot of problems with work and family and opted to disappear for a while. He didn't realize how many people were out looking for him."
— Marshfield Police Lt. Det. Robert Wright

He was missing for more than a month, and questions about where Mark Stevenson went and why, still linger.

The 44-year-old Marshfield man had been missing since Oct. 21 but he turned up in Cohasset sometime after midnight the day before Thanksgiving, and called his brother from a pay phone at the Mobil Mart on Route 3A. Stevenson, who works as a mental health counselor at Bournewood Hospital in Brookline, was taken to the Cohasset Police Station and then to South Shore Hospital where police interviewed him to determine what had happened.

The investigation raised more questions than answers initially for police, who were led to believe that Stevenson was a victim of a crime. According to published reports, Stevenson told relatives he was attacked and knocked unconscious before waking up in the back of a truck.

Stevenson was reported missing to Marshfield Police on Oct. 24 after family members spent the weekend waiting for him to call or come home. According to Marshfield Police Lt. Det. Robert Wright, a missing person report was filed that day, and police were given Stevenson's description and that of his vehicle.

Wright said the department received a report the next day that Stevenson's car had been found in a parking lot near the Trailside Museum in Milton. The vehicle, a 1999 blue Ford Ranger pickup truck, was unlocked when it was discovered by police. Stevenson's keys, wallet and cell phone were found inside his truck.

A press release issued by the Cohasset Police Department said Stevenson was confused as to his whereabouts, had grown a beard, and looked thinner than he did before the disappearance. Stevenson was admitted to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth Wednesday, Nov. 23 but was released the same day.

Marshfield Police Lt. Det. Robert Wright said that Stevenson initially told Cohasset police that he was attacked, but later changed his story saying that stress stemming from family and work prompted him to wander off and disappear on his own. According to Wright, Stevenson said he split his time away between Boston and Hingham, where he reportedly took shelter in an abandoned boat in the old Hingham Shipyard.

"He had a lot of problems with work and family and opted to disappear for a while," Wright said. "He didn't realize how many people were out looking for him." Marshfield Police have closed their investigation in this matter.

The long arm of wine

Key to shopowner's success was a class at BU

Rick Lombardi, owner of The Vin Bin in Marlborough, found business success at a Boston University wine course.

By Charlie Breitrose
DAILY NEWS STAFF

MARLBOROUGH – These days, Rick Lombardi welcomes customers to his small but homey wine shop in downtown Marlborough, The Vin Bin, but just a couple of years ago he was commuting to Boston where he worked as a spokesman for the Suffolk County Sheriff's Department.

The transition took two years of work and study in the evenings and on weekends, but one of the key pieces of the puzzle, Lombardi said, was taking a class about wine at Boston University's Elizabeth Bishop Wine Resource Center.

Although he worked in the media business for 20 years, Lombardi wanted to make a change. He first got a taste for wine when he worked in the liquor section of a Worcester grocery store in his late teens, back when the drinking age was 18.

"I had always wanted to do something in wine – open a store or work in the wine industry," Lombardi said. "I read a lot about wine on my own, but I felt like if I really wanted to be serious about this education I needed a formal level of education."

After looking around at adult courses offered in the area, and culinary schools, Lombardi decided to enroll in the course at BU. He looked at courses offered by Johnson & Wales University in Providence, but because he worked in Boston at the time, attending the once-per-week lectures at BU was easy for Lombardi.

The course covers the history of how wine evolved and a little bit of marketing and business, but mostly provides a foundation in wine education.

"There is lots of reading the textbook, lots of outside reading and, of course, there is tasting," Lombardi said. "We would talk about a (wine producing) region, taste wine from the region and talk about how they taste different and find out why they are different."

People who work in wine shops, or work for distributors are the main audience for BU's wine course, said Bill Nesto, one of the instructors in the program.

"Rick is a great example of one type of people we serve," Nesto said. "We are known to educate those people going into the industry who want to work for retailer or distributor, even journalists come to us.

"I can think of several people working in family wine shops who are studying here in order to play a bigger role in the family wine shop."

Plenty of people work in wine and spirit retail without a formal education, but Nesto said to really have a solid and objective knowledge of wine, people must learn how to taste wine and where the wine comes from, including the climate and even type of soil in which the grapes are grown.

"An important part of the class is developing an understanding of, and a vocabulary of, tasting," Nesto said. "It is an important skill, how to communicate what you are tasting."

The wine program at BU has changed a bit since Lombardi attended classes. He took the intermediate and advanced classes. Now, Nesto said, the school added a fourth course.

"We have moved away from an off-the-shelf wine education program developed in Great Britain," Nesto said. "We are now offering our own textbook that we wrote for the level one class."

The level one course costs $850, and the level two course costs $1,250, according to the school Web site. Both courses are 14-week courses. More advanced courses, level three and four, cost $2,500 each.

Opening the wine shop with his wife, Julie, took more than just taking a course, Lombardi said.

"It took a lot of homework. It was the most homework, the most preparation, I have ever done on anything," Lombardi said. "I did research every single day for two years."

He now has six employees, most of whom have training in wine. With the knowledge he picked up in the wine program, and a course he took on cheese, Lombardi said he feels confident he can help any customer.

"When someone comes in describing what the want with their meal, I draw on my expertise and can decipher what they are asking for based on what I have been taught and lead them in the right direction," Lombardi said.

Learning is a lifetime endeavor for everyone involved

Janet L. Castleman, Ph.D.
FRAMINGHAM STATE COLLEGE

Chances are good that if you're reading this article, you're also involved in some kind of adult education, whether to enrich your mind, gain job skills or earn a degree. At least half of all Americans 25 years of age and older participate in educational activities.

Who are these 90 million adult learners? What are they studying and why? What brings them back to the classroom?

Adult learners range in age from 25 to 95. They have many different motives for continuing their education; for some, it is recreational, and for many, it is mandatory. The most common reason is to find or keep a job, or to get a better job. According to the University Continuing Education Association, almost two-thirds of adults continue their education for work-related reasons. One explanation for this is that adults change jobs more than ever before, requiring them to upgrade and learn new skills (Bureau of Labor Statistics, 2004).

Adults are typically driven back to the classroom by economic pressures. In 2005, the U.S. Census Bureau reported that a college degree nearly doubles the annual earnings of workers: those with a bachelor's degree earn an average of $51,206 a year, while those with a high school diploma earn $27,915. Yet almost half of all American adults have never attended college, and only 28 percent have earned a bachelor's degree.

The Massachusetts Job Outlook through 2010, published by the Division of Unemployment Assistance, projects 1.1 million job openings. Almost two-thirds of all new jobs will require an associate's degree or higher. In order to remain competitive, the state economy will require a more highly educated workforce. Demand for workers with specialized training in information technology will be particularly strong: the top five fastest-growing occupations will be in IT fields.

Adult students have been flocking to IT training programs in recent years. For example, enrollments for Microsoft certifications, such as the Certified Professional (MCP) and Certified Systems Engineer (MCSE) programs, more than doubled between 2000 and 2004, exceeding 1.8 million students.

Despite increasing pressure on adults to return to college, many find it difficult to juggle school, work and home responsibilities. Increasingly, they are turning to online courses for convenience and flexibility. The Internet has spurred a revolution in continuing education. According to a recent survey by the Pew Internet and American Life Project (2005), 68 percent of American adults 18 and over use the Internet. Colleges and universities recognize that the Internet can be a powerful tool for reaching and teaching adult students; 90 percent of schools now participate in distance education. Online enrollments have increased from 1.6 million in 2003 to 2.3 million in 2004 (the Sloan Consortium, 2005).

Adults also return to school to obtain and maintain professional licensure. For example, teachers in Massachusetts typically must have a master's degree in order to obtain a professional teaching license. In addition, they must earn 150 hours of Professional Development Points every five years in order to maintain licensure. With half of all teachers predicted to retire in the next five years, colleges and universities across the state will continue to focus on meeting teachers' educational and professional needs.

Framingham State College introduced its Online Professional Development Center as a novel and convenient way for educators to fulfill their PDP requirements. Teachers, administrators, health educators, school nurses and other school professionals can take one-credit, online graduate courses to receive 22.5 PDPs. Courses include such content areas as social history, instructional technology, nutrition, food allergies and sports supplements.

The Irish Rovers

Grandma better watch out for that reindeer

The Irish Rovers holiday show comes to Duxbury Dec. 4

The ubiquitous novelty tune "Grandma Got Run Over by a Reindeer" is sure to be on the song list when The Irish Rovers bring their holiday show to the Duxbury Performing Arts Center on Sunday — even if it means singer George Millar has to break a promise he made to his late mother.

"Before my mother passed away, she asked me to shave my beard, cut my hair and never ever to sing 'Grandma Got Run Over by a Reindeer' again," explained Millar with a laugh last week by telephone from his home on Nanoose Bay in Canada. "My mother's been gone for several years now and I've still got my beard and my long hair, and we're still doing that song."

The continued popularity of that song — along with the Celtic folk group's other hits "The Unicorn" and "Wasn't That a Party" - is among the reasons that The Irish Rovers are still in demand 40 years after the group was first formed in Toronto by a then-teenage Millar and friend Jim Ferguson, both immigrants from Northern Ireland.

"I started the group when I was just 16 years old and, of course, I had no sense then that we would last at all. We were making about $25 a night in folk clubs in Canada. We headed off to America in 1965 and landed a 22-week gig at The Purple Onion in San Francisco. Before long, everything just took off for us."

In 1966, the group's debut album, "The First of The Irish Rovers," was released on Decca Records. Their latest, a double CD, "Forty Years of Rovin" was released earlier this year and features many songs written by Millar, who is the group's lead singer and guitarist.

"The Rovers aren't just what I do to make a living, they're who I am. My whole year is filled with The Irish Rovers. When I'm not writing music, or in the recording studio, we're on tour. It's all-consuming and I wouldn't have it any other way," says Millar, 58, and the father of two grown children.

Although he does acknowledge that the road has lost some of its allure, Millar has no plans to slow down. "The older I get, the more I love the recording studio. Traveling is a young man's game, but I can't retire from something I love to do. There's no reason to stop yet either. In Celtic music, we don't have to wear spandex like Mick Jagger. As someone more famous than I once said, however, if I had known I was going to make it past 40 I would have taken better care of myself."

Himself aside, Millar makes sure loyal fans of the folk legends always have what they need. "We're not Las Vegas slick by any means, but that's fine because the secret of Irish music is that it is like a Polka. The rhythm of a good Irish song makes you tap your toe with its happy tempo. You can laugh and clap along even if you don't know what we're singing about."

"The Irish Rovers Holiday Show" — featuring original members George and Joe Millar and Wilcil McDowell - will be presented at Duxbury Performing Arts Center, 130 St. George Street, Duxbury, on Dec. 4 at 7 p.m. For tickets or information, call 866-468-7619 or visit www.ticketweb.com. Tickets may also be purchased at all Strawberries locations and at the Plymouth Hall box office at 50 Court Street in Plymouth.

Sister act

Huntington Theatre stages 'The Sisters Rosensweig'

The sisters (l.-r. Deborah Offner, Maureen Anderman, and Mimi Lieber) in the Huntington Theatre Company's production of "The Sisters Rosensweig" by Wendy Wasserstein. Directed by Nicholas Martin. Through Dec. 4 at the Boston University Theatre.

As perhaps an unintentional prelude to the holidays —when otherwise far-flung families find themselves together — the Huntington Theatre Company is currently serving up a very appealing production of "The Sisters Rosensweig."

Wendy Wasserstein's Tony Award-winning comedy about family relationships, which had its Broadway premiere in 1992 in a stellar Lincoln Center production featuring Jane Alexander, Madeline Kahn and Frances McDormand, tells the story of three Jewish-American sisters who gather in London for the 54th birthday of the expatriate oldest of the trio. Wassertein's honest portrait of the strong bonds that make sisterhood so special remains both fascinating and compelling.

Directed by Huntington Artistic Director Nicholas Martin, the current production features three talented veterans of television and stage, Maureen Anderman, Mimi Lieber and Deborah Offner, in the leads. Anderman is spot on as the successful London-based banker who can't seem to find personal contentment. Lieber's earthiness is well-suited to always-on-the-go journalist Pfeni whose male companion prefers the company of men. While Offner as middle sister Gorgeous Teitelbaum, a Jewish princess in a knock-off Chanel suit, fares less well. Tony Award-winner Andrea Martin — whose memorable Huntington appearances include starring roles in "The Rose Tattoo" and "Betty's Summer Vacation" — was originally announced for this production. It seems clear that Martin intended for her to play Gorgeous, the middle-aged housewife from Newton who has reinvented herself as a talk show host and semipro psychologist. In Offner's hands, Gorgeous is just a caricature when she should be a more fully dimensional character.

Fine supporting work is provided by local actors Jeremiah Kissell and Richard Snee, as well as Amelia Alvarez, T. Scott Cunningham and James McMenamin. The set design by David Korins and costumes by Robert Morgan are sumptuous and as perfect as you could ever hope to find on any stage.

"The Sisters Rosensweig" will be presented at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue, Boston, through December 4. For tickets and information, call 617-266-0800 or visit www.huntingtontheatre.org.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

DO MEN HAVE TROUBLE HEARING WOMEN?

There may be a reason for many women's contention that men have difficulty listening to them. Research shows that women's voices actually are more difficult for men to listen to than other men's voices. Men decipher female voices using the auditory part of the brain that processes music; male voices engage a simpler mechanism. The female voice is actually more complex than the male voice, due to differences between the size and shape of men's and women's vocal cords and larynges. Women also have greater natural "melody" in their voices. This causes a more complex range of sound frequencies than a male voice. At least men now have a reasonable explanation for their seeming inability to listen to women.

Hearing is a vital part of communication with those around us. If your hearing is suffering from the effects of noise and noise pollution, age-related loss, disease, or trauma, seek the professional attention of a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist. Hearing loss varies by type and degree, so we offer comprehensive evaluations and a complete line of hearing instruments to suit each person's particular needs. Come see us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg in Weymouth, and have your hearing tested. It's painless, doesn't take very long, and can help you more than you know. PH: 781-337-1144.

P.S. People suffering hallucinations usually hear male voices, perhaps because the brain has difficulty conjuring up a false female voice.

We're breaking records because of you!!!

Jamaican resort

By JERRY KRONENBERG

Sandals Whitehouse resort

Piazza at Sandals Whitehouse resort

Enjoy the hospitality extended by the Jamaicans

WHITEHOUSE, Jamaica -- What do you get when you cross a bit of Dutch, French and Italian architecture with a healthy dollop of Jamaican cuisine, natural beauty and laid-back attitude?

A: The new Sandals Whitehouse European Village & Spa.

Located on 50 acres of prime waterfront property on Jamaica's less-developed southern coast, Sandals opened the $100 million couples-only, all-inclusive resort earlier this year.

Nestled between southern Jamaica's Bluefields hills and Bluefields and Morgan's bays, the vacation spot takes its name from the nearby town of Whitehouse, in Westmoreland Parish.

"This whole South Coast, which was totally undeveloped, offers a little bit of an adventure -- a little bit of intrigue," said Jeremy Jones, the resort's general manager. "People who come here are getting a nice, unspoiled, very quiet experience -- something off of the beaten track."

Though you could easily spend your entire vacation enjoying the resort's two miles of beaches and 14 restaurants and bars, Jones and other staffers encourage visitors to take in some of the area's natural beauty.

As a couples-only resort that attracts lots of wedding parties and honeymooners, Sandals Whitehouse promotes an atmosphere of R&R: Romance and relaxation.

Cross the threshold of the resort's main house and the pampering begins.

There's no standing in line to check in -- instead, waiters bring you cool wet towels and cold champagne as efficient staffers handle your paperwork.

The site's 360 guest rooms are spread across three four-story hotel complexes, or "villages" -- the Dutch Village, French Village and Italian Village. Each offers a slightly different architectural style.

The resort's nine amenity levels range from deluxe beachfront rooms ($335 per night) to penthouse beachfront honeymoon suites (with a butler) that cost $595 per person per night. (Sandals offers discounts and specials of up to 50 percent off these base rates.) All rates include meals, booze, activities, entertainment and gratuities.

All rooms have either a porch or balcony overlooking the beach, which is just a few steps away. Other amenities include an in-room safe, built-in hair dryer and U.S.-style electrical outlets (no need for converters here).

Step out of your room and you'll walk past manicured lawns to the Piazza, which as with Italian cities, gives this European-flavored resort its heart.

Anchored by a giant Flamboyance tree (a Caribbean tree that features red blooms in the fall), the massive Piazza offers six restaurants, four bars and more.

Want to cool off?

Jump into the Piazza's 13,000-square-foot pool, which Sandals bills as the largest in Jamaica. You can drag a beach chair into this shallow pool, or sidle up to the Riviera -- an attached "swim-up" bar -- for a drink.

For those who prefer swimming in the ocean, a white-sand beach leading to blue water stretches across the entire resort.

Watersports include wind surfing, water skiing, scuba diving, kayaking and more.

Land-based sports include a 24-hour fitness center, tennis and squash courts.

Each village also has its own swimming pool/whirlpool, most with swim-up bars.

There's also a central game room with pool tables and the like, and Sandals plans to add slot-machine gambling shortly.

The resort also offers a gift boutique, with a duty-free shop set to open later this year. (A tip: Postpone heavy-duty gift buying until your departure. You'll find better selection and prices at the Montego Bay airport's extensive duty-free shops.)

After a day of fun, head to the Piazza for supper and nightlife (again, all included).

Eateries include Jasmin's (Asian cuisine), Giuseppe's (Italian), Eleanor's (Caribbean), Bayside (international cuisine in the evenings, buffet dining at breakfast and lunch) and Arizona (Tex-Mex suppers, followed by sandwiches and grill food all night long). The French Village also hosts Bluefields restaurant, which serves up authentic Jamaican lunch and early dinners.

Most restaurants offer both indoor and outdoor seating, and the resort also regularly hosts special outdoor feasts, such as a midnight seafood buffet.

After supper, check out the Cafe du Paris for your choice of nine desserts and 13 coffee and tea drinks (yes, that's included too).

For something a little stronger, hit the Casablanca Martini and Piano Bar, which pours the resort's wickedest libations every night until 2 a.m.

Le Cabaret Club also offers a nightly headline act (ranging from hot reggae bands to standup comics), followed by dancing until 3 a.m.

If all of this overindulgence leaves you feeling a bit under the weather the next morning, check out the Red Lane Spa's sauna and steam room. The spa also offers men, women and couples Blue Mountain Coffee scrubs, seaweed body peels, massages and other extras (services cost $30 and up).

Spa technician Coretta Robinson recommends couples seeking a little romance try a candlelit champagne and chamomile bubble bath for two ($270).

Or splurge on the $370 "Scrub-a-Dub-Dub, Two-in-the-Tub" package: a his-and-hers exfoliating body scrub, mineral bath and Swedish massage.

"A lot of times, couples decide the night before they're leaving the resort that they want to get something special done (at the spa)," Robinson said. "And they always end up saying: 'Oh, this was the highlight of my trip.'"

Parcel wins protection

Land abuts Cook Estate

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The voters have spoken and do not want to see anything built on the town's 8.7 acre parcel of land off Sohier Street.

Located adjacent to the Cook Estate, the land has been eyed for development for years, but will now continue serve as a protective buffer for Peppermint Brook that flows into the town's drinking water supply.

Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road, presented the citizens' petition at Monday's Special Town Meeting. The conservation restriction article was one of 17 items brought before voters. The meeting began shortly after 7 p.m. at the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium once it was determined a quorum of 100 voters were present. For the first time, Dan Evans presided as moderator, replacing George Marlette who held the position for the last 12 years.

Quigley said she has been working with a group of residents "for several years now to protect the land from development, to protect Peppermint Brook, one of the main tributaries to the town's water supply." She said at previ-

Town Meeting balances budget

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town is now working with a balanced fiscal 2006 budget.

Voters approved line item changes that helped make up for last spring's failed $400,000override.

They also transferred $109,000 into the reserve fund; money that could be used for special education out-of-district tuition costs.

While balancing the town's side of the budget was a relatively uneventful task, the school's side caused more of a stir at Monday's Special Town Meeting. One resident floated an amendment reducing the school department budget by $81,652, therefore upping the reserve fund transfer from the $109,000 to $190,652 .

By way of background, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh announced at the beginning of this school year that the school department had roughly $190,000 left over from fiscal 2005.

She explained the surplus occurred when positions which opened up at the school were not immediately filled, creating a savings in the salary line item. Additionally, two custodial positions were not filled at all, which led to more savings.

Walsh said per state law, it is OK to pre-pay of out-of-district special education tuitions for the first quarter of the next fiscal year with surplus funds from the prior fiscal year.

The school department spent $81,652 to cover tuition costs for two new special education students before Monday's Town Meeting but agreed to support

CHS gets good progress report

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset Middle High School has passed the test and will continue to enjoy its status as an accredited school. A two-year follow-up progress report came back with flying colors, officials say.

Middle-high school principal Joel Antolini shared the good news with the school committee Dec. 1. He said the progress report outlined the improvements made to the school in four key areas — as suggested by the Committee on Public Secondary Schools which approves accreditation — including the need to add administrative staff to the restructured middle school, the reduction of the curriculum coordinator position, the loss of a library aide, and the loss of interscholastic middle school athletics.

Antolini said the school has been working to meet the goals set by the Committee and "As a result, in October, the Committee on Public Secondary Schools agreed to continue our accredited status."

CMHS was re-accredited in June 2003. All schools which are accredited are required to submit a progress report addressing any suggestions made by the Committee two years after reaching accredited or re-accredited status. Antolini said over the past two years, the school department has been able to form a new full-time assistant principal position at the middle school, which was filled this year by Beth Sternala. In addition, the school hired new full-time director of curriculum and professional development,

Officers visit CHS law class

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Two Cohasset police officers were back at the high school Tuesday morning but not to talk about the recent bomb threats or vandalism.

In fact, uniformed police officers make regular visits to teacher Jack Buckley's "Introduction to Law" class as part of the class curriculum to talk about everything from probable cause to Miranda rights.

The program also includes a class visit to the police department headquarters on Elm Street and a tour of the Plymouth County jail. Although it's not a requirement, students — who have signed parental permission slips — are also invited to join police on a two-hour, ride-along.

Food pantry volunteers see 'a different side of life'

Editor's note: This is one in a series of articles focusing in the various food pantries which serve South Shore communities. This year's CNC/South Gifts of Hope campaign will highlight the work and needs of area food pantries.

By Seth Jacobson
CORRESPONDENT

The concept of volunteering at a food pantry has never been a foreign one for B.J. Babcock. She learned all about it at a very early age, in a crucial time in our country's history.

"My dad was a social worker during the Depression," Babcock explained. "I used to help him deliver food baskets during that time, when I was growing up in Rochester, New York."

Babcock, a volunteer at the Marshfield Food Pantry for the past 20 years, said helping others is something that is more like instinct than anything else.

"It's just the way I was

Vote postponed for budget policy change

The school committee was slated to vote on a new budget policy Dec. 1, but would like more time to consider the changes before taking any action. The new policy would allow the superintendent to transfer money between line items without school committee approval in amounts less than $25,000. Some school committee members feel they should be more "in the loop" regarding budget transfers and would like to see at minimum the figure reduced for including the school committee in transfers. This is the second time the vote has been postponed. The vote is slated to be taken Dec. 15

Cook heirs allow extension

Public hearing on plans Jan. 13

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town has been able to secure one last extension from the heirs of the Cook Estate in order to build senior housing on the 19-acre site. A new RFP outlining specifications for the project will be sent out to prospective bidders tentatively on Jan. 13.

Voters at Monday's Special Town Meeting indefinitely postponed an article which would have allowed the town to purchase the land that night as a last resort, due to the fact that the board of selectmen was able to secure the extension, which indicates the town now has until March 30, 2007 to close on the project.

The town has asked for a number of extensions from the Cook trustees, and many have been granted. However, the trustees had imposed a final closing date of mid-January, 2006, which made working with a developer on the project impossible.

Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer and Gary Vanderweil have been working with the trustees of the estate and explained there is no time for securing the proper permits from the town with a January deadline, and no builder will close on the property without permits in hand. In turn, the Cooks agreed to allow the town one more year to work out the details.

In a letter dated Dec. 5, sent by the Cook trustees' attorney Thomas Guidi, the terms of the extension are outlined:

- The purchase price shall remain at $4.5 million.
- The only remaining contingency to the buyer's obligation to purchase the property shall be the developer obtaining all permits necessary to allow the development of at least 45 units of senior housing on the property.
- On Dec. 15, 2005, March 31, 2006, June 30, 2006, Sept. 30, 2006, and Dec. 31, 2006, the buyer shall make payments of $31,500 of which $6,500 will be paid directly to the seller as a non-refundable extension fee and $25,000 shall be paid to the escrow agent as a non-refundable extension deposit to be held pursuant to the agreement.

The agreement may be terminated and all non-refundable extension deposits previously paid to the escrow agent shall be paid to the seller, and provided that the buyer is not in default under the agreement, the initial $200,000 deposit shall be returned to the buyer if:

- The seller has not entered into a Land Disposition Agreement with a developer by March 31, 2006
- The developer has not filed a preliminary application for a special permit with the planning board by Sept. 30, 2006.
- The developer has not applied for all permits and approvals necessary for the project by Dec. 31, 2006.

The Cook project has been in the works for more than 2 years, and hopefully, this extension will bring the last chapter of the ordeal to a close.

In May 2005, the first developer, Northland Residential, which had been working for more than one year on the project with the town, was forced out of the deal when it became clear wastewater for the planned development could not be handled on site. Therefore, a reduced project was required to go back out to bid, per state procurement laws.

During the second bid phase, Deer Hill Partners was chosen to tentatively develop the project, but with the firm deadline set for the closing by the Cook trustees, the company felt there was not enough time to secure permits to build and backed out of the deal, as it did not feel comfortable purchasing a piece of land that may or may not support the development it had planned. Subsequently, the second runner-up, Cohasset Associates, which was contacted per state procurement laws after Deer Hill backed out, also backed out of the deal for the same reason. The third developer in the running — once again Northland Residential — declined the offer to build the project the second time around.

With the extension in place, a developer will not be asked to purchase the land without permits to build in hand.

The board of selectmen will hold a regularly scheduled meeting Dec. 13. A special Cook public hearing will be held Jan. 5 to gain feedback from the public before issuing the new RFP. The new RFP will likely be sent out Jan. 13.

Money for housing consultant gets green light

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Voters approved two recommendations of Community Preservation Committee on Monday night.

CPC chairman Stuart Ivimey said the first recommendation to spend $20,000 on a housing consultant, will help the town deal with affordable housing issues and will work with town boards including the Cohasset Housing Partnership.

The partnership will be responsible for providing perspectives on creating affordable housing and will be guided by the rules and regulations of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership that can provide financial assistance, training sessions and resource materials. The consultant will also guarantee the town's affordable housing plan, which is a part of the draft Master Plan, will be finished. The motion was adopted unanimously.

The second vote rescinded a previous Town Meeting vote to allocate $98,500 for athletic field improvements at the middle-high school. The school department was able to make alternate improvements than what it had planned, and the money was no longer necessary. The motion was also adopted unanimously.

The Community Preservation Committee is able to fund projects which deal with low and moderate income housing, open space and recreation, and historical preservation. Ivimey said the CPC is accepting applications for projects. Anyone interested in applying to receive funding should contact Ivimey at (781) 383-2604.

The board of selectmen is still looking for residents who would like to participate in the Housing Partnership. Interested citizens should send a letter of interest and/or résumé to Town Manager Bill Griffin at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. For more information, please call (781) 383-4105.

Perceptions about police changed for students enrolled in Jack Buckley's "Introduction to Law" class.

Much of the discussion in Monday's class among the students and Officer Pat Kenney and Sgt. Bill Quigley surrounded illegal drugs, sale of drug paraphernalia, domestic violence and whether the town had serious crimes like murder.

An interesting aspect of the discussion also centered on when to "tell on" someone who may be abusing drugs or someone involved in domestic violence in order to get them help.

Officer Kenney also noted that he views an officer's job as going after the people selling drugs and said police want to work with parents of youngsters who may be on drugs to get them the help they need.

"My job is not always to jump out of the cruiser and put handcuffs on someone," he said. "My job is to serve the town."

Kenney, who joined the Cohasset Police Department last February, said Cohasset people don't appear to be afraid to get involved. He said police recently had 20 cell phone calls about a family argument occurring in public that appeared to be getting out of hand.

He also explained police are mandated to report suspected incidents of child abuse.

The officers also led a discussion about legal issues surrounding when to draw the line regarding the sale of items that can be used for criminal activity although that may not be what the product is made for.

The prime example is the sale of double-wide, tobacco rolling paper and flavored cigars, dubbed blunts, that are available for sale in Cohasset and could used for smoking marijuana. Kenney asked hypothetically if the sale of switchblades and stiletto knives should be banned; student consensus was they should be because of their potential for abuse. However, one student noted banning products could get out of hand and suggested whip cream could be banned because the aerosol can could be used to get high.

When the class started in September, students were asked their opinions on police-community relations. Most of the responses were fairly positive with the majority having good feelings about police officers. The students also thought people in general could be more cooperative with police. The survey also reflected that students think police officers generally did not have a positive opinion about teenagers.

Buckley, the students' teacher, said the same survey would be given later this week to see how students' impressions had changed after taking the class.

In an interview after Monday's class, Kenney described the class as "a great group." He said he was surprised at how well the students thought of the police in the pre-class survey.

Sgt. Quigley said the key to changing perception is communication. "It's all about communication and face time with the kids," he said. "Then if the time comes we are dealing with kids on a call – we have a rapport."

Quigley said he was impressed with the questions the class asked that often put them on the spot.

For example, the students wondered why student backpacks and bookbags were checked and not those belonging to the teachers in the aftermath of the recent bomb threats.

Kenney said the officers explained the target group of potential suspects was not believed to be teachers.

Buckley said the class "Introduction to Law" is an elective offered only during the first semester and is part of the Social Studies curriculum.

As part of the class, students studied a real case about a Cohasset woman who was arrested and ended up being incarcerated. The students also each prepare a fiction, research paper detailing 15 steps of a crime (such as OUI or embezzlement) and prosecution, from probable cause to the arrest, court hearings and appeal, Buckley said.

Earlier in the term, state Rep. Garrett Bradley, who represents Cohasset, spoke to the class on the new tougher drunk-driving law, Melanie's Bill, and the legislative process.

Students' perceptions shift after law class

Teacher Jack Buckley has students in his "Introduction to Law" class fill out a survey asking about their perceptions of community-police relations at the beginning of the term in September and then in December. Here are the results.

• How do police and community get along? One-third of the class shifted perceptions toward the positive. 72 percent of the students think that the relations are good or great.

• How do you feel about police? 80 percent of the students have positive feelings in the post-survey as compared to 58 percent in the pre-survey.The highest rating of 5 increased by 10 students, a 40 percent increase. Additionally, 20 percent shifted from neutral to positive.

• 33 percent of the students report multiple (more than 7) friendly interactions with the police. The raw value number double from 4 to 8. Six more students report 5 or 6 positive interactions, so the final tally is that 58 percent of the class reports at least 5 or 6 friendly interactions.

• Most significantly, not one student thought the police liked teens in the pre-survey. In the pre-survey, the students were at best neutral in their replies, with 15 students choosing "3". In the post survey, however, a whopping 40 percent of the students stated that they think the police like teens. That's an incredible gain, teacher Jack Buckley says. (48 percent remained neutral, while "don't like us" fell from 37.5 percent to only 12 percent).

CMHS gets high marks in accreditation progress report

Nancy Mrzyglod, at the beginning of the year.

In addition, while the school had lost a library aide, that position has been reinstated and a new successful intramural middle school sports program has begun.

Cohasset voluntarily participates in the accreditation process, which is run by the New England Association of Schools & Colleges. The NEASC is a non-profit group and the accreditation process is essentially a peer-review process. Schools are not ranked, but a level of acceptable quality has been set for all accredited institutions.

To maintain its status, CMHS is required to go through the re-accreditation process every 10 years. In June 2003, the school received its re-accreditation under the leadership of former principal Michael Jones.

Two years prior to embarking upon the formal accreditation process, the school began a self-assessment process, noting areas of strength and weakness in the seven broad standards of — mission and expectation, curriculum, instruction, assessment of student learning, leadership and organization, school-based resources for learning, and community-based resources for learning.

In the fall of 2002, a visiting committee from the NEASC spent four days at the school during which time it objectively rated the school in each of the areas. The chair of the visiting committee wrote up a draft report, which was sent to Jones to be checked for factual accuracy, then sent back to be finalized for submission to the Commission on Public Secondary Schools, which reviewed it, and made the final decision. The school was re-accredited, and was given a list of recommendations to keep it on a path of continual improvement.

There will be a five-year progress report issued in March 2007. Leading up to that time, some of the goals up for consideration will be increasing interdisciplinary instruction, expanding the library's collection, increasing student involvement in assessing the school's mission statement, more cross-curricular planning, the effectiveness of the school's custodial plan, and responding to equipment issues in the absence of technical aides. Upcoming budget presentations for the school department will likely reflect additions in the areas which are being watched.

School committee member Rick Flynn said hearing the results of the accreditation process "Provides credibility that some of the additions we made (to the budget) were necessary. Clearly they were budget items that were important," he said.

School committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said in addition, all the goals for the accreditation are being addressed through the school department's Strategic Plan. "We are on a track," she said.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Board of Assessors gets $15,000 for revaluation

The board of assessors will be able to keep up with deadlines set by the state, thanks to a Town Meeting approved appropriation of $15,000. The Department of Revenue requires towns go through a revaluation program every three years, and the allocated funds will allow the board to hire additional staff, as well as make sure all equipment, including cameras and software, are current.

Senior real estate tax exemptions

Once again real estate tax exemptions were approved by Town Meeting. Selectman Gary Vanderweil said a total of 76 exemptions were given last year totaling roughly $52,000. Most of the exemptions were granted for the elderly and veterans.

Jim Hamilton, 298 King St., said while the article is something that is routinely passed every year, "it is a wonderful thing" that he believes more people should be educated about. He said in a town where people care about seniors as much as they do in Cohasset, this exemption provides a service that can really make a difference.

Hamilton said there is a certain sense of pride in seniors when it comes to paying taxes, and he said the information about the exemption should be brought to them in a way they feel comfortable. He said there is paperwork to be completed and seniors need an advocate to help walk them through the process. He said he feels the exemption is an excellent estate-planning tool "and I hope next year not to hear 76, but even more."

The motion was adopted unanimously.

School Web site full of information

The school committee is urging the public to add www.cohassetk12.org to their "favorites" list. The school district Web site is full of information for all three schools, and is continually being updated. School committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said if parents are looking to find out what's going on at their child's school, the Web site can be a valuable resource, especially during those years when letter's aren't coming home in the backpacks quite as regularly.

Special Town Meeting

Beechwood sidewalk project makes strides

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Beechwood Street residents on the east side of Rte. 3A got their wish: construction will begin on its long-awaited sidewalk. Residents of the street have been trying for eight years to have a sidewalk built on what they say is the second busiest street in town (not counting Rte. 3A).

Bill Fusco, 8 Norman Todd Road, told voters at Monday's Special Town Meeting with the Cedarmere development in the pipeline as well as the train crossing, a sidewalk is necessary to keep pedestrians, especially children, safe.

The sidewalk would be installed from South Main Street along Beechwood Street to its intersection with Norman Todd Road.

While the board of selectmen was unanimously in favor of the sidewalk, the advisory committee was split. Advisory committee member Tucker Glavin took the minority view and said while he does support the building of sidewalks for safety reasons, the advisory board is supposed to be the fiscal watchdog for the town. To take on $100,000 in debt for sidewalks may not be the fiscally responsible thing to do. He said he would recommend indefinitely postponing the project.

Merle Brown said the majority of the advisory committee feels the project has been in the works for a while and the train makes all the difference when it comes to needing sidewalks.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the construction of the Beechwood sidewalk would not affect plans to construct a sidewalk on Forest Avenue. "They're not competing projects," he said. Director of Finance Michael Buckley explained the project would be funded with a five-year bond.

The motion was adopted by the required two-thirds vote.

Memorial scholarship discussion tabled

Matter stalled over gender issue

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A Town Meeting article to formally establish a scholarship in memory of Gia Barresi, a member of the Cohasset High School Class of 1983 who passed away in 2001, seemed like an easy item of business at Town Meeting.

But because the scholarship would be awarded only to a female student each year, the matter was tabled.

Both the board of selectmen and the advisory committee unanimously approved the article. However, Debbie Shadd, 31 Summer St., brought up the point that there may be legal issues with having a scholarship for females that doesn't have a male counterpart.

Shadd also pointed out the scholarship was not a newly established; her son received it last year. She said she was confused about why the requirements would suddenly shift to girls only. Director of Finance Michael Buckley presented the article and said he wasn't sure why the scholarship committee wanted to change the scholarship.

When presenting the article to selectmen earlier this fall, Buckley said members of the class have been raising funds to be put into a scholarship fund in Barresi's memory. He said the requirements for receiving the scholarship ensure the person who is presented the award will be the same kind of student and have achieved the same kinds of accomplishments Barresi did when she was in high school.

While formal Town Meeting articles are not necessary to establish scholarship funds, Buckley explained the Town Meeting vote would be recorded in the Town Report and become part of the town's history.

Barresi was a member of and valedictorian of the Cohasset High School class of 1983. She went on to graduate from Harvard University in 1987. She was also a member of the school's field hockey, basketball and softball teams.

At Monday's Special Town Meeting, selectman Ralph Dormitzer suggested the motion be amended to include all students.

However, Sam Pease, 3 Sankey Road, asked how the town could amend the scholarship given by a private donor.

"It's their money. Don't tell the person who's giving a scholarship who to give it to," he said.

However, Town Counsel advised it was still unclear as to whether the motion was legal and the motion was indefinitely postponed.

Funding allocated for police contract

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Meeting unanimously adopted article 3, which approved the allocation of roughly $85,000 for police department-related expenses. Funds in the amount of $20,715 were approved to be transferred from free cash to cover retroactive costs from fiscal 2005. An additional $64,918 was approved to be added to the fiscal 2006 budget.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the police union has spent the last two years in negotiations. After reaching an impasse with the town, a mediator was brought in by the state to help resolve the issues. The officers have agreed to take a zero percent raise for fiscal 2005, and a 3 percent raise for fiscal 2006, 2007, and 2008.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said his board unanimously supported the allocation for the department. He said Chief James Hussey should be congratulated for the work he has done. Advisory committee member Roger Hill said his committee unanimously approved the article as well.

Leland Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, asked whether the contract had been brought before the advisory committee 30 days prior to Town Meeting as required, and what the going rate for a detail is. Griffin said the contract did come before the advisory committee and that detail officers receive $40 per hour, which is an amount that is "pretty much in the middle" compared with surrounding towns.

Martha Gjesteby, 81 Old Pasture Road, asked what the major language changes were pertaining to the contract. Griffin said the new contract adjusted sick leave time, and introduced a new lower rate of pay for cadets while they are training at the police academy, but the department will now agree to pay for the academy if the recruit agrees to stay on in Cohasset for three years after graduation. If an officer decides to leave before the three years is up, they agree to make up the cost paid by the town.

The motion was passed unanimously.

BUDGET TALK

Cohasset's new Town Moderator Dan Evans listens while Town Manager Bill Griffin explains article one: balancing the budget. Griffin told voters many reductions were made to the budget to help offset the costs of a failed override and other increases in line items that have come up during the course of the year. Article one passed unanimously.

CLOSE VOTE

Residents hold up green "in favor" cards during a hand count vote at the Special Town Meeting Monday. The vote was taken on article 14, which ultimately decided to place a conservation restriction on a piece of town-owned property on Sohier Street, which in turn protects the abutting Peppermint Brook which flows into Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply. A two-thirds vote was required to pass the article, and a voice vote was too close to call. The final tally was 128 in favor and 51 opposed.

putting the remainder of the left-over funds into the reserve fund to be dispensed by the advisory committee as needed.

But Leonora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, suggested amending the motion to increase the reserve fund by $81,652 — the amount which had already been spent by the school department on first quarter special education tuitions. In turn, the school budget would be decreased by the same amount through its salaries and expenses line item.

Jenkins reminded Town Meeting that money was set aside at the previous two Town Meetings to help the school department deal with the huge deficits it said it was facing in fiscal 2005.

"These funds were not intended to create a surplus to carry over as a windfall" so it could save some money for the following year, and not be included in the bottom line budget figure, she said.

Walsh defended the school department's budgetary actions. She said last year, her goals were to pay the outstanding bills for fiscal 2004 and to close fiscal 2005 in the black. To make closing in the black a certainty, she said she made further reductions in the budget.

"We cut 10 paraprofessionals and two custodians we sorely needed were not replaced," she said, adding the athletic fees for spring sports were also increased to boost the bottom line. Walsh said the school department is happy to report to this Town Meeting without any unpaid bills to fund.

"We feel we have stopped the rolling deficit," she said, but added if the money is cut from this year's budget as Jenkins suggested, "It is a cut on our base."

Advisory committee member Bernadette Faulkner said while the committee unanimously did not support Jenkins' motion to put the additional $81,000 into the reserve fund — the advisory committee felt that although legal, using the funds from the prior year was an inappropriate and unwise policy.

She added this is the first time the school department has ever tried to get a "jump start" on paying the bills for a new fiscal year. However, she said the advisory committee feels with the transfer of the $109,000 into the reserve fund, "we feel we've fixed it, and to take it out of salaries and expenses is punitive rather than productive and necessary," she said.

In response, Jenkins asked where the money which has been spent to pre-pay the tuitions has been accounted for if there is no increase or decrease in the amount of money in the school department's budget. "Is this money that has dropped from the sky?" she asked. She added she doesn't think people realize the school department recently received a $205,000 grant from the state to be used as it pleases.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley said the money which was spent has been recorded in the town's books and was reported. But Jenkins said the money is not included in the bottom line budget for fiscal 2006, and is akin to writing a blank check for the school department.

School committee member Rick Flynn reiterated the process which led to the left-over funds. "We got through the school year, but we didn't know where things would end up. She (Walsh) took the bull by the horns and we had a great surprise when we found we were in the black $190,000."

He said Walsh, through her previous experience, had become aware of the option to pre-pay special education tuitions, which are often very fluid and can cause dreaded deficit situations. Walsh's decision was an effort to help improve the school department's fiscal situation. "Cohasset never did it before because we never ended this much in the black," he said.

Flynn added every year the school department has to come back to the town to ask for assistance with special education costs because they are continually a moving target. The schools cannot predict the number of students who may move in and require out-of-district placement. "Dr. Walsh is getting negative publicity like this is a bad thing for her to do and I think it's a good thing to do. It's not money that fell from the sky. In my mind, Dr. Walsh did the right thing," he said. Flynn's comments were met with applause from the audience.

The motion made by Jenkins was defeated by a majority vote. The discussion was then brought back to the original motion: balancing the fiscal 2006 budget by approving various cuts and transferring $109,000 into the reserve fund.

To put the school's side of the budget into perspective, Wig Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave., reminded the voters of the report presented by the School Budget Investigation Committee, appointed at last year's Special Town Meeting to investigate why the school department is continually over-budget. The committee gave its report at the Annual Town Meeting.

He asked whether its recommendations had been followed by the school department. Walsh said the school department is doing exactly what it said it would do, and budget updates are given to the school committee twice per month and once approved, updates are sent to both the selectmen and advisory committee to ensure transparency throughout the entire budget process.

She also said the school department is currently in the process of building the fiscal 2007 budget, and on Dec. 15, the first budget overview will be presented. She said she will build a needs-based budget, and spoke to the voters saying, "Then the decision is ultimately yours."

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he has been working on establishing financial policies for the town and one of his goals for the future is bringing the town to a place where it is depending less on reserves to balance the budget.

"I suggest we should be building a budget that would be balanced without an override. We need to take the tough stands up front," he said. Griffin added the town needs to work toward bringing a budget to Town Meeting that does not need an override, but includes amendments which would add to that bottom line figure and allow voters to know exactly what passing an override will pay for. Griffin was showered with applause.

The motion passed as originally recommended by a majority vote.

Former selectman Ronnie McMorris gives her thoughts on article 14 at Monday's Special Town Meeting. McMorris felt the land should not be restricted in its use, as it could potentially be used to help build a project on the abutting Cook Estate. McMorris had at one point floated the idea to build rental apartments on the town-owned land.

WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Richard Donatelli

Donatelli - Goff

Priscilla Anne Goff, the daughter of Jane and Ed Goff of Cohasset, recently married Peter Richard Donatelli, the son of Martha Donatelli of No. Providence, R.I., and the late J. Clark Donatelli, on July 30, 2005, in St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. The Rev. John Mulvehill celebrated the nuptial Mass.

Maid of Honor was Courtney Goff of So. Boston, sister of the bride. Serving as Bridesmaids were Sarah Atherton, Julie Good, Vicki Maynard, Megan Staunton, Marisa Verrochi, Erin Pensa, Kerry Seitz, Emily Schultz, Bianca Squitieri, and Kristen Melchin. Jessica Donatelli, niece of the groom, was Junior Bridesmaid. Brooke Evans and Mia Verrochi were Flower Girls.

Clark Donatelli of Wakefield, R.I., served as his brother's Best Man. Ushers were Ted Goff, John Baldwin, Mike Pensa, Chris Jewett, Chris Drury, Chris Kelleher, Matt Dunne, Sean Reilly, Max Ricci, and John Donatelli. Jack Donatelli, nephew of the groom, served as Ring Bearer.

The bride is a 1994 graduate of Cohasset High School, and received a bachelor's degree from Boston College in Chestnut Hill. She is employed as New England area retail manager for the Gillette Company.

Her husband is a 1994 graduate of St. Sebastian's. He received a bachelor's degree from Boston University in Boston, and is a graduate of Suffolk Law School. He is an attorney with Schectman, Halperin, Savage in Providence, R.I.

A garden cocktail reception followed the ceremony on the lawn of the Verrochi Family home in Cohasset. Dinner and dancing followed at Atlantica on Cohasset Harbor.

After a trip to Venice followed by a Mediterranean cruise, the couple are residing in Saunderstown, R.I.

Cohasset history makes a good gift

The Town has published three Narrative histories comprising 1,360 pages, 398 photographs and six maps, the most comprehensive set of matched history books of any Colonial town in New England. They can be bought as a handsome slip-cased set of three or purchased individually.

Last January, Jackie Dormitzer's Treasury of Cohasset History was published, 71 historical gems she discovered while researching the Narrative History of Cohasset: 1950-2000. They were separately published as the Town's fourth history book.

There are still original limited-edition Rudolph Ruzicka letterpress prints of Minot Light which are matted and numbered with a provenance sheet describing the origins of the print. There are only a few dozen left.

You may buy these books at Buttonwood Books or at Town Hall in the Clerk's office. All proceeds are returned to the Town's history book account to fund further publications.

Book Angel Program benefits local kids

Buttonwood Books & Toys is sponsoring its annual Book Angel Program to benefit local children. The program recipients are Wellspring in Hull, Friends of the Homeless in Weymouth and the Blue Hills Healthy Families (serving the South Shore).

Book Angels can be a wonderful way for children to understand the deeper meaning of the holidays and help promote literacy in a way that is meaningful. The Book Angel (That is you!) selects an angel from the tree in the store and purchases a book for the child described on the angel. Buttonwood will give a 15 percent discount on the book and deliver the book to the appropriate agency.

The program will run through Dec. 22. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 if you have any questions.

raised," she said.

Humarock resident Eileen Smith, another volunteer at the pantry, has been assisting there for the past six years but has also lent a helping hand at other facilities. She once worked at the clothing/food bank in Boston known as Rosie's and also at the Roslindale Food Pantry. All told, she's been a volunteer for 40 years.

"I'm very grateful for what I have," Smith said. "And I'm happy to help people in need. I enjoy doing it and I'm glad I can do it."

Marshfield residents Tom Pierson, Chris Fitzgerald and Bob DeCastro are all members of the Marshfield Food Pantry Board of Directors, but they're also considered volunteers. Pierson has been there for the past 20 years, while Fitzgerald has been there for six and DeCastro for eight.

Fifty-five other volunteers help out at the pantry, and they do it for one reason — they want to help feed people who are hungry during the holidays and for the rest of the year.

"We have people working here who have all different backgrounds," Pierson said. "But it all works. We're all here to do the same thing."

Pierson said he got into volunteering about 20 years ago, when he was working at a major bank in the area.

"It was a time when I saw a lot of people being let go," he said. "I felt like volunteering was a way I could help."

These days, Pierson is at the Marshfield Food Pantry three or four days a week, along with Fitzgerald and DeCastro.

"I retired about seven or eight years ago and I was looking for something to do," DeCastro said. "I didn't have millions of dollars to give but I knew I could do this. I always figured it would just be a nice thing to do."

Fitzgerald said she has always been involved in charitable endeavors, noting she has helped organizations like Marshfield Community Christmas and Toys For Tots.

"There's just an absolute need for this," she said of her food pantry experience. "People are going hungry right in our back yards."

"People don't expect that people would be starving in a place like Marshfield," DeCastro added. "This is considered an affluent town but it happens here."

It also happens around the rest of the South Shore and around the country. According to Marshfield Food Pantry Director Roni Lahage, 10 percent of Americans are living under the poverty level.

On Friday, DeCastro, Fitzgerald, Pierson, Babcock and Smith were all doing their usual preparations before the pantry opened. They were putting out loaves of bread on tables and stocking the shelves with an array of canned foods. They were even arranging bouquets of flowers for patrons to take home, which all of them agree is a treat for people who visit the food pantry.

"On top of food, we try to give people flowers," DeCastro said. "Many of the people who visit here would rather have the flowers than the food."

But the job of a volunteer goes well beyond just preparing for an early-morning rush. Pierson explained he and the others pick up food during the week from places like the Greater Boston Food Bank and local businesses. He added Fitzgerald often makes trips to pick up food at Shaws and Roche Bros. Supermarket, while DeCastro goes to places like Trader Joe's and Panera's.

All the people who visit the Marshfield Food Pantry, or "neighbors" as the volunteers call them, benefit from all of these trips.

DeCastro added volunteers at the pantry also manage to make in-home deliveries to people "several times a month."

Fitzgerald said there is a lot of work involved in being a volunteer but noted when all is said and done, the effort is well worth it.

"I see people come in here who are at the absolute end of their rope," she said. "It has taken them weeks to get the courage up to visit the food pantry. It's amazing to see the relief on their faces when they leave here, some of them crying tears of joy. That's why I do this."

Pierson said he recently saw one 70-year-old woman, who is on a fixed income, visit the pantry. He explained senior citizens are one of the groups most affected by hunger because they often cannot afford the price of utilities, prescription medicines and food altogether.

"I enjoy when we can help the elderly," DeCastro said. "They deserve all the help we can get them."

"We also see a lot of single mothers," Fitzgerald added.

Babcock remembers one instance where a mother of four children came into the pantry, explaining that her husband, who was in the nuclear science field, had lost his job.

"She was in tears because she had to ask for help," Babcock said. "We told her to take as much as she wanted and she was thrilled. It just goes to show that going hungry can happen to anyone and it's hard to come forward when you're in that situation."

Pierson said while all the volunteers do a wonderful job at the pantry, he noted businesses around town, schools and other individual donors have been great.

"We get a lot of support from the merchants here in town and from residents," he said. "We owe a lot of our success to them."

Pierson said other people's generosity has always inspired him and has kept him motivated as a volunteer.

Fitzgerald said the "camaraderie of the team" at the food pantry is all she needs to keep her motivated.

"We've got a nice, core group," DeCastro said. "We stick together. Any volunteer job has its ups and downs. There are times when you're happy and there are certainly times when you can get frustrated."

Pierson said one of the most frustrating things is that the hunger problem seems to be getting worse.

"We helped 163 families in November, whereas we usually see about 130," he explained.

Volunteer Chris Fitzgerald finds it rewarding to see how food pantries assist community members. She said it is never easy to seek help, but once people do there is a great sense of relief.

Ever since she was a little girl during the Great Depression, BJ Babcock has volunteered at soup kitchens and food pantries.

EDITORIAL

Winter's here

According to the calendar, it is still officially fall – but we know better.

As the mercury dips, skies cloud up and the snow starts to fly, winter is definitely here, albeit a little early.

So we have some decisions to make. We can grin and bear it; we can complain and utter a ton of "bah humbugs" during the holiday season; or we can decide to appreciate the colder months with all accompanying weather they may bring.

We're often at work here at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a Sunday, tackling myriad emails and other correspondence in the quiet that is at polar opposites to the busy weekdays when we are catching up with many of you on news about family and what's going on in the community.

From our perch on the second floor of the Hingham Journal Building on South Street we can see the Hingham Community Center. On this past Sunday afternoon we saw a little boy – who couldn't have been more than two or three – making snow angels on the ground with his Dad, while is Mom snapped away with a camera.

It was a cute scene and reminiscent of times that all of us can remember. When we were young – we all loved the snow! Snow meant sledding, building castles, and on rare occasions, no school.

While this was going on across the street, our police scanner was sounding in the background. Busy dispatchers fielded numerous accident calls in Hingham, Cohasset, and other towns. Sunday's snow and accompanying icy road conditions caused mishaps and no doubt had those motorists cursing winter.

According to police, no one was seriously injured in any of the accidents, which is something to be grateful for. Police remind us to slow down and to be aware that four-wheel drive vehicles do not stop any faster than traditional passenger cars when roads are slippery.

Winter, with its cold, ice and snow, is just a fact of life here in this part of the country, but as New Englanders we love to hate our weather. At times, we are chronic complainers.

Here at the Mariner, we would like to do our bit to turn that around especially during the holiday season. We can certainly use Hingham's Keith Jermyn as our role model when we start our complaining about winter. (We wrote an article for Hingham this week about Keith's homecoming).

Consider his most recent experience being deployed in Iraq over the last 10 months. In addition to battles and all that war demands of a serviceman, he had to contend with incredible heat and unrelenting sand. He tells of how the sand was intolerable. There was no escaping it.

So when he walked outside at Logan Airport last Thursday afternoon and suddenly was hit with a wave of cold air, he took it all in. The cold temperatures and chilly air made him feel good; grateful in fact to be back in New England and home with family for Christmas.

Makes us stop and think that a New England winter may not be so bad after all. It eventually gives way to spring.

Take a few precautions this season and hopefully we'll all cope better. Wear your boots, so you don't slip while walking; drive more slowly – and think about making a snow angel in your back yard no matter how old you are! We won't tell!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Spinnaker staff asks for apology

TO THE EDITOR:

We are writing to correct a major inaccuracy in a commentary written by Lee Jenkins titled, "Teachers' Salaries Don't Tell The Whole Story", published on page13 of last week's Cohasset Mariner. Ms. Jenkins "crosses the line" herself when she made false and baseless accusations against the Spinnaker journalists and staff. Had Ms. Jenkins done a little "investigative reporting" herself, she would have discovered that the teachers have gone out of their way not to influence the students at all.

In fact, one reason the Spinnaker published the article in question, was because the teachers have refrained from discussing these issues with the students. Moreover, when we approached Mr. Magnussen on our own initiative about students joining the teachers in a walkout on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Magnussen discouraged us from doing so, stating that he "did not want the students to be seen as having been influenced by the teachers."

Furthermore, we know of no teachers who have "requested to be paid for writing college recommendations." In fact, they constantly reminded us to give them all college forms by Dec. 1st so that they will be able to help. Do you really think teachers are so money hungry they want reimbursement for writing recommendations? No! As our headline stated, it's also about "Time and Respect." Teachers deserve respect for the extra time they put into making sure Cohasset students have the recourses necessary to succeed after high school.

Clearly, Ms. Jenkins does not attend CHS and therefore has no clue; she is yet another community member in the dark with respect to the fact that CHS teachers go above and beyond the basic obligations of their seven hour day.

The Spinnaker staff takes pride in contributing to a free press and would never be used as a "tool of the teachers" or anyone else. Ms. Jenkins owes an apology to the Spinnaker staff.

Safety tips for dealing with winter

SAFETY COUNTS

POLICE CHIEF JAMES HUSSEY

With winter fast approaching, the Cohasset Police Department would like to remind our residents to consider the following Winter Safety Tips:

Dressing for cold weather:

• Remember that entrapped, insulating air, warmed by body heat is the best protection from the cold.

• Wear several layers of loose fitting, lightweight clothing.

• Wear mittens (they work better than gloves).

• Wear a hat.

Avoid Overexertion:

• The strain from cold temperatures and heavy labor such as shoveling, pushing a car, or walking in deep snow may cause a heart attack in older and less physically fit individuals. Don't try to do too much!

Winterize Your Vehicle:

• Be prepared against the first real blast of winter. Avoid automobile gas line freeze-ups by keeping your tank greater than half full at all times.

• Make sure that your car has adequate anti-freeze.

• Make sure that your tires have good traction and are inflated at the right pressure.

• Make sure that your heater and defroster work properly.

• Make sure that your battery is carrying a full charge.

• Make sure that you have a good snow brush and ice scraper.

• Make sure to clear all snow and ice from your car so you can see properly.

Carry a Winter-Survival Safety Kit in your vehicle:

• Bring along blankets and a bright piece of cloth to tie on your antenna if you become stranded.

• Extra clothing.

• Flashlight with spare batteries.

• Non-perishable foods such as candy bars or canned goods.

• A shovel, sand, tow rope, and jumper cables

At home, do the following before Winter becomes a reality:

• Make sure to do (or have done) preventive maintenance on your heating system.

• Seal any windows that you suspect allow cold air into the house with caulking or plastic.

• Include a home safety kit that includes extra non-perishable food, medicine, and a battery operated radio.

• Keep a flashlight and extra batteries handy.

• Keep candles and matches handy for extended periods of electrical loss.

Other safety issues to consider during the winter:

THIN ICE

Children and adults love to walk, run and skate on ice. Unfortunately, we often underestimate the risk. Remember, it takes many, many days of extreme cold to freeze water to the thickness safe to walk on. Avoid locations where the water depth is above your waist. It is always best to do these activities with others. If you see someone who has fallen through the ice, try to reach them with a tree branch, rope, or shovel, anything that you can place between you and the victim, and have them grab onto it. You want to avoid falling through the ice. All the while you should be yelling for someone to call 911.

POWER LINES DOWNED

Another common winter hazard is power lines being downed due to ice storms or high winds. Wires should always be considered LIVE AND DANGEROUS and must be avoided. Please notify the Fire Department and electric company immediately.

CHECKING ON A NEIGHBOR

It is also a nice gesture to check on the elderly person living next door or nearby. This helps make sure services are provided for those in need.

CARBON MONOXIDE DETECTORS

Make sure your home has a carbon monoxide detector. If your home already has a carbon monoxide detector, make sure the batteries are fresh.

ELECTRIC SPACE HEATERS

Space heaters need their space! Keep combustibles at least three feet away from each heater. When buying a heater, look for a thermostat control mechanism and a switch that automatically shuts off the power if the heater falls over. Heaters are not dryers or tables! Don't dry or store objects on top of your heater.

Police Chief James Hussey wants to acknowledge the assistance of Sgt. Bill Quigley and Officer Christy Tarantino in preparing this report.

Drainage and other timely train matters

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

A week ago Tuesday we had a chance to review Greenbush happenings with the Selectmen. For those of you who missed the discussion we'll take a minute to recap and add a little bit of new information.

Last summer we wrote about the MBTA inadvertently failing to replace one of two culverts under the railroad right of way between the two Spring Streets. There were two culverts, a 30 in. very visible culvert and a smaller, lower 12 in. culvert near the larger culvert. Both of these culverts carry the waters of Stewart Brook that drains Ellms Meadow and meets James Brook in Jacobs Meadow behind the Town Sewer Plant. The MBTA had replicated the larger, higher culvert but crushed the lower smaller culvert. This reduced our ability to drain Ellms Meadow so that the grass can be trimmed in preparation for the winter skating season.

As we write this article, the MBTA is digging up the culvert that they installed last summer and positioning a new culvert that will be at a lower level. This work should be finished in a week, or so. However, with the superabundance of rain we've had this fall along with the inability to properly drain Ellms Meadow the DPW has not been able to trim the vegetation before skating. It will be touch and go whether there will be skating this winter. We'll just have to see if the DPW will be able to get into the field for its annual "haircut."

Beechwood crossing

By now most of us have had a chance to drive over the new Beachwood crossing. It is really quite nice and smooth, as railroad crossings go. However, several problems have developed, principally with the storm water drainage. We are finding that under severe rain conditions, storm water is entering private driveways rather than going into the catch basins. As you can easily guess, this is not a good condition — especially as the freezing weather approaches. We have spoken to numerous MBTA and Cashman Balfour Beatty staff about this situation. The only information we have received is that "they are studying the situation." We keep pressing the project for a solution. We will not let this issue rest until we get it solved.

It will be touch and go whether there will be skating this winter. We'll just have to see if the DPW will be able to get into the field for its annual "haircut."

King Street

Now to the Northern end of Town. The Lower King Street crossing construction has been underway about 2 months and they have yet to actually start building the crossing itself. The severe rains and the lack of drainage in the immediate area have caused some localized flooding and have brought the construction to a snail's pace. The area is literally a sea of mud and replacing water and telecommunication services under the rail bed has been extremely difficult. Only after the utility services are all relocated, can the actual construction begin. The most current MBTA Look Ahead Schedule shows this area to be complete by the end of December. We seriously doubt that this completion date is reasonable. Based on the projected and actual schedule at Beechwood Street, we would expect this to be one to two months longer. This could take us to the end of February. We'll just have to see how long it does take.

Pleasant Street

Two weeks ago, we received "official" notification from the MBTA that they might begin work on the Pleasant Street crossing as early as next week. This work would be centered in the area from Henry's Root Beer to behind Good Fella's Pizza. It will also include some work in the Town Parking Lot on either side of the crossing. The initial construction will consist of relocating utilities under the track area and the two fire hydrants on either side of the crossing. The merchants in this area are understandably nervous about construction in this area occurring just before Christmas, their busiest selling season.

We arranged for an update meeting with the area business owners and building owners on Thursday, Dec. 8 [after the Mariner went to press]with a Cashman Balfour Beatty representative. We would much prefer, as would the merchants, that this construction be postponed until after the new year. By the time you read this we will have had this meeting and updated the best information available directly "from the horse's mouth." Since this construction will necessitate more detours, we are very concerned that the detour signage give clear directions how to reach the merchants on the other side of the construction.

Interestingly, the Town of Cohasset has sent official technical comments to the MBTA, pertinent to this construction area, as permitted under the Mitigation Agreement. They are apparently beginning construction before they have responded to our technical comments. Our position is that construction should not start until we have received responses to these comments.

HEALTH NOTES

It's up to you to manage your medications

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Now that we've spent considerable space and no little energy in trying to get a substantial fraction of the population to sign up for a drug plan, it seems only reasonable to provide a bit of guidance on the use of drugs.

In Philadelphia, there is a medical activist, Herb Dennenberg, who writes for several publications and is a senior member of the Institute of Medicine at the National Academy of Sciences among other things. He has written a short handbook on the use of drugs called the Consumer's Guide to Medications. It tends to run on, but would be beneficial reading if medicines take up a goodly part of your time and energy. Actually, the handbook points out 16 rules for dealing with medicines. Moses managed to limit himself to 10, for all human endeavor, which shows you how complicated the medical profession is nowadays. Herb's list has been condensed and some of his accompanying thoughts added.

Medications may adjust your body functions in subtle ways, which can provide a net improvement in your health, which come with a price — diligence, discipline, vigilance, and a requirement to manage your life in a manner that may not be necessary were you not required to manage your medications. Many of us lead rather unstructured lives and the discipline required to manage a drug program properly is, at minimum, painstaking, and sometimes quite strenuous.

There follows, a brief summary of the rules generally considered to be necessary to avoid serious consequences if you are taking medications regularly – or even occasionally, if they contain warnings.

• RULE ONE. Recognize that all drugs have adverse effects, that all drugs are dangerous, and that in a real sense all chemical compounds which pass into your body in inappropriate amounts are poisons.

Many of us lead rather unstructured lives and the discipline required to manage a drug program properly is, at minimum, painstaking, and sometimes quite strenuous.

• RULE TWO. Make sure your doctor and pharmacist know everything about your medical conditions and everything you're taking so they can properly advise on possible drug adverse reactions, drug interactions, and other potential drug-related problems.

• RULE THREE Carry a listing of medications you take.

• RULE FOUR. If you agree to take a drug, make sure you understand exactly why, how and how long you are to take the drug. Understand both the risks and the benefits of any drug you decide to take.

• RULE FIVE. Watch out for adverse reactions to drugs and other drug-related problems.

• RULE SIX. Don't be pushed into taking a drug by doctors, pharmacists, drug ads or anyone or anything else. And similarly, don't push the doctor into prescribing.

• RULE SEVEN. Once you're on a drug, keep checking with your doctor whether you can stop taking it.

• RULE EIGHT. When you get the prescription filled at your pharmacy, double-check your understanding with the pharmacist.

• RULE NINE. Do some checking on your own. Don't just depend on the package insert that comes with the drug, a document prepared by the drug manufacturer and then approved by the FDA. These documents only give the makers side of the story. Important sources for more balanced information are: Graedon's "People's Pharmacy" and the Health Research Group's "Worst Pills, Best Pills." For example, the latter catalogs 160 pills and other medications you should not use and 296 safer alternatives. Another excellent critical source is "The Medical Letter," an independent, non-profit publication that offers unbiased critical evaluations of drugs to health care professionals. See www.medletter.com Other authoritative sources of information are on the Internet. For example, the Food and Drug Administration maintains a site at http://www.fda.gov which provides information on drugs, drug recalls, and other developments. Online and local pharmacies also provide information on drugs.

• RULE 10. Don't forget these rules when you're in the hospital, a nursing home or other institutional setting. All of these places are required to tell you what you are taking and why, and should do it without question.

• RULE 11. Be on the look out for ways to save money. Often, the generics are made by the same companies that make brand-name products. Consult with your doctor and pharmacist to be sure the generic is the equivalent. However, some equivalents may not be covered under your insurance. Perhaps the best way to save money is to avoid drugs if possible, and to get off of them as soon as appropriate.

• RULE 12. Throw away old drugs when they are no longer necessary or when their shelf life expires.

Remember that we're not talking about some doctor's decision, some nurse's decision, or some pharmacist's decision It's your decisions. Select your doctor and pharmacist so you have professionals who will treat you as the decision maker and who will act and explain accordingly.

Capital gains tax

POLITICAL NOTES

GARRETT BRADLEY & BOB HEDLUND

In the year 2002 the Legislature, over both of our objections, made a bad decision. To correct this mistake, the Legislature tried to retroactively bill 44,000 taxpayers.

Many people in our districts have recently received a retroactive capital gains tax bill relating to assets they sold in the early part of 2002. We wanted to take a moment to explain what happened and let you know that we have been fighting against this since the start.

...we thought it unfair to change the rules in the middle of the year and have two different tax rates in the same calendar year.

In 2002 the Legislature passed a tax bill to raise revenue. Part of the bill changed the capital gains tax rate to 5.3percent effective May 1, 2002. This meant that people who sold assets from Jan. 1, 2002 to April 30, 2002 paid a lower tax rate. The law at the time gradually lowered the capital gains tax rate depending on how long a person held the asset. People who then sold assets from May 1, 2002 through Dec. 31, 2002 paid a fixed rate of 5.3 percent no matter how long they held that asset.

We both voted against that tax bill. One of the reasons being that we thought it unfair to change the rules in the middle of the year and have two different tax rates in the same calendar year.

Several affected taxpayers took the issue to the Supreme Judicial Court in a matter known as the Peterson case and won. The Court stated that you couldn't have two tax rates in the same year. The options then were to move the date of the change forward to Jan. 1, 2003 and refund those taxpayers who paid the fixed rate. This would cost the Commonwealth approximately $250 million. Option two was to move the tax rate back to Jan. 1, 2002 and retroactively bill the people who paid the lower rate.

Astonishingly the Legislature, over our objections again, initially chose the later option. The Department of Revenue was forced to send out bills to people to collect taxes on capital gains from three years ago. As a kicker, the bills included interest on money they did not owe until the recent court ruling.

This was by far the most outrageous thing we have witnessed in our time in the Legislature. When the issue came up every Republican and some Democrats joined us and voted no. It took the tax bills going out for the leadership to finally sit down with the Governor and work out a reasonable resolution. The Governor had proposed moving the date forward and rebating taxpayers over three years so as not to absorb the entire $250 million in one fiscal year. The agreement reached last week allows for the state to rebate taxpayers over four years. Once this is passed and signed by the Governor (which may have actually taken place by the time you read this) the Department of Revenue will notify those taxpayers who received a bill to disregard it.

We thought it important for you to know that we have stood with you, the taxpayers, on this issue from the start. Taxing people retroactively is just plain wrong.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, represents the Third Plymouth District and state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, represents the Plymouth-Norfolk District. Both districts include Cohasset.

Town-owned parcel wins conservation restriction

ous Town Meetings, funds have been appropriated to allow the water department to buy land in the town's watershed and noted earlier in the evening, Town Meeting voted to allocate up to $750,000 for additional land purchases for that purpose.

Quigley explained there is a delicate ecosystem at work on the town-owned parcel. She said the property is full of wetlands. A home in the nearby Red Fox Lane neighborhood has a turtle that comes back each year to lay its eggs, she said.

"Mother nature has given us a parcel of land to protect our water supply and all we need to do is protect that," she said. "There really isn't a lot of land left in this area to protect Peppermint Brook."

However, the board of selectmen, which has been working to develop the Cook Estate, was unanimously against the article. Selectman Gary Vanderweil said while the board was very sympathetic to the goal of the article, placing a conservation restriction on the land could impede progress for the Cook project.

Vanderweil explained the town is trying to meet the need for 55-plus housing in town. "In order to do it, we need the flexibility to build with the town land," he said. Vanderweil said the board had also tried to strike a compromise with the proponents of the article that would let the town intrude onto the town land by perhaps 50 to 100 feet to allow more flexibility for developers. However, after much discussion during a meeting held just before Town Meeting, proponents decided to keep the article on the Warrant as originally written.

Vanderweil said the town-owned land could have been used for a number of different reasons. He said with the wastewater issues the site has faced, the town land could have served as a leaching field for the Cook property, or perhaps some units could have been built on the town land to allow wastewater to leach into the Cook property. "We don't know if it'll be needed or necessary, but we don't want to preclude it," he said.

While the majority of the advisory committee was against the article, member Roger Hill spoke up in its defense. "This is in the watershed," he said, adding both encroaching on the town-owned land with development or installing a leaching field in the area are both bad ideas.

Conservation commission chairman David Farrag said his board voted 6-0 in favor of the article and echoed Hill's sentiments that this is an easy way to continue the ongoing efforts to protect the water supply. "We're going to spend close to $1 million to protect land. We own this," he said.

Water commissioner Nathaniel Palmer and his board also nanimously supported the restriction.

Richard Brooks, 68 Nichols Road, who was also a sponsor of the article, pointed out the article asks selectmen to impose a conservation restriction on the property, but does not direct them to do so. In other words, the selectmen are given a direction to proceed in, but it is ultimately the board's decision as to whether it wants to comply. Brooks asked voters to approve the article and "Rely on the selectmen to do the right thing."

Selectman Rob Spofford took offense to the comment and said the board of selectmen takes Town Meeting authority seriously and works very hard to fulfill the wishes of the voters and it should not be suggested they would not follow through with the conservation restriction application if that is what the town wants.

He also said the article assumed the conservation commission wouldn't do its job in making sure any development is environmentally sound before it goes forward.

Spofford said he would happily vote to put a restriction on the remainder of land which is not necessary for development after building plans are in place, but thought to impose that restriction now with so many questions up in the air is unnecessary. He pointed out the town-owned parcel is appraised for $1 million.

Karen Quigley, one of the proponents of article 14, explains how placing a conservation restriction on a piece of town-owned land on Sohier Street will benefit the town's water supply. She said by keeping the land as open space, Peppermint Brook, which runs into Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply, will be protected. The town voted in favor of the article and the land will remain in its pristine condition.

Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St., was opposed to the article and said there was no need to place a restriction on the land because the town already owns it. "This is like asking the town to protect itself from itself," she said.

Former selectman and conservation commissioner Ronnie McMorris, 89 Doane St., agreed and said the town needs to try to maintain flexibility. However, she said the 2003 Special Town Meeting already voted on the town-owned parcel when it approved the purchase of the Cook land to be marketed and sold with the town-land to build senior housing. She asked whether the previous vote would have to be taken back in order for the new vote to place the restriction to take place.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said no article can direct the board of selectmen, it can only give authority. Therefore, the articles both give the board of selectmen the authority to carry out an action, but that action is not required.

Jim Shipsky, 58 Doane St., supported the article and urged Town Meeting to vote in favor of the restriction. He said under the town's bylaw, 10 units are allowed per acre. He said all tolled, the Cook Estate is 19 acres, which means up to 190 units could be built on the site. "For someone to speculate they'd (developers) need more land makes no sense. It is an unknown developer and an unknown project," he said.

Shipsky said the monetary value of the land is not what is most important. "It is not a commodity, it's a wonderful woodland community with lots of wildlife. If the beings who live there now could have a voice tonight, they'd say 'protect us'." Shipsky's comments were met with applause.

Quigley gave one last push in favor of the article and said the town should take a look at the selectmen's track record. "Who has gotten us to where we are today? Whose judgment? Can we trust their judgment?" she asked. She said the land can have a purpose other than to be developed, and that is "to protect our water supply."

A voice vote was taken which was too close to call. A subsequent hand count showed 128 residents voted in favor, while 51 voted against the restriction. The motion passed by the required two-thirds vote.

Compromise not reached before Town Meeting

The board of selectmen held a meeting at 6 p.m. Monday, prior to Town Meeting. Proponents of article 14 Karen Quigley and Jim Shipsky spoke with the board about the possibility of drafting a compromised article at the 11th hour.

The two said they would be willing to entertain an amendment to the motion which would allow a developer to encroach 50 feet along the property line between the two parcels. That way, developers would be able to maintain a buffer, yet build up to the property line, which could help maintain flexibility for the project.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said he was afraid if the board dismissed the offer to include a buffer and the article went ahead as printed, the possibility could exist for the article to pass and the town would lose its option to use the town-owned parcel at all.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he would be willing to make the commitment to not build on the land and come back in the spring to return any unused portion of the town's land as conservation land. However, he said he did not feel limiting flexibility was in the town's best interest, or that the town should be in any rush to place a restriction on the land. Selectman Michael Sullivan said changes to the article were coming in too late and thought it should be left off the Warrant until the spring.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said the town should begin looking at the possibility of developing on the Cook land on the opposite side of Sohier Street, as well as potentially meeting with the Community Preservation Committee to discuss funding for the affordable units. No compromise was reached.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on three roll calls and local senators' votes on two roll calls from recent sessions. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

PROPER DISPOSAL OF NEEDLES (H 4176)

House 152-0, approved an amendment to a bill legalizing non-prescription, over-the-counter sale of hypodermic needles and syringes to anyone over age 18. The bill is aimed at reducing HIV and hepatitis transmission that is spread through the sharing of needles by illegal drug users. The amendment requires the state's Department of Public Health to establish a program for the safe collection and disposal of the used needles. Amendment supporters said that this safeguard would ensure development of a reliable way to dispose of the needles so that they are not a danger to others. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment).

PENALTY FOR IMPROPER DISPOSAL OF NEEDLES (H 4176)

House 152-0, approved an amendment imposing up to a $5500 fine for a first offense and $15,000 for subsequent offenses on anyone who improperly disposes of used needles in costal and inland waters or on public and private property. Amendment supporters said that these fines would discourage the improper disposal of these dangerous needles. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment).

REQUIRE PUBLIC NOTICE PRIOR TO CHANGING MASSHEALTH (H 4284)

House 153-0, approved and sent to the Senate a bill requiring the state to conduct public hearings and give adequate notice prior to making changes that restrict medical coverage under MassHealth— the state's program that provides health care for nearly one million low-income and disabled persons. Supporters said that it is important for the state to inform people about changes that may make them ineligible for certain benefits. They noted that many MassHealth recipients are disadvantaged or elderly and often do not keep track of these changes. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

$125,000 FOR YOUNG MOTHERS (S 2279)

Senate 38-0, approved an amendment increasing from $100,000 to $225,000 funding for the Future for Young Parents Program and the Just a Start House. Amendment supporters said that these two programs serve 68 metropolitan Boston cities and towns and offer educational assistance and parenting skills to pregnant and parenting teen mothers. They noted that Just A Start House is a transitional facility that is located on property that will soon be sold by Boston's Archdiocese. They argued that the additional $125,000 would help with the one-time expense of relocation of the facility. (A "Yes" vote is for the $125,000).

ADDITIONAL BENEFITS FOR VETERANS' DISABILITY RETIREMENT (S 2035)

Senate 37-0 approved, House approved on a voice vote and Gov. Romney signed into law a bill giving the state, counties and local communities the option of providing up to $300 annually in additional retirement benefits to their employees who are veterans and are on accidental disability retirement because of a work-related injury. The measure provides an additional $15 for each year or fraction of a year that the person worked up to a maximum of an additional $300 annually. It also allows the raise to be retroactive to the date of the veteran's retirement. The raises would only be effective if adopted by the governing body of the applicable retirement system. Supporters said that the state, counties and cities and towns, should have the option to provide an additional retirement benefit to these veterans who have a work-related disability and have previously served the nation. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

REPEAL RETORACTIVE CAPITAL GAINS TAX- Senate President Robert Travaglini and House Speaker Salvatore DiMasi announced that the Legislature plans to repeal a controversial retroactive capital gains tax. Gov. Romney and the House Republican leadership have long supported the repeal but until last week the Democratic leaders had resisted it. The Legislature in 2002 raised the capital gains tax but exempted all taxpayers who incurred capital gains prior to May 1, 2002. The Supreme Judicial Court (SJC) ruled that the mid-year change was unconstitutional because it taxed taxpayers at different rates during the same year. The SJC ruling made January 1, 2002 the effective date. The Department of Revenue recently notified taxpayers who sold their homes or stocks between January 1, 2002 and April 30, 2002 that they must retroactively pay the higher capital gains tax. Reaction and outrage by taxpayers who received the bills seemed to lead to the Travaglini and DiMasi announcement that they support changing the effective date of the raise to January 1, 2003. This change would also require the state to refund an estimated $250 million to taxpayers who paid the higher capital gains tax rate during the last eight months of 2002. The two leaders said that they support refunding the tax over a four-year period.

BUSINESS NOTES

Music Circus announces new corporate gift certificate program

Just in time for the holidays, South Shore Music Circus has inaugurated a new corporate gift certificate program designed specifically for local businesses and organizations. The program offers a bonus $100 Music Circus gift certificate and a corporate Inner Circle Club membership for every business purchasing $750 or more worth of gift certificates to the Music Circus. Gift certificates may be purchased in any denomination with a $25 minimum, and can be customized to meet the needs of any business and recipient – customers, colleagues, vendors, employees, friends, or family. Music Circus gift certificates retain 100 percent of their value with no expiration date.

"Our new corporate gift certificate program offers local businesses a gift option that will appeal to everyone on their holiday list," said Music Circus general manager Vincent G. Longo. "Recipients can use their gift certificates any time because there's no expiration date, and choose from a wide range of performers every season, from country to comedy, rock to blues, pop to folk, and even shows for children."

Each gift certificate purchased helps the Music Circus, a non-profit organization operated by South Shore Playhouse Associates, to help other not-for-profit arts and education organizations. In the past decade, SSPA distributed more than $2 million to such non-profit groups throughout Cape Cod and southeastern Massachusetts.

To purchase corporate and consumer gift certificates call 781-383-9850, e-mail: holidaygifts@themusiccircus.org, fax 781-383-9804, or visit www.themusiccircus.org.

Through Dec. 23 for the holiday season, the Music Circus box office will be open for customer sales from noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, as well as noon to 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 3, 10, and 17.

SCHOOL BUDGET

School committee member Rick Flynn speaks in defense of the budgetary actions taken by Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh during a discussion on article one. Flynn said while the superintendent is getting "bad press" for her decision to use left-over fiscal 2005 funds to pre-pay fiscal 2006 first-quarter out-of-district special education costs, he sees the action as fiscally responsible. For story, see page one.

Water commission given the go-ahead for land purchases

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Articles 7 and 8 together gave the water department the go-ahead to spend up to $750,000 to purchase land in both Scituate and Cohasset. All the land to be acquired will protect the town's drinking water supply.

The articles were amended just prior to Town Meeting to include the dollar amounts. The cap to purchase land in Scituate was set at $250,000 for two parcels of land while a cap of $500,000 was set for the 13 parcels in Cohasset.

The water department has used funding from prior Town Meetings as well as the Cohasset Land Conservation Trust, and water department funds to purchase land to protect the watershed in the past. These articles allow the water department to use the funds it already has to make the purchases. In other words, the money was previously approved, but the water department came back to Town Meeting to receive approval of the parcels themselves.

Both the board of selectmen and advisory committee approved the articles as amended. Advisory committee member Pat Waters said his board believed the articles were "consistent with the water commission's efforts to protect the watershed, and we thank them for their acquiescing to our thoughts," referring to the amendment to include the spending cap. Some members of both the advisory board and selectmen were uncomfortable not limiting the spending for the purchases.

Regarding the land in Cohasset, water department chairman Glenn Pratt said it applied for and received a $373,000 grant for watershed protection from the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs. Because so few applications were submitted, there is money left over at the state level and the water department will be submitting another application before Dec. 20. The money must be spent by June.

Roger Lowe, 100 Beach St., asked what the likelihood is the Cohasset land could be developable and a potential source of revenue. Pratt said two of the lots are acceptable buildable lots, but five are deep in Whitney Woods, and not likely to be developed. Other parcels are contiguous with land previously acquired by the water department, and essentially bring all the pieces together. "When we're finished, we'll have nearly 300 acres controlled by the water department," Pratt said.

Both articles passed unanimously.

Saturday discussion on 14th Amendment

Following the very successful inaugural meeting of the Cohasset Political Forum in November, the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will host a new session Saturday morning, Dec. 10, at 9:30 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset. The topic this week is "The Right to Privacy — Does it Exist? Should it Exist?" a timely topic as new new justices for the U.S. Supreme Court are approved.

The format will be a roundtable discussion, and the suggested pre-reading materials are the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and the U.S. Supreme Court decisions in Griswold v. Connecticut and Roe v. Wade. These readings may be found at the Democratic Town Committee's Web site, www.cohassetdems.org under the "Forum" section.

This is an opportunity to discuss serious matters with interesting people. Come for great company and stimulating conversation. Admission is free. For more information, call Agnes McCann, chairman, 781-383-0222 or visit www.cohassetdems.org.

Last game and last win for senior Skippers

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

Editor's Note: Due to an editorial error, this story chronicling the Cohasset High School football seniors' experiences in their final game did not run in last week's edition as intended. It is running in its entirety this week.

The annual Thanksgiving Day Game versus rival Hull was a lot different than last year's game; this time it was the final one for the Skippers seniors.

Ever since these seniors attended and played football for Cohasset High School, they play a game against the Hull Pirates on Thanksgiving morning. This game is of great importance to the entire town and displays the rivalry between the two towns.

"For any senior, their last game is very important and for us it's especially important because it's against Hull," said senior captain Nick Arment.

One can clearly see what this game meant to the seniors and especially to Arment.

"I wanted to play my best game ever, because I only played one series last year," he said.

In last year's Thanksgiving game, Arment suffered a very serious leg injury, keeping him out for the rest of the season and the basketball season.

When senior Rob Murley kicked the game-winning field goal with only 17 seconds left in the game, nobody was as happy as the seniors on that field in the freezing cold New England weather.

"It was the most fun and exciting game, and really fun to play," said Arment after the game.

Fellow senior captain Dan McCarthy was quite aware of the importance of the Skippers' win.

"The season will be looked at more successfully because we beat our rival Hull," he said.

Not only was this the seniors' last game, but it was also head coach Tony Rolfe's last game. Both Arment and McCarthy mentioned how they were thinking about getting a win for their coach.

After the game, McCarthy talked about his thoughts going into the game.

"I felt a mixture of everything, but it was really about it being Rolfe's last game," he said.

For all of the seniors, Rolfe was their coach for four straight years. They all wanted a win, not just for themselves but for their coach and teacher.

After the game, Arment described what was going through his mind throughout the season and after the game.

"I wanted to have fun in my last year, and since there was such a good team bond and everyone was friends, it made the season a lot more fun," said Arment about the season and team chemistry.

Also, Arment said he had a sudden realization that the season was actually over while taking team pictures following the game.

"I was so overwhelmed with all the excitement about winning such a close game it didn't hit me right away" he said.

Skippers' first line, defensemen to carry the way this season

One game.

That is all that stood between the Cohasset High hockey team and a Div. 3 state tournament berth last season. Despite a valiant effort over the last two weeks of the year, the Skippers finished 9-11, on win short of the postseason.

Coming into the new campaign, head coach Ben Virga is optimistic things will be a little different this time around.

"If the way we played in the last five games last year is there for 20 games this year, I feel pretty good about our chances of making the tournament," said the third year coach.

"If the way we played in the last five games last year is there for 20 games this year, I feel pretty good about our chances of making the tournament."
Head coach Ben Virga

"I think they have the potential to carry us like the Harwich line did for them last year," said Virga, referring to a Rough Riders line that finished 1-2-3 in the South Shore League scoring race last year and led the team to the league championship. "Those three are going to be our main source of offensive power."

Lanzillotti came on strong at the end of last season, scoring five goals in the Skippers' final six games. Virga says it is Lanzillotti's defensive skills in the middle of the ice that could

Johnny Maher wins sportsmanship award

Johnny Maher, son of Michael and Ellen Maher of Cohasset, won the prestigious James McInnis Sportsmanship Award from Scituate-Cohasset Youth Football and Cheerleading.

This annual award is given out to a graduating 8th grader, selected by his coaches. Maher is the first Cohasset resident to win the award.

"John has an exceptional understanding of the game, in that it's as much strategy as strength," said head coach Mike Stewart. "I think what impresses me the most with John is the amount of confidence and focus that he plays with. It doesn't matter if we are winning by 14 points or losing by 14 points, John plays with determination and complete composure.

"John's teammates have the utmost respect for John's abilities and his toughness. John shows up for practice and games with the same attitude and work ethic and through it all, win, lose or draw, he has fun and makes it fun for others. In four years, as John's coach, I have never heard a negative word come out of his mouth and have witnessed many times John offer positive support to a struggling teammate.

"There is no doubt in my mind that John will have a positive impact on the Cohasset High Football program in the near future."

Weymouth's Kendall plays in front of family and friends

By Nick French
NFRENCH@CNC.COM

More than a decade ago, Pete Kendall was tearing up football fields across the South Shore starring for Archbishop Williams as he was being courted by every major college program in the country. He is still tearing up football fields, but now he's doing it for a living.

Kendall has carved out a sound niche as an offensive lineman in the National Football League and has even exceeded some of his own expectations in his 10th season in the league.

"I don't know if I saw myself playing this long," said Kendall, who has also played for the Seattle Seahawks and Arizona Cardinals. "It's been a good run. Ten years is more than anyone can expect to play."

Kendall took the field at Gillette Stadium this past Sunday as the starting center for the New York Jets, returning to area where he grew up for just the second time in his career.

His first trip to Foxboro came last season in his first year with the Jets when both teams were 5-0, and fighting for first place in the AFC East.

"Last year was a much bigger game and I had never played in Foxboro," he said.

He does acknowledge the second trip to Foxboro still had some meaning because, "it's not just another city."

Kendall got his start in football playing for the Weymouth Pop Warner teams. He played for the Tigerhawks in his first year of organized football, and that team went undefeated.

"I thought we were supposed to win every game," he said. He has since learned that is obviously not the case.

In his time with both Seattle and Arizona, winning games was not a regular occurrence.

The lack of winning in his professional career has been disappointing, particularly the disastrous 2-10 season the Jets are currently enduring. He has only made the playoffs in two of his 10 years in the league.

"I've not won as much as I would have liked," he said.

But he knows it is a privilege to play in the NFL and he's come a long way since his Pop Warner days.

Back then he played every position, and of course his favorite was quarterback. He knew he was talented but never considered himself to be the best.

"I don't know if I ever thought I was the best player on any of the teams I played on," he said. "I had very good coaching, my father was an offensive lineman in college. I was lucky I had a very good introduction to the game."

He continued to play football as he got to high school at Archbishop Williams. As a sophomore he was an option quarterback, but he got hurt in preseason and didn't play at all that year.

The following season, having grown into his body more, he was moved over to tight end and defensive end. Despite the position change he didn't start on the varsity as the season began.

After a slow start, and a .500 record after a few games, the Bishops head coach opened up all the starting jobs for competition again. Kendall seized the opportunity and broke into the starting lineup. Over the final games of the season he began to make a name for himself and local colleges in the area began to take notice.

"It kind of took off from there. By the end of the year I started getting letters from I-AA schools, and playing college football seemed realistic," he said.

Between his junior and senior year came the biggest leap. He put on roughly 50 pounds and by the third or fourth game of the season scholarship offers were coming from everywhere.

The recruiting circus took its toll on him a little bit, especially as the process wound down to two schools, Notre Dame and Boston College.

"The constant phone calls wore me down, and the enormity of the decision weighed me down," he said.

He didn't let that affect his game though as he dominated the offensive and defensive fronts that season earning him All-America accolades, as well as Massachusetts, and New England player of the year honors.

After the season it was time to choose a college, and while Notre Dame's Lou Holtz was making personal visits, newly hired BC coach Tom Coughlin was calling Kendall from the locker room after his Giants won Super Bowl XXV.

Ultimately he chose Boston College, partly because of Coughlin, but also because he was unsure where football might take him.

"I was impressed with Tom and I thought he would turn the program around. But I didn't know what was going to happen to me," he said. "I felt if things didn't work out football-wise BC would open doors down the road."

He red-shirted his freshman year to bulk up, because there weren't too many 230 pound lineman playing in the Big East. He also learned from his offensive line coaches, he had three of them in his career at BC, but all three eventually moved on to coach in the NFL.

After a rough start in his first game the following year he quickly blossomed and a career in the NFL became a possibility.

"After that I thought I had a chance and thought if 'I can put together another year like this then I have a chance,'" he said.

During that season he also had one of his best moments on the football field when the Eagles knocked off top-ranked Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind. when David Gordon nailed a 43-yard field goal as time expired.

"That cemented that rivalry," he said.

Kendall was on the field protecting the line for the game winning kick that ended the undefeated season and national title hopes for the Fighting Irish.

"It was remarkable, the euphoria , and the joy. It seemed like all the BC fans there found their way onto the field. It was the only time in my career I can relate to Jim Valvano, and was looking for someone to hug."

He flirted with entering the draft early after his junior year, because he had already graduated. That particular draft pool was filled with linemen, and he received mixed signals about where he might end up being drafted.

In the end he chose to stay for a fifth season at The Heights, one he doesn't regret. Off the field he met his future wife during that final year at BC. During the season he avoided injury and earned his second first team All-Big East selection. For his efforts he was drafted in the first round by the Seattle Seahawks the following spring.

"It worked out well for me," he said. "Looking back it was a very good decision."

After stops in Seattle and Arizona he has found a home with the Jets the past two seasons. He is glad to be much closer to home where he can see his wife and his three young children.

"I do get back here most weeks," he said. "Herm (Edwards, the Jets head coach) has treated me great."

This year he switched from his natural position of guard to center when an injury to the Jets All-Pro snapper Kevin Mawae ended his season in October. He says the transition hasn't been as smooth as he would have liked. He did the same thing once in Arizona, but it was easier then because he had been in the offensive system for a few years, and the decision to switch came in the off season.

This year the Jets have a new offensive coordinator to learn from and Kendall is making the adjustments on the fly as the man in charge of the blocking schemes before every play.

"I'm trying to learn all the nuances of the job," he said. "At guard everything happens fast, but it's even faster at center, but I am getting more help there."

He says snapping the ball is the most obvious difference, but starting each play with only one hand free is also an adjustment.

Kendall is under contract for three more years with New York, but in the ever changing dynamics of the NFL's salary cap era, he knows he could be looking for a new team again at the end of this season. He would like to play a little longer and reach a Super Bowl. But the location of a team will play a factor in who he suits up for next as he enjoys being a short flight home to his family.

"I'd like to play a few more years, but a lot depends on who for and where that is," he said. "We'll see, I'm not counting on anything more than this year, but I certainly feel like I'll play next year."

When he does decide to hang it up he'll have a remarkable career to look back upon.

Patriot League basketball update

The boys Patriot League basketball season kicked off this past weekend with great hoop action versus Taunton at the CMHS gym.

The 6th graders are coached by Matt Salerno and Bill Allard. On the roster is Jamie Faber, Robbie Mahoney, Christian Allard, Jay Salerno, Patrick Kearney, Charlie Neaves, Patrick MacCormack, Morgan McCarthy and Chris Lunde.

Patrick MacCormack scored the first basket of the season off a great defensive steal. Midway through the first half, Cohasset lead 8-0. Defensively, Cohasset played solid. Hands were up, shifts were made and opponents were boxed out.

The boys in blue executed offensively as well, displaying great patience and ball movement. At the half it was 20-6, Cohasset.

The second half was equally impressive as every boy on the team contributed offensively and defensively. There was no letup. Cohasset won 32-18. Jay Salerno led the scoring with 9 points, followed by Patrick Kearney with seven and Robbie Mahoney with six.

The 7th graders took to the pine next. Coached by Ed Seksay, Joe Campbell and Jay Monaco, they were looking to take up where they let off last year, at the top of the league. Jack Carrier, Derek Youngman, Ben Campbell, Mike Monaco, Justin Liburd, Eric Wasel, Sam Richardson, Alex Harper, Gabe Seksay, and Kelby Pontes fill out the roster.

The 7's started strong, winning the tip for a feed to Jones for the first bucket. Offensively, the boys feel back into the groove of good ball movement and strong positioning under the bucket. They remained in control for most of the first half.

At the 4 minute mark, Taunton took the lead 17-16. Taunton was able to convert second chance shots and stop the powerful Cohasset offense, but only for the briefest of moments. At the two minute mark, Cohasset took the lead and never looked back.

The boards were controlled by big men Kelby "KJ" Pontes, Gabe Seksay and Eric Wasel. Jones, Campbell, Youngman controlled the point position while Monaco, Carrier, Liburd and Richardson filled in the wings creating offensive opportunities with great off ball movement. Cohasset won 52-41.

The 8th graders finished the afternoon of hoop action. Coached by Joe Campbell and Mike Kearney, the roster includes John Kearney, Will Wise, Robbie McCunney, Johnny Maher, Jeff Charles, Kevin O'Connell, Taylor McQuade, JoDi Rosano, Brendan Doonan and Dan Sullivan. Chris Brown and Dana Valentine were absent from the game.

Taunton scored early and was up 7-0, before Will Wise put Cohasset on the board. Cohasset struggled in the first half, committing fouls and turnovers. The found themselves down 24-9 at the half.

Coach Campbell had very simple instructions for his squad: "Find someone and put a body on him. Play more physical." And that they did. Cohasset battled back with slowly and surely.

Offensively they were ignited by a Kearney power drive to the hoop and a three pointer by Wise. Fast break opportunities began to be taken advantage of. Maher and Doonan controlled the defensive boards, Sullivan and McQuade were mixing it up down low as well.

O'Connell, Rosano and Charles worked the wing positions. McCunney led the charge at point. But their second half power surge was not enough to overcome their first half deficit, and the 8's ended up on the short end of a 45-31 score.

Come support the boys Patriot league on Sunday, Dec. 11 at CMHS. The action starts at 1 p.m. with the 6th graders. Check out www.cohassetbasketball.com for all local hoop schedules.

Cohasset will need to account for the loss of goalie Stefan Parnell, who transferred to a private school. The Skippers have broken in two new goalies during the preseason: senior Brendan Barrett and be the junior's strongest asset.

Hopes on ice

Straughn led Cohasset in goals last season and finished second in points behind older brother Teddie. One of the team's three senior captains, Straughn could be in for an even bigger year.

"He's in better shape this year, and he played a high level of hockey over the summer," Virga said. "I think Brian is primed for a great year. He's one of those guys that if he can get position in the slot and can get a shot off, it's going in the net."

Smith, younger brother of senior captain and defensemen Brandon Smith, has been the biggest revelation of the preseason thus far, earning a spot on the top line in his first year of high school hockey.

"Andrew is just an incredibly talented player," Virga said. "His ability to pass the puck and find Brian in the slot made it obvious to put them together."

Playing the second line to start the season will be junior center T.J. Kennedy, flanked on the left by junior Chris Davis and senior captain Mark Bouchard on the right (Bouchard, Straughn and Brandon Smith will all have the 'C' on their sweater). Kennedy is a good player down low, Davis is one of fastest skaters on the team, and Bouchard is a first line caliber player when he's on top of his game.

Virga says his second line's speed is its biggest strength.

"I think that line is going to fly and create some goals with their speed," he said.

The third line will have a familiar look to it with sophomore center Pat Doonan and junior right wing Corbin Faber, both of whom were stalwarts on the third line last year. They will be joined by sophomore Alex Goetz, a speedster playing his first year of high school hockey after sitting out last season.

"They all move the puck real well," Virga said of the third line. "As the year goes on I think they will get more and more scoring chances."

The coach says he plans to use all three lines on a regular basis.

"We're planning on rolling out 1-2-3, 1-2-3 all year," Virga said. "With a lot of other teams just going 1-2, we hope get our first line in a lot of favorable matchups. We're going to avoid a situation where our top players are gassed in the last 10 minutes of the game because they've gone out every other shift."

Cohasset will also sometimes trot out a fourth line, which will be centered by freshman Paul Pozniak. Virga has three more freshmen to rotate in and out of the wing spots on that line: Sam Bilbo, Andrew Bell and Thomas Lemaire.

Virga says this is the best skating team he has had in his three years at Cohasset.

"We skate very well," he said. "It's fun to watch. I think we will just continue to get better as the season goes along and we get more confidence and play more."

Three talented players will lead the Cohasset blue line. The best of the group may be junior Conor Holway. Already one of the best defensemen in the league, Holway has come back this year stronger and better, says his coach.

Cohasset has a tough non-league schedule and will face some challenges in the league from Abington-East Bridgewater, Norwell and Harwich-Provincetown. Among those non-leaguers are two games with Pembroke and South Shore Voc. Tech, and one each with Blue Hills and Westwood.

"Conor looks like King Kong out on the ice," Virga said.

Brandon Smith and sophomore Charlie Czerkawski complete that trio of top defensemen, a group that Virga will rely a lot on throughout the season.

"There aren't going to be many shifts where at least one of those three aren't on the ice," Virga said.

Making the switch from forward to defense is senior Dan Sullivan, who will also likely see regular ice time. To open the season at least, Virga says he will pair Sullivan and Holway together.

"Dan works hard and he skates really well," Virga said. "He makes up for his lack of experience at the position with his speed and his drive to get back on defense."

Cohasset opens the season with nine defensemen on the roster, with depth being provided by senior Melissa Crowley-Buck, junior Ben Massotta, sophomores Frank Wheelwright and R.K. Quebec, and freshman Ian Lyster.

One of the most interesting developments to watch this season will be in between the pipes. Last year's two netminders, Stefan Parnell (transfer) and Brendan Michaud (graduation), are gone.

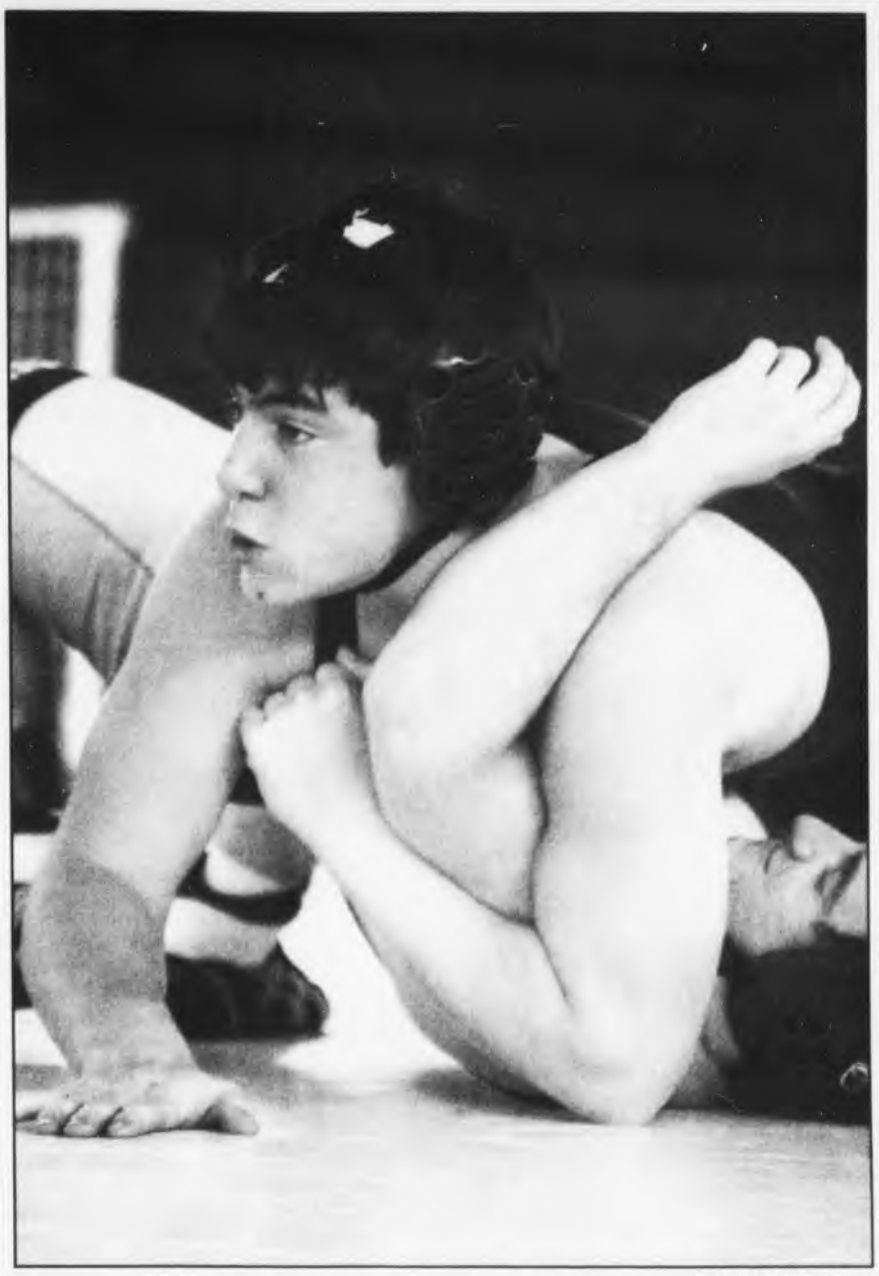
In their place are two rookies: senior Brendan Barrett and freshman Jonny Wade.

Barrett's story is an interesting one. He has never played organized hockey, and was the team manager last season. In many of last year's practices, Barrett would suit up and play in net, with an eye toward being Parnell's backup this season.

Now, Barrett finds himself in a position to get a lot of starts. Virga says Barrett's teammates have truly rallied around him in the preseason.

"He's a really popular kid on the team," said the coach. "He's a very coachable, likeable kid."

The same could be said for Wade, who has played defenseman coming up through the youth ranks, but was approached by Virga in the offseason about becoming a goalie. He played the position in a summer league, and both he and Barrett appear to be getting better by the day.



"It's been amazing to watch their progress," Virga said. "By the third practice, they had gained so much confidence. They have both looked great in scrimmages."

Barrett and Wade will both see their share of action, with Virga's hope being that at least one of them gets hot down the stretch to help lead the team into the postseason.

Getting to that point will be a challenge, as Cohasset has a tough non-league schedule and will face some challenges in the league from Abington-East Bridgewater, Norwell and Harwich-Provincetown. Among those non-leaguers are two games with Pembroke and South Shore Voc. Tech, and one each with Blue Hills and Westwood.

Cohasset will also be hosting its first annual holiday tournament over the Christmas break. On Dec. 30, Blue Hills will face Westwood at 5:50 p.m., followed by Cohasset and East Longmeadow. On New Year's Eve, the consolation game will be played at 11:50 a.m., with the championship game to follow.

Virga says he hopes the tournament will be well-attended by fans throughout the town.

Last game and last win for senior Skippers

FROM SKIPPERS, PAGE 19

For all of the senior Skippers, getting a win in their final game was very important, especially since it was against town and school rival Hull. For some of these Skippers it was their last football game ever, while some will play in college.

But to all of them, one message is obvious: you guys played some great football for this town.

COASTAL STARS

Squirt A

The Squirt A Coastal Stars overcame the absence of three players and earned a workmanlike, 6-0 win over a strong Duxbury team. The shutout was the result of a team effort by the Stars.

Connor Maher was superlative in net. Tom Dixon and Jonathan Spitz shifted from forward to defense, and, with the strong play of regular defensemen Andrew Geddes and Jared McCrystal, and effective backchecking and forechecking by the Stars' forwards, contributed heavily in stifling the Duxbury attack.

The Stars had great scoring chances through the first period. Will DeCoste was denied on a break initiated Tom Dixon's feed. Dixon later stole the puck at the point and found Terrence Doonan in front, but the shot was stuffed. Peter Bent nearly tipped in Jonathan Spitz' shot from the point, and Andrew Geddes' backhander off a rush down the left side was denied.

Will Golden broke the ice with 1:01 left on a rebound of Jared McCrystal's shot from the point. The Stars continued their aggressive play into the second. With 6:68 left, Jack Kueppens forechecked for a steal in the left corner, drove to the net, and slipped it into the right side.

About a minute later, Will Golden broke through center ice and charged the net. His shot was saved, but Terrence Doonan put the rebound away. Connor Maher frustrated Duxbury with some great saves, none better than a cherrypick on a shot headed top corner that seemed to take the wind from Duxbury's sails.

With 1:34 left, Terrence Doonan rushed on net from the right side. The shot was blocked, but Will Golden grabbed the rebound, swept around the back of the net, and tucked it inside the right post. The Stars added their fifth early in the third when Peter Bent alertly passed cross-ice to Michael O'Brien, who broke in and drilled it from the left side. O'Brien later fed Tom Dixon for a shot from the left that was saved.

Will DeCoste outwrestled a crowd for the rebound and final tally. The Stars continued to skate hard to the buzzer and kept Duxbury off the scoreboard.

Squirt C2

In a tough game against the Pembroke Squirts, the Coastal Stars came up two goals short, for a 3-1 loss. The first period had a blazing goal by Tom Pilat, assisted by Cameron Mastrangelo. Wings Jake Moore, Tim Cavanaro, Dan Cronin and David Craig applied the pressure for another goal, but Pembroke answered back and the period ended even.

Several scoring attempts in the second period by Mats Nelson and Derek Benson unfortunately found their way to the Pembroke goalies glove. The Stars hard skating defense of Jake Denton, Joe Proctor, Brodie Jackisch, Sam Asnault and Jack Conlon many times kept Pembroke from breaking free. Eventually another goal found its way into goalie Hugh Healey's net.

In the third period the Stars continued their attacks on the Pembroke goal but to no avail.

Squirt B-1

Coastal Stars Squirt B-1 improved their record to 12-0 in an exciting match-up against hard-shooting Westwood on Saturday, December 3rd. Stars' goalie Connor Lemieux and Westwood goalie Will Ribas get credit for keeping the score tight in one of the most action-packed games to date. Ribas fended off 23 shots on goal in the first period alone, a pace that continued throughout the game.

Dave Cataldo, Jimmy Connors and Joe Lasko took the stage in the first period, waking up the Westwood defense with rapid-fire shots on goal. The stellar Stars' defense of Patrick Graham and Max Montgomery gave the Stars multiple shooting opportunities, but Westwood scored the first goal of the game.

Nick Mulrey and Cataldo worked the puck around until Cataldo was able to flip a clean shot past Ribas into the upper left corner with 5 minutes left in the period. The next Stars goal came off the stick of left wing Nate Morse at an improbable angle from the boards deep in the corner. Meant to be a pass to Lasko who was waiting out front, the puck sailed into the net just behind the post, putting the Stars ahead 2-1. Aidan Beresford passed a beauty to Joe Lasko a few minutes later and Lasko fired it through the 5-hole for a 3-1 lead. Another great series of blocks by Connor Lemieux rounded out the first period.

In the second period, Robert Gargano picked up the pace while Montgomery and Graham kept the blue line clear. Several beautiful saves by Brendan Crane kept the Westwood forwards from capitalizing on breakaways. Things were heating up quickly and another penalty on Westwood gave the Stars another 5 on 4. Cataldo skated down with the puck but lost control when a Westwood stick hooked under his arm. A quick Mulrey, skating alongside picked it up and flipped it right into the net increasing the Stars' lead to 4-1.

Montgomery followed with an end-to-end skate and a shot that looked sure to go in, but the lightening-quick Westwood netminder came through with the block. Westwood responded with a beauty of a pass up to a waiting winger, but Lemieux denied the shot again. Another quick shot at Lemieux slid past, narrowing the score to 4-2.

The second period continued to get more physical as the Westwood skaters turned up the pressure. Crane took a beauty of a shot from the blue line which was stopped by Westwood, who then took the puck down to fire three rapid shots at Lemieux which were all denied.

Morse was sent to the penalty box giving Westwood the power play. Connors, Cataldo and the ever-present Chris Cohen took turns controlling the puck, aided by Montgomery who seemed to be enjoying his stint on defense. With less than two minutes left in the period, Westwood also sent a player to the box setting up an exciting 4-on-4 with bodies and sticks flying. When the buzzer sounded on the 2nd period, the Stars were up 4-2, but Westwood was not about to give up.

With both teams working the puck, the third period continued at fever pitch. Montgomery, Lasko and Beresford all passed the puck well, setting up Cataldo and Morse to further bother the Westwood defense. The quick stick of Jimmy Connors slipped the puck past the goalie on a rebound and the Stars were up 5-2. With eight minutes left in the game, a Westwood forward skated it down all the way for what looked sure to be trouble, but once again the small but mighty Connor Lemieux made a fantastic diving save, protecting the lead.

Not to be denied, Westwood score again with just five minutes left in the period, then scored once again as a creeping puck slid through the legs of Lemieux closing the gap to 5-4. Seconds later, Lasko fired one past Ribas to put the Stars back up by two. Seeing their best chance at bringing down the undefeated Stars, Westwood continued to shoot hard and the entire arena was buzzing with excitement. Mulrey and Connors shot again, but Ribas covered.

With 32 seconds left in the game and the score 6-4, Westwood pulled the goalie and the determined Westwood forwards went to work in the Star's end. Cataldo broke up a pass, and with just 13 seconds left in the game fired the puck out of the zone from inside the Stars' blue line. It seemed like watching slow-motion as the puck slid silently into the open net, putting the final score at Stars 7, Westwood 5. Hats off to both teams for a game well played.

Mite A

The Coastal Star Mite A team, led by head coach Tim Leahy and tournament GM Dan Rice, barely got to finish their apple pie before they headed to the North Shore to take on three of the most feared hockey programs in the Commonwealth.

In the opener against Winchester, the Stars dominated the first period, but a stingy

Winchester team held the Stars at bay with the period ending deadlocked at 0-0.

Back stopped by Liam McHugh in net, the Stars turned up the heat and "Buzzsaw" Jimmy Farren broke things open! Then Tucker Ambrose, Justin Fein, Kyle Bowman, Adam Benson and Jo Jo Carbone took charge and it was a scoring frenzy in the second period....and the Stars never looked back!

The Defense looked like the "Iron Curtain" as the foursome of James Hussey, Gunnar McKenzie, Declan Leahy and Kal Maier stepped up and never gave Winchester any room in the zone.

The final period saw more of the same with the defense pitching in with goals by McKenzie, Hussey and the final tally by Maier to cap the 14 – 2 win.

In Game two, the stars faced off against the Medford Mustangs. Once again, Liam McHugh did his best Patrick Roy imitation to shut down the Mustangs. The defense played as if they were possessed and took the Mustangs out at the blue line. Hussey and McKenzie were a force to be reckoned with as they continuously jumped into the play. Maier and Leahy left the Mustangs shaking out the cobwebs as they stepped up and played tough defense while pinching in the offense zone.

The offense took over when Jeff Powers, Ben Rice, Curtis Golden and Colby Comeau got thinks going to create mayhem in the offensive zone.

Then Justin Fein broke things open and the Stars streaked to a 5 – 2 victory...not bad for two games in the same day!

Back up to Medford for game three to take on Winthrop. This was a barnburner with Liam McHugh being called to the test and responding with his "Vezina" type style shutting the door on the Winthrop team.

After a first period goal by Justin Fein, the Stars and Winthrop played tough two way hockey until Fein sent Maier away on a break away and he buried a "Five - Hole" goal to gain a 2 – 0 lead...then look out! Tucker Ambrose buried the next two goals to provide ample breathing room. The fore-checking of Bowman, Rice, Golden, Powers and Comeau kept the Winthrop Team hemmed in while the defensive squad of Carbone, Hussey, Leahy, Maier and McKenzie sent Winthrop packing. The 4 – 0 win was clinched.

Don't pull out the leftovers yet....we are on our way back to Medford for the Finals!

Opening to a standing room only crowd at Loconte Arena, the Stars took on the Winthrop Vikings for the Thanksgiving Tourney crown. Justin Fein opened the scoring with a laser from the corner after a pinpoint pass for Gunnar McKenzie. Jeff Powers buried the first of three goals (hat trick) and gave the stars some breathing room.

Adam Benson then took a perfect cut pass from Colby Comeau to widen the gap...but here come the Vikings! Two quick goals made it a 3 – 2 game in the 3rd period. After a defensive huddle led by Coach Hussey - Leahy, McKenzie, Hussey, Carbone and Maier shut the Vikings down. Once again, stellar goaltender Liam McHugh did the rest, turning away shot after shot. Jeff Powers and Justin Fein added three more goals to finish the scoring and it's only fitting that the Turkey Day crown will be coming home to the South Shore!!

Break out the Pumpkin Pie, it's time for dessert!

Well that's it for this edition of School News, and don't forget to be thankful for the extended period of beautiful weather we had this Fall, because now it seems that Winter is here and won't be going away any time soon.

'Living' art gallery

Working closely with Arts Department Chair, Mary Charwat, the middle-high school Arts Boosters applied for and received a 2006 Cohasset Cultural Council grant. The Cohasset Cultural Council is a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council. The art gallery will grace CMHS walls and will consist of picture frames that will enable the art teachers to change student work that is being displayed, hence its nickname, "living" gallery.

Until now there has not been the capacity to professionally exhibit the work of so many talented students. It is also hoped that this will provide a forum for visiting local artists who lecture Cohasset students and might also wish to display their pieces here. Look for this exciting installation in the coming weeks!

Arts Boosters web site

Cohasset MHS Arts Boosters announce the launching of the group's new we bsite. The community is invited to visit: www.cohassetartsboosters.com to get the latest information regarding the fine and performing arts created by Cohasset students.

Christmas in Finland

By BARBARA RADCLIFFE ROGERS
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

HELSINKI, Finland -- Every Finnish schoolchild knows that Santa lives in Lapland, inside the Arctic Circle. But you don't have to go there to find Christmas in Finland.

The country's Independence Day kicks off the holiday season -- in a stroke of irony that is not lost on the Finns, they won their independence from Russia on Dec. 6, the day for Russia's patron saint, Nicholas. All over Europe, St. Nicholas Day signals the beginning of the Christmas season, but here it is also an occasion for people to gather in churches, halls and public squares to hear concerts that always include Finnish composer Jean Sibelius' rousing "Finlandia."

As part of the holiday celebration, villagelike Christmas markets spring up beginning in early December in the center of the cities of Helsinki and Turku.

This capital city's annual St. Thomas Market lines the Esplanadi, the main boulevard, with a double row of red tents. Step inside each one to find a brightly lit shop filled with beautiful homemade gifts: woodcarvings, knit hats and mittens, gingerbread, wrought iron work, dolls, candles, wooden toys, fur hats, blown glassware or jars of shimmering lignonberry jelly.

Brightly painted wooden puzzles are shaped as animals and fish. Velvet-smooth wooden cooking utensils including spatulas are carved in graceful flowing shapes from richly grained woods. Cups are formed from gnarly tree burls, and tiny wooden animals add a Nordic touch to zipper pulls. Little red elves made of wool perch everywhere.

An inside venue for a craft show in these Nordic climes, where it's daylight for about six hours a day this time of year, is the annual Women's Christmas Fair at the Wanha Satama, across Helsinki's harbor. The variety is astonishing, from stacks of beeswax candles and creamy Finnish honey to elegant painted silks, hobby horses, finger puppets, fashionable knitwear and cheery little red-hatted elves, all created by Finnish women.

Designs reflect Finland's varied ethnic traditions of Russian, Swedish, Karelian and native Sami crafts from Lapland, as well as the sleek modern designs in the form-follows-function ideal for which Finnish design is famed.

Take the short train ride to the old capital city of Turku, where the Christmas market is held in little cabins that line the Old Great Square on the riverfront.

Wool is a favorite medium here with hand-knit socks, mittens, hats, scarves and sweaters in traditional intricate designs and striking brilliant solid colors. Wool is used in more frivolous ways, too. Fluffy unspun fleece forms snowy-white angels, animals, dolls and elflike figures. Wool fleece is felted into slippers, hats, toasty boot liners and cheery red apples to decorate trees or wreaths.

At Turku's Luostarinmaki Handicrafts Museum, visitors watch artisans create traditional crafts in workshops set in a museum village of original homes from the early 1800s -- sort of a Finnish version of Sturbridge Village. Their woven wire candleholders, straw wreaths, round wooden boxes and birds made of shaved wood are for sale in the museum's shop.

Helsinki holiday lights

Kylamaki Museum of Living History in Kurala, just outside of Turku, recreates a farmhouse Christmas from the 1950s, its kitchen full of fresh-from-the-oven goodies and a tree decorated in homemade yarn elves and straw stars. On weekends craftsmen gather to sell mittens, pottery, woodenware, straw animals, traditional spice cookies and unique trivets made of woven vines.

In addition to shopping opportunities, the Christmas markets in Finland offer a chance to sample local food and drink. At least one booth will always have a steaming cauldron of glogi, a tasty blend of red wine, spices, raisins, almonds and black currant juice that warms you to your toes. At other booths Finnish sausages (makkara) or fresh-caught herring sizzle over glowing coals. Bakery stands sell crusty bread sticks, honey cakes, fancy fruit breads and gingerbread cookies. Visitors can graze their way from booth to booth.

This time of year, streets everywhere in Helsinki are arched in white lights, and shops try to outdo each other with color-themed window displays that are works of art. Customers leave stores toting smart shopping bags of solid red (the popular Finnish brand Marimekko) or snowflake (Stockmann department store) so pretty that travelers repacking their purchases for the trip home carefully flatten them in the bottom of a suitcase to reuse as wrappings under their own Christmas trees.

If you go

Getting there: Finnair (www.finnair.com) has special December packages. Tour firm Continental Journeys (800-601-4343, www.continentaljourneys.com) offers Boston departures from $749 that include roundtrip air, three nights' hotel, breakfasts and one lunch in Helsinki and a city tour.

Staying there: Hotel Kamp (www.luxurycollection.com/kamp) is a fancy hotel right on the Esplanadi. Special promotions often bring this creme-de-la-creme hotel into more budget-friendly range. Scandic Grand Marina (www.scandic-hotels.fi) is on the other side of the harbor, reasonably priced, and a stunning renovation of a 1913 warehouse (it's steps from the Women's Christmas Market).

Eating there: In Turku, dine along the lamp-lit river on elk, venison, Arctic char and wild salmon, at Rocca (Lantinen Rantakatu 55) or Linnankatu 3 (Linnankatu 3A). In Helsinki, just steps from the market is one of Finland's finest restaurants, GW Sundmans (Etelaranta 16). Or try Russian blinis and bear at Saslik (Neitsytpolku 12).

Unicorn Singers to perform in 'Fiesta Navidad'

The 27th Christmas Concert of The Unicorn Singers with Margo Euler will be held at First Parish Church in Cohasset on Sunday, Dec. 11 at 4 p.m. Tickets are $15, $10 for students, and can be purchased at First Parish by calling 781-383-1100, as well as at the door.

The Unicorn Singers will transport the audience to Mexico this year to celebrate 'Fiesta Navidad' with carols and customs from south of the border.

The Unicorn Singers will transport the audience to Mexico this year to celebrate 'Fiesta Navidad' with carols and customs from south of the border. The well-loved annual visit of this choral group – their 27th consecutive holiday concert at First Parish – features 'La Fiesta de la Posada' by Dave Brubeck, a cantata that tells the familiar Christmas story. It will be exuberantly accompanied by a Mariachi Band of both professionals and students from Weymouth, organized by teacher and marimba player John Duff. A children's chorus from Hingham's Congregational Church led by Unicorn Singer Ed Bartholomew, will also contribute to the program. Amy Martin of First Parish will sing the role of Mary. The concert will dramatize the Posada custom of traditional petition for lodging as the time of Mary's confinement draws near. Christmas Carols for the audience sing-a-long will have a decidedly Latin feel, accompanied by Mariachi trumpets, guitar, and marimba. The celebration will end with the traditional piñata for the children.

The Concert is appropriate for school-age children comfortable with attending concerts.

Holiday happenings at Our World Children's Museum

At Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, 100 Sohier St., Cohasset, December is all about holidays around the world. Throughout the month visitors can learn about the different Santas around the world, and about Christmas in Japan, Hanukkah and Kwanzaa. Those who check out the Biodiversity 911 exhibit can make a seasonal craft; or help create a crafty Holly Wreath for the museum and make one to take home

The museum is open Wednesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $5 per person, free for members. For more information call 781-383-3198 or visit www.ourworldcgdm.org.

Caroling on the Common

Once again, First Parish, Cohasset's Unitarian Universalist church, is sponsoring an old and well-loved Cohasset tradition. Caroling on the Common, on Saturday, Dec. 17. Participants will assemble at First Parish's Parish House on 23 North Main St. between 3:45 and 4 p.m. The event is open to the public. Carolers will circuit the Common, serenading selected homes and downtown businesses as weather permits. At approximately 5 p.m., everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies.

This is a community gathering for young and old, especially families with school age children. Exceptional singing voices are not required; caroling books will be available, but participants are encouraged to bring flashlights. For more information or to donate cookies for this old-fashioned holiday get-together, call Sandy Bailey at First Parish 781-383-1100 or Woody Chittick 781-383-3215.

Slip, sliding away Sunday on town roads

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

For five motorists, Sunday morning might have been better spent staying at home wrapped up in a blanket with a good book rather than venturing out on the road.

There were a total of five accidents on Cohasset roadways, police said. Two of the crashes occurred at the same spot just minutes apart. At 9:30 a.m. a car coming down Pond Street toward Spring Street slid over an embankment. While the tow truck was there, another car slid into the initial vehicle.

A few minutes earlier at about 9 a.m., a car was unable to stop and hit another vehicle on Brook Street in the village.

At 10:15 a.m., there was another accident on South Main Street due to icy conditions. Another vehicle slid off the road at 8:50 p.m. on Jerusalem Road.

No one appeared to be seriously injured in the mishaps, police said.

No one was cited in the Cohasset accidents, meaning police felt road conditions were major contributors to the accidents, Hussey said.

An informal area poll (conducted by Hingham police) put Hingham, with a total of 13 accidents on Sunday, tied with Quincy for the most snow-related crashes that day. Cohasset was second with five; Scituate and Weymouth each had one.

The first snow of the season can bring on accidents because people haven't driven in snow for seven to eight months, Hussey said.

No one was cited in the Cohasset accidents, meaning police felt road conditions were major contributors to the accidents, Hussey said.

He also warned that with weather conditions like those on Sunday, four-wheel drive won't help motorists stop any faster than traditional passenger cars.

"Ice is a different ball game," Hussey said. "People should go slower than the normal speed limit and allow plenty of distance between cars."

Lie #2: If you transfer assets you have to wait 36 months to qualify.
(There is no such rule.)

Lie #3: You have to give your assets away to protect them.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

THE RODNEY DANGERFIELD OF ASLs

While the telecoil ("T" coil) is the most common assistive listening device (ASL), it gets little of the respect that it deserves. This simple and easy-to-operate option can be incorporated into all but the smallest of hearing instruments to make hearing more intelligible on hearing-instrument-compatible telephones. Telecoils can also be used in settings that provide an induction loop assistive listening system, such as in lecture halls and theatres. A telecoil is a tiny coil of wire around a core that induces an electrical current in the coil when it is in the presence of a changing magnetic field. When switched on, it can be used in place of the hearing instrument's microphone to "hear" a magnetic signal that represents sound.

Today's innovative hearing devices like the telecoil are more capable than ever of enhancing the ability to hear sounds that once were inaccessible to the hearing impaired. Is your hearing not quite what it once was? Do you have a family member who is retreating into loneliness because of hearing acuity? Please call us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 781-337-1144, to make an appointment for comprehensive hearing services from a skilled, highly trained Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist. We're easy to find at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg in Weymouth, with a second office in Abington.

P.S. Telecoils can also pick up electromagnetic signals coming from neck loops that are plugged into the earphone jack of FM and infrared receivers.

Laurie Liddell helps Maggie Czajak, 8, wrap her gift in the "Secret Santa" room in St. Stephen's church during the Village Fair Saturday. The Secret Santa room allows children to purchase gifts and wrap them themselves to keep them a "secret" until Christmas. Proceeds from the gifts will go toward the Appalachia Service Project, which sends volunteers down to regions of Appalachia to make badly needed home repairs.

The Rusty Skippers play Christmas songs in the First Parish Meeting House during the Village Fair last Saturday. The fair is sponsored by the churches on Cohasset Common every year, and features not only musical entertainment but crafts, gifts, homemade food items and a chance to visit with Santa Claus himself.

Alix White and Cindy Dedes find time to catch up and enjoy each other's company during the book sale at St. Stephen's during the Village Fair Saturday. The book sale benefits scholarships for needy children to attend the Barbara C. Harris summer camp.

Nancy Robertson of Scituate and Lisa Dunne of Cohasset help make delicious cinnamon buns in the "Swedish Bake Shop" at the Unitarian Parish House during the Village Fair Saturday. All tolled, there were 750 buns baked throughout the day. Proceeds will go toward the church and its outreach program as well as the many charitable organizations it works with, including Project Linus, Wellspring in Hull, and Father Bill's homeless shelter.

Grace Braun, 3, and her brother Sam, 5, decorate their creations at the craft table in the Second Congregational Church during the Village Fair Saturday.

Caroline Coffey gives a great big hug to her children T.J., 6, and Virginia, 4, after they gave her the gifts they wrapped themselves in the Secret Santa room at St. Stephen's church during the Village Fair Saturday.

3A traffic lights

Commercial project eyed

By Samantha Brown

The planning board may see more traffic lights on Rte. 3A. With a host of developments coming down the pike on 3A in the new Greenbush main station and traffic problems already plaguing motorists, members of the board at minimum would like to see a traffic study completed for the entire Scituate to Hingham stretch of the road.

Planning board member Peter Pratt told selectmen Tuesday the board is about to take on the "first commercial development in the town's history ... developers have come forward with plans to build what is being called the 'Rockies Lane shopping center' between the Stop & Shop building and Sunrise Crossing on the northern end of Rte. 3A."

Pratt said until now, commercial development in town has required his board to consider

Committee is on a power trip

Looking at wind turbine

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Making changes toward a more "green" source of power can be a double bonus when there is a cost-savings incentive. Since April 2005, the town's alternative energy committee has been looking at various ways to make those changes possible, and is currently taking a closer look at harnessing the power of the wind.

Voters at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting agreed to form the alternative energy committee to investigate ways for the town to conserve energy as well as generate renewable energy. Currently, the committee has seven members, including Mike Bliss, Rod Hobson, Robert Kinscherf, Luciano Lauretti, Jim Shipsky, Mimi White, and Andrew Willard.

Taking a cue from the neighboring town of Hull, the energy committee has been in contact with the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative which has started a renewable energy trust. By working with the trust, Cohasset could potentially install a wind turbine that would help save money on energy in the long run.

The alternative energy committee can only make recommendations to the board of selectmen, and it is up to the board to act on what is recommended. To that end, the energy committee set up a meeting with a representative from MTC to present all the necessary information for selectmen to get a feel for whether turbines might be an alternative for the town.

Kristen Burke, wind siting and project manager for MTC, presented selectmen with a plethora of information regarding wind turbines Tuesday. She explained while it does cost money for towns to install turbines, and it is difficult to judge exactly how Cohasset's Elizabeth Deveney penned a Christmas play that premiers next week at the Devanaughn Theatre in Boston.

Curtain rises for local playwright

Staging show at Boston venue

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For years she was known as one of the three Deveney sisters who brought out the talent in local children for six weeks during the summer Children's Drama Workshop. But Elizabeth Deveney is branching out — her work is now being performed on stage in Boston.

On Thursday, Dec. 22 and Friday, Dec. 23, "A Bucket Full O' Christmas Cheer," which Deveney both wrote and will star in, will be performed at the Devanaughn Theatre (the entrance to the theater is in the back of the Piano Factory, 791 Tremont St.).

The play, which is set in Boston, is somewhat autobiographical. Just as Deveney sat down to write "A Bucket Full O' Christmas Cheer," the main character in her play is a playwright struggling to come up with an idea for the perfect new Christmas show. Feeling the

Shipped out from Hingham Armory

Studley killed in France in 1944

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For Cohasset resident Everett F. Studley, enlisting in the army was a family affair. The oldest of four boys, he set the standard in his family when he joined the National Guard in September 1940; his brothers later followed his lead.

Everett, who was the first in his family to ship off to World War II, made the ultimate sacrifice 61 years ago. His brothers Arnold, Austin, and Raymond returned home safely after their tours of duty.

Everett grew up on Hull Street and attended Cohasset schools. Before school, his brother Raymond remembers how Everett would get up and ride his bike to East Street in Hingham to milk the cows at the Edwards farm. Everett also had a musical side and enjoyed playing the piano.

After graduating from Cohasset High School in 1936, Everett worked as an electrician for Cohasset electrical contractor, Bosworth & Beal. However, like many men living in the 1940s, Everett joined the army as a source of extra money while working. Everett signed up at the Hingham Armory in September 1940 and became part of Company K, 101 Infantry, 26th Division, also known as the "Yankee Division."

Cook Estate hearing

There will be a public hearing on the Cook Estate Thursday, Jan. 5 at 7 p.m. at Town Hall. The board of selectmen is in the process of drafting a new Request for Proposals which will dictate what the town wants to see built on the Cook land, located on Sohier Street. Input from the meeting will be incorporated into the new RFP. Town Counsel said the town's being able to secure an extension with the Cook trustees which will allow the town to close on the property in March, 2007, is a substantial change and requires a new RFP due to state procurement laws. A new, finalized RFP will be sent out to prospective bidders by mid-January (likely the 12th or 13th). For more information, please call the selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

School web site

The school committee is urging the public to add www.cohassetk12.org to their "favorites" list. The school district Web site is full of information for all three schools, and is continually being updated. School committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said if parents are looking to find out what's going on at their child's school, the Web site can be a valuable resource, especially during those years when letter's aren't coming home in the backpacks quite as regularly.

Weird winter weather wreaks havoc

'Thundersnow' strikes region

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Although memories of last Friday's "thundersnow" are now a week old, they won't soon be forgotten.

"Weird" is probably the best way to describe the weather pattern that started with snow, switched to rain, which was followed by thunder and lightning and white-out snow conditions with high winds.

"I was looking out the window and it was raining and the next time I looked out it was a blizzard out there," said Police Chief James Hussey.

DPW Supt. Carl Sestito said when as the rain started to freeze, the sanders were out putting a sand and salt mix on Cohasset roadways "to try to get a brine down" but before they could finish their routes plows were needed.

When snow turned to rain and back to snow abruptly, a significant amount fell within an hour. Cars matted the snow as they drove over it, causing ice to form. This made driving conditions treacherous.

"I was looking out the window and it was raining and the next time I looked out it was a blizzard out there."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Hussey said the day shift was held over until 6 p.m. "We had two accidents but no one was injured," he said. "A bunch of cars got stuck, mostly on hills like the ones on Sohier Street and Forest Avenue."

In fact police shut Sohier Street down for a time to allow the plows to do their job, he said.

A school bus got stuck twice along Pond Street and Norfolk Road. "There were only a few kids left on the bus, so we had our police SUV take them home," Hussey said.

Mariner weather observer Bob Skilling said things could have been worse.

"The track of this storm brought very mild and moist air blowing in from off the ocean, riding up over cold (20-degree) air, which produced very heavy snowfall over most of New England," Skilling said. "The milder air won out here, or we would have shared in the more than a foot of snow that fell on our neighbors north and west of Boston."

Skilling noted the weather "went really wild here just after 2 p.m., when the center of the storm was passing eastward along the Cape Cod Canal and very cold air (20s) that had been dammed up to our north was plunging southward in the wake of this then-departing low-pressure system."

Visibility dropped to 1/16 to 1/8 of a mile from about 2:10 to 3:50 p.m., followed by a very sudden end to the snow at 4 p.m. A total of four inches fell in about an hour and 40 minute period. The final storm total was 5.7 inches. "There was 1.18 inches of water, which would have been about a foot of snow," Skilling said.

He also explained the unexpected thunder and lightning that occurred during the storm. "Thunder is often observed in our most intense snowstorms. During the thunderstorms, the snowfall rate can range from 2 to 5 inches per hour," Skilling said. "The 1997 April Fool's Day blizzard had lots of thunder and lightning and the same kind of blinding heavy snow that occurred Dec. 9 but occurred for many hours at 2 to 3 inches per hour. We would up with almost two feet of snow that time."

The rate of snowfall was 2 to 3 inches per hour for the one hour and 40 minutes that snow fell last Friday.

Sestito says even though winter arrived early this year, he isn't making any predictions about what Mother Nature may hold for the remainder of the season.

"I take it day by day," he says. "I just get up and look out the window."

The Cohasset DPW plows 37 miles of public roads in town and 11 miles of private ways. The state plows Rte. 3A. The DPW has four big sanders and two small ones, which all also plow. Sestito says the DPW hires 14 private contractors to plow for substantial snowfall (around 3 or 4 ins.)

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the fiscal 2006 snow removal budget is $51,156. In fiscal 2005, the town spent $282,217, and $97,959 in fiscal 2005.

Vandals try to steal Christmas spirit

Tear lights off tree

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In the wee hours of the morning, Saturday Dec. 3, the lights which adorn one of the trees on the Common for the holiday season were ripped from the branches.

Fortunately, the lights were not damaged and have since been put back up, but the incident has caused some to wonder who could be responsible for tampering with such an obvious celebration of the holiday season.

Police Chief James Hussey said the incident was not reported to the police department. However, Highland Avenue resident Roger Hill said he has some information on what may have happened that night.

Hill said at roughly 12:45 a.m. he heard more than two, but less than five, girls' voices on the Common. He said he is not sure of the ages of the girls, but he did not hear a car which might have indicated they were old enough to drive. "They woke us up," he said, because they were being so loud, but he eventually went back to sleep.

"I can't see the tree from my house," he said, and didn't think about the girls again until later the next day when he drove by and saw the lights off the trees and resting on the ice of the pond.

What really bothered Hill was the fact that the money wasn't in the budget for the lights in the first place and the advisory committee, of which he is a member, agreed to a reserve fund transfer of about $3,100 to ensure the town could continue the tradition of lighting the Common for the holidays. It was lucky the lights weren't damaged or it would have cost more money for the town to replace them, he said.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley said when he found out the lights were torn down, he asked Charlie Callahan, who hangs the lights every year, to put the lights back on the tree. Callahan was paid a second time to do so.

Pratt sheds light on Rte. 3A commercial project

typical commercial site plan reviews. He said Cohasset Plaza and Shaw's Plaza were both subject to review before they could be built. However, with the proposed development slated for Scituate Hill, it will be necessary to build a new roadway off Rte. 3A to access the property, which means the stricter, subdivision guidelines come into play.

Currently, Cohasset has traffic lights at the Beechwood Street intersection by Shaw's, the Pond Street intersection, and the intersection at Cohasset Plaza. There is also blinking light at Sohier Street. However, the planning board said it thinks now is the time to push not only for a light at the Greenbush train station (which has been approved by the MBTA, but not by MassHighway), and possibly a second light at the intersection with King Street. The curb cut for the new subdivision will be located almost directly across from the entrance to lower King Street.

With the addition of the building to the already busy area which includes Hingham Lumber, Cohasset Collision, and the Graham Waste buildings, Pratt said the planning board would like to see more traffic lights. "We believe that roadway needs some sort of signalization," he said.

"We believe that roadway needs some sort of signalization."

— Peter Pratt, planning board

Pratt said at preliminary hearings, traffic engineers from Rizzo Associates said developers of the Crocker Lane subdivision said they predict the intersection of King Street and Rte. 3A will have the highest level of traffic of any other intersection along the Cohasset section of 3A. He said the projected vehicular traffic from Hull residents traveling up King Street to get to the Greenbush station would likely increase traffic at that intersection greatly.

Pratt said the planning board's engineering consultant John Modzelewski will be involved with planning for the site at the developer's expense. Part of the planning will include studying the traffic to see if a light is warranted.

"We've talked about cross-synchronization (of lights) to Cohasset Plaza if not to Shaw's," Pratt said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan asked what the planning board thought a reasonable distance would be in terms of the scope of traffic study. Pratt said the study should be conducted from the Cohasset/Hingham border to at least south of Cohasset Plaza. Sullivan said he thought it might make sense to study the entire Rte. 3A corridor from the Hingham line to the Scituate line, to enable the town to begin to put "a long term plan in place" for mitigating traffic.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said while studying traffic for a light at the King Street intersection is a good idea, the only problem he can see is some may argue the intersection at Sohier Street is the one that needs a signal. "That left turn is a brute," he said. In addition, the Avalon development could increase traffic by 200 units of housing.

Pratt explained the concept being worked out is one of "platooning" where lights are synchronized along the route and cars are stopped and let out in short bursts, "so that you and I can take a left off Sohier Street at something less than 90 miles per hour."

The planning board presented the information to the selectmen just as a "heads up" to what will likely be coming forth as a recommendation of the board at the start of the year. The board of said it would be willing to sit down with the planning board, the town manager and the appropriate state officials to discuss the possibility of increasing traffic lights on Rte. 3A, and was also receptive to the possibility of spending money to hire a traffic consultant to help with the process. The planning board will hold its first public hearing on the Crocker Lane subdivision Wednesday, Jan. 11.

Alternative energy committee looks at wind turbine much power the wind will produce, towns typically break even on the cost of the project within eight years. The cost of the project depends on the size and how many turbines are being installed.

Towns are able to install turbines through the renewable energy trust, which was created by MTC in 1998. Its mission is to help increase the supply of and demand for energy from clean sources, as well as promote the development of a vibrant Massachusetts renewable energy industry.

The trust has between $20 million and $30 million which comes in each year that is available to be used by communities wanting clean energy choices. The trust is funded by residents who choose to contribute to the program. There are 19 Cohasset residents participating currently, which means when they get their energy bills, they opt to pay a premium of $5 to $10 per month to support renewable energy. Their donations are matched by MTC by up to $1 for every dollar donated. Currently, Cohasset has a $1,600 grant at its disposal due to donations from residents.

The first step would be to conduct a study to determine whether installing a wind turbine is feasible.

Cohasset may choose to utilize that grant to embark upon the journey toward installing a wind turbine. The first step would be to conduct a study to determine whether installing a wind turbine is feasible. Burke said Cohasset would likely be a candidate form the MTC's Community Wind Collaborative which requires a turbine be placed on land owned by the town, and ideally, a good portion of the energy would be used by a building on that piece of property. The high school has been looked at by the alternative energy committee as a possible site for the turbine, but nothing is set in stone.

If Cohasset decides to look into the feasibility of installing a wind turbine, the first step will be to determine a location. Turbines must be located in an area with some ambient noise to help diffuse the sound. "These are not noisy machines, but you do hear the wind go through the blades," Burke said. In addition, they must be located on a clear parcel, roughly the size of a football field, where the wind is plentiful.

Once a site is determined, MTC visits the site to determine whether the turbine can feasibly be installed at the location and whether a meteorological tower can also be installed. The tower is installed prior to the turbine and remains in place for one year as a means of measuring and monitoring wind at the proposed turbine location throughout all four seasons. The data will help determine whether a turbine will be a feasible power source for the town. The tower is removed at the end of the 12-month period. There is no charge to the town during the feasibility study portion of the project.

A feasibility study is conducted during the same time which takes a look at the options for the project, including environmental and economic issues.

If the town decides to move ahead, a course of action will be taken where the town will first be educated in the basics of wind energy, including the rationale, uncertainties, and myths regarding this kind of power. Education continues to take place throughout all planning stages right through construction.

The presentation was a first step by the alternative energy committee to get the ball rolling to begin looking at installing a meteorological tower only for the purpose of collecting wind data. This phase of the project would be no cost to the town. The committee will need to come back for approval from selectmen on any recommendations.

For more information on wind energy, please visit www.masstech.org.

Some train fencing could be in keeping with historic look

Army Corps backs towns on request

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Durable solid steel picket fencing will be installed along the railroad tracks in certain areas of Hingham, Cohasset, and Scituate as part of Greenbush restoration instead of the less-expensive hollow core type the MBTA prefers, if the Army Corps of Engineers gets its way.

"This is not just uppity Hingham asking for this," said Hingham Greenbush Coordinator Alexander Macmillan. "The request for steel fencing was part of a submission from all of these towns."

In Hingham, this mostly six-foot high fencing would stretch from Hersey to Water Street, including along the portion of the cement wall of the tunnel where the trains will descend and surface. The fencing will be four-feet high along that area because it will be set on top of the two-foot high wall.

In Cohasset this fence will be in the downtown area, approximately from Carousel Antiques on Ripley Road to the southerly end of the Municipal Parking Lot off Pleasant Street. Where fencing is required on both sides of the right of way it will be solid steel fence.

In Scituate, the fencing will be exclusively in North Scituate, extending either side of the village's intersection. The six-foot steel fence will stretch behind the Pipeline Salon and O'Donoghue Insurance Agency, and behind where the yellow Victorian building stands on Country Way.

The Corps, the lead federal agency involved in the Greenbush project review, recently informed the federal Advisory Council on Historic Preservation that it favors the installation of solid hot-dipped galvanized steel picket fencing with welded connections and a color-galvanized black finish as opposed to the tubular steel fences proposed by the MBTA, because it is more "historically appropriate and durable."

The Advisory Council participated in the consultation process between the towns of Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Braintree, and Weymouth that resulted in a Programmatic Agreement to mitigate the project's adverse effects.

The MBTA has requested formal dispute resolution under Section XV of the Programmatic Agreement for the design of steel fencing within historic districts of the affected towns.

Despite the MBTA's displeasure at the Corps' recommendation, the ACOE is standing firm. "The project elements within the historic districts should be designed in a manner that is compatible where feasible with historic and architectural qualities that have been documented during the Section 106 process [under the National Historic Preservation Act]," stated ACOE Deputy District Engineer Andrew B. Nelson in a recent letter to Advisory Council Executive Director Don L. Klima. "Fences within the historic districts are typically constructed of welded solid steel and would be more in character than hollow tubular fences fastened with bolts."

"It appears likely that the MBTA will appeal the decision to the Advisory Council."
— Alec Macmillan, Hingham Greenbush coordinator

In terms of costs deemed acceptable by the MBTA for other mitigation components, the Corps considers solid steel fencing a "viable alternative."

The Corps took this position after lengthy consultations in which the MBTA, the Massachusetts Historical Commission, the Project Conservator appointed pursuant to the Programmatic Agreement, and representatives of the affected communities participated. All the parties involved, except the MBTA, supported the installation of solid steel fencing.

The MBTA contends that the tubular fencing would be "easier and less costly to maintain," since a sold steel fence would be a "custom product, and in the event of damage to the fence, a section of the fence would have to be cut out and a new section custom fabricated and welded in place," according to Andrew Brennan of the MBTA.

However, these arguments were not strong enough to convince the Corps to opt for tubular fencing, which because of its hollow pickets is not deemed durable for the long-term.

A memorandum to Christine Godfrey, chief of the regulatory division of the ACOE's New England division, from the towns of Hingham, Cohasset, and Scituate, states: "There can be no argument: solid wrought-iron fencing has withstood the test of time and is robust. Cheaper rolled hollow steel fencing, such as proposed by the MBTA for the Greenbush project, has not withstood the test of time. In fact, even the most durable grades of this fence style carry warranties in the neighborhood of 10 to 12 years. Clearly, from a historic perspective, 10 years is a 'mere drop in the bucket' in the time continuum of our towns. The last rail system to operate through our towns lasted for well over 100 years."

Fancy fencing like the steel picket fence in front of St. Paul's Church and the Hingham Institution for Savings in downtown Hingham could be used along part of the Greenbush rail line in Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate.

Similar materials to those recommended by the Corps were used in the fencing in front of St. Paul's Church and the Hingham Institution of Savings, both in Hingham Square.

The Massachusetts Historical Commission has not taken a position on the fencing issue, Nelson noted. Since the Corps has not resolved the dispute with the MBTA, Nelson is requesting that the Advisory Council act on the matter.

"It appears likely that the MBTA will appeal the decision to the Advisory Council," Macmillan said. "It's their right to do so, but I would be surprised if the Council decided that the Corps has gone too far in taking preservation values into account. I hope that the MBTA will decide that in the larger scheme of things this won't increase the cost by that much."

Along the rest of the tracks there will be black steel mesh fencing. Wooden, screening fencing will be installed where the tracks run nearer to homes. In some cases, the wooden fencing will have noise-deadening material on the back of the fence.

SEASONAL THOUGHTS

Hello Cohasset! Are you ready for the holidays yet? Well, ready or not, they are here and hopefully, everyone can take a few minutes each day to take a deep breath and enjoy the lights, festivities and joy that the holiday time can bring. Also, try to remember those who are alone at this time of the year, especially the elderly friends and neighbors you may have. With the cold weather and icy, snowy conditions, they may need an extra hand shoveling or checking to see that walkways are clear. It is so easy to get overwhelmed with our own lives and the holidays that sometimes we forget what the season of giving is all about.

VP OF FRIENDS OF SSH

Donna Stearns of Cohasset has been elected vice president of The Friends of South Shore Hospital. Stearns originally became involved with the Friends as a volunteer for the Women's Health Grand Slam Tennis Tournament. She is a member of the Friends of Women's Health.

The Friends of South Shore Hospital is an auxiliary dedicated to bringing together those who will support and advance the good health of the region through the mission of the South Shore Hospital. Its goals are to encourage volunteerism, generate financial support for the hospital, and foster community goodwill and involvement.

South Shore Hospital is a tax-exempt charitable provider of acute emergency, outpatient, home health, and hospice care to the people of Southeastern Massachusetts. It employs 3,400 full and part-time employees and the area's largest and most clinically diverse medical staff, with more than 760 members.

Unique aspects include: multi-age classrooms, which optimize individualized learning and individual attention; a state frameworks-aligned curriculum that is both academically challenging and arts-rich; an approach that is deliberately hands-on, experiential, and developmentally responsive; and an environment that is supportive, inclusive, and celebrates the individual spirit in each student.

CAROLING ON THE COMMON

Once again, First Parish, Cohasset's Unitarian Universalist church, is sponsoring an old and well-loved Cohasset tradition – Caroling on the Common – on Saturday, Dec. 17. This special holiday event is open to the public, young and old, especially families with children in school. Exceptional singing voices are definitely not required as carols will be familiar and simple. Because it gets dark quickly, participants are asked to bring their flashlights.

Carolers will assemble at the church Parish House on 23 No. Main St. between 3:45 to 4 p.m. The group will circuit much of the Common, serenading selected homes as weather permits. At approximately 5 p.m., everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies, with cookie donations being very much appreciated.

In the spirit of "the more the merrier," folks are asked to pass the word about this old-fashioned celebration.

For more information call Sandy Bailey at First Parish 781-383-1100 or Woody Chittick 781-383-3215.

That is all for this week. Send in all of your news to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 p.m.

IT'S HAPPENING

Cohasset history makes a good gift

The Town has published three Narrative histories comprising 1,360 pages, 398 photographs and six maps, the most comprehensive set of matched history books of any Colonial town in New England. They can be bought as a handsome slip-cased set of three or purchased individually.

Last January, Jackie Dormitzer's Treasury of Cohasset History was published, 71 historical gems she discovered while researching the Narrative History of Cohasset: 1950-2000. They were separately published as the Town's fourth history book.

There are still original limited-edition Rudolph Ruzicka letterpress prints of Minot Light which are matted and numbered with a provenance sheet describing the origins of the print. There are only a few dozen left.

You may buy these books at Buttonwood Books or at Town Hall in the Clerk's office. All proceeds are returned to the Town's history book account to fund further publications.

Christmas tree pickup

Cohasset Middle School students are offering residents an alternative to messing up their cars taking dried out Christmas trees to the Dump. Instead, used Christmas trees can be picked up by calling the Teen Garage at 781-383-2492 and leaving a message including name and address. Trees should be placed on front lawns by 8 a.m. on Saturday, Jan. 7 for pick up either Saturday, or Sunday, Jan. 8, with payment of $15 per tree, $10 for seniors, attached in an envelope. Checks should be made payable to Project Safeguard. Proceeds will benefit the Cohasset community and Project Safeguard, a group of parents and teachers committed to improving our adolescents' physical, emotional and social health and well being.

We'll make you smile.

High school musicians and vocalists record their own CD

Boosters Club makes it happen

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"We've been blessed over the years in Cohasset to have such support in music and the arts."
— Bryan Marks, chorus director

Most parent boosters clubs are known to make things happen with a combination of energy, enthusiasm and fundraising.

But the Cohasset Middle High School Arts Boosters may just have gone to the top of the list by helping to provide music students with an experience they won't soon forget. In fact, students, their families and the public at large can soon enjoy the results of a professional recording session. The school chorus, jazz ensemble and concert band recorded a CD last Friday that includes material to be featured at their Dec. 21 "Winter Concert."

"We discussed the idea with Stephanie Hoskin (band and jazz ensemble) and Bryan Marks (chorus) and offered to provide funding for a professional sound engineer," says Elaine Breslow of the boosters club. She explained plans included coordinating with Mary Charwat, chair of the arts department, so that students could experience what it might mean to get the job assignment of creating artwork for a CD cover.

Breslow said the arts boosters motto this year is "Make it Happen." And that's exactly what occurred last Friday, when sound engineer Jeff Briggette of Weymouth conducted the recording session that is resulting in the Winter Concert CD complete with student-designed cover.

Hoskin said the students have been preparing the music since September both in class and during after-school rehearsals.

"We have had several meetings to set up the recording session and then the students were involved all day Friday in the actual event," Hoskin said.

Marks said the musical preparation for the recording was not any different than for a concert.

"I approached the session trying to get our best the first time like a performance," he said. "We only recorded two songs a second time."

The CD contains a wide variety of music including holiday music, a couple more classical pieces, a West African folksong, and a choral setting of an Emerson poem, Marks said.

Breslow of the boosters described the recording session as "fantastic." "It was an exciting experience to see the professional manner in which the students conducted themselves during the recording session," she said. "The actual recording took upward of six hours – the mixing will take just as long."

Marks said having a supportive community for a music program is "huge.

"We've been blessed over the years in Cohasset to have such support in music and the arts."

Hoskin said the support of the boosters has been "incredible."

"They strive to help supplement our school programs and increase opportunities for our students," she said.

Charwat, the art teacher, explained she offered the opportunity to design the CD cover to students in her portfolio class, the highest level of art class offered at the high school. "I explained to them the criteria for the CD cover and let them run with that," she said.

Charwat also said the arts boosters are willing "to go the extra mile to promote a strong arts program at the school."

Copies of the CD will be donated to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and Cohasset Elder Affairs. CDs will be available at the Dec. 21 high school Winter Concert.

"A donation of $15 will help defray some production costs," Breslow said. "Anything beyond that will ensure future programming possibilities."

Junior Kyle Dattola, left, plays the conga drums while junior John McCarthy shakes the maraca. The students' new CD will be available at the Dec. 21 Winter Concert.

Stephanie Hoskin directs the concert band during a rehearsal before the recording session last Friday. The Winter Concert CD also features the chorus and jazz ensemble.

Who was the top Cohasset citizen in 2005?

See nomination form on page 36

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In keeping with a 13-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the means by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored John Coe as Citizen of the Year, a WWII veteran, whose volunteer service at the Senior Center helps make it a warm, friendly place. He was also recognized for his service as the beloved Town Crier at the Village Fair and for his countless other good deeds behind the scenes.

The deadline for nominations for the 2005 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 6. Please see the nomination form on page 36. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Letters of nomination by email to mford@cnc.com are also welcome.

The deadline for nominations for the 2005 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 6.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2005 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2006.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the11th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

- 1993: Gerard T. Keating.
- 1994: Joseph D. Buckley.
- 1995: Dr. Robert T. Sceery.
- 1996: The Rev. Gary Ritts.
- 1997: Anna Abbruzzese.
- 1998: Katherine Stanton.
- 1999: Clark Chatterton.
- 2000: Mary Jeanette Murray.
- 2001: Glenn Pratt.
- 2002: Arthur Lehr.
- 2003: Marjorie Murphy.
- 2004: John Coe.

Book Angel Program benefits local children

Buttonwood Books & Toys is sponsoring its annual Book Angel Program ,to benefit local children. The program recipients are Wellspring in Hull, Friends of the Homeless in Weymouth and the Blue Hills Healthy Families (serving the South Shore).

Book Angels can be a wonderful way for children to understand the deeper meaning of the holidays and help promote literacy in a way that is meaningful.

Book Angels can be a wonderful way for children to understand the deeper meaning of the holidays and help promote literacy in a way that is meaningful. The Book Angel (That is you!) selects an angel from the tree in the store and purchases a book for the child described on the angel. Buttonwood will give a 15 percent discount on the book and deliver the book to the appropriate agency.

The program will run through Dec. 22. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 if you have any questions.

Studley killed in France in 1944

England first, Everett's company was staged at Valognes, France, and began to fight its way through the Moselle region.

Studley's brother Raymond remembers the day the Chaplain of his unit called him in to tell him his brother had been killed in action. With the whole family off at war, Raymond had to ask, "Which one?" He was told that on Nov. 28, 1944, just four years after he had enlisted, his brother Everett was killed at Vibersviller, France while leading his men in an attack across open ground.

The Studley family was not the only family to send multiple sons off to World War II. The LeClair family of Doane Street sent five boys — Leighton, Norman, Walter, Donald, and Kenneth — all returned home safely. The Stoddard family, also of Doane Street, sent sons Elmer, David, Charles, and Sheldon, who all returned safely as well. Three Cohasset families sent three sons off to war: the Marks family sent David, Charles, and Ernest; the Pratt family sent John, Burtram, and Edwin; and the Hines family sent Thomas, John, and Wilfred. All nine returned home safely.

Everett Studley is buried at Woodside Cemetery. To ensure his memory is never forgotten, a memorial square was appropriately dedicated in his honor at the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Hull Street, also known as West Corner, just up the street from his boyhood home.

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt provided the Mariner with the information for this article.

For more information on Everett F. Studley or any of the Cohasset veterans who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom, please visit the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Fallen servicemen honored around town

Everett F. Studley is one of many veterans who have been honored by the town of Cohasset. The town lost seven other men during World War II, who have all been memorialized with squares, parks, and roads in town including:

- Allen A. Buffum: Square at Beechwood St. & So. Main Street
- Norman Todd: Road intersects with Beechwood St., and a memorial park is located at their intersection.
- Robert E. Jason: Road at the Common
- William B. Long: Road at the Common
- Howard R. Gleason: Road to Yacht Club from Margin St.
- Perry H. Johnson: Square at Beach St. & Atlantic Ave.
- David H. Parker: Square at King St. & Beechwood St.

The mothers of the eight servicemen that gave their lives are memorialized at the Gold Star Mothers Monument at Woodside Cemetery, including Studley's mother, Lydia.

Roughly 498 men and women from Cohasset served during World War II from 1941 until the war was declared over in December 1946. Cohasset has memorialized all of its service men and women from the "Greatest Generation" by listing all of their names at Veterans Park at Cohasset Harbor. A book of Cohasset servicemen's names was presented to the National Monuments Commission at the dedication of the WWII Memorial, on May 29, 2004 in Washington, D.C.

Monument addition planned at Veteran's Park

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee has preliminary plans in the works to build a new honor roll monument at Veteran's Memorial Park in the harbor.

The only requirement to be listed on the honor roll is that the person was a Cohasset resident at the time they went into the service.

While currently, those Cohasset residents who served in the Civil War, the Spanish /American War, World War I and World War II are honored on the granite walls which display their names at the harbor, the committee would like to see a new monument built to honor those who have served their country in the Korean and Vietnam Wars as well as the Gulf War and the War on Terrorism

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt said the committee is starting to raise funds to build a new granite monument which would be a large circular wall about the height of a table, roughly 40 feet in diameter. The area inside the circle would be recessed, and there would be a pathway leading visitors into the circle. There would be a flag pole located in the center of the circular monument. The inside walls of the monument would have granite plaques with the names of those who have served in the wars.

"We think we'll have enough space to accommodate everyone and leave some more space for what might happen in the future," said Pratt.

Pratt said depending on how much the committee is able to raise, it may decide to come before the Annual Town Meeting in the spring to ask for a match in funds for whatever has been raised at that point. He said if everything goes as planned, he hopes the formal dedication can be held Veterans Day 2006.

Pratt said the Committee has roughly 168 names of Cohasset residents who served in the Korean War, more than 300 from the Vietnam War, and roughly 55 from the Gulf War and War on Terror. However, the committee is still looking for names to ensure it has a complete list. He said the only requirement to be listed on the honor roll is that the person was a Cohasset resident at the time they went into the service.

Anyone with names to add to any of the lists may contact Pratt at gpratt@suburbancompanies.com.

Foreign exchange well worth the effort

Students share their experiences

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Last January, Lisa Musto boarded a plane to Italy to spend the spring semester of her junior year studying abroad. She didn't speak a word of Italian, she had never met the family she would stay with, but she was very excited about the prospect of living in a different country.

Just as Lisa did, Ming has left his friends and family behind to experience life from another perspective.

Lisa Musto and Ming Chung go over their homework in Lisa's kitchen on Stevens Lane. Ming, who comes from Hong Kong, is spending the year at CHS. Lisa spent the spring semester of her junior year in Italy, also through AFS.

Today, back at home in Cohasset, Lisa sits beside Ming Chung, an exchange student from Kowloon, Hong Kong who is staying with the Musto family for the school year. Just as Lisa did, Ming has left his friends and family behind to experience life from another perspective.

Through the American Field Service program, which has been promoting exchanges since shortly after World War I, Lisa and Ming have both been able to expand their cultural horizons. "It's a life-changing experience," said Lisa, adding there aren't many programs which offer the opportunity for high school students to spend a semester in a foreign country. Due to her positive experience in Italy, the Musto family — which includes parents Ann and Paul, as well as Lisa's siblings Andrew, 19, Cliff, 15 and Emma, 13 — has opened its Stevens Lane home to Ming, to provide him with the same opportunity to study in a foreign land as Lisa had.

Through AFS, 18-year-old Lisa was matched up with a host family that lived in the Italian town of Bari on the country's Adriatic coast. From January to July she lived life as a typical Italian teenager, attending classes and participating in activities, as well as relaxing during summer vacation when school was let out for the year in May.

Communication was very difficult for Lisa when she first arrived in Italy. While she and the other American exchange students received a "crash-course" in Italian for four days in Rome when they arrived, they were only taught the basics, such as "I'm hungry" or "I'm tired."

From there, students were sent to live with their host families, and Lisa said she was often reduced to drawing pictures or making hand-gestures to get her point across. "She didn't have one of these," said Ming with a laugh, pointing out his electronic pocket translator which has come in very handy during his stay in Cohasset.

But being completely immersed in the language left Lisa with no other alternative but to slowly but surely add to her vocabulary until she could speak the language. "I came back fluent," she said.

For Ming, the language barrier is also dissipating as the months go by. While he has been studying English since the age of 5, he has never been in a situation where he must fully rely on those skills to communicate. As part of the AFS program, Ming is required to continue taking English at Cohasset High School (as well as U.S. History). Ming said he enjoys going to school and said it is somewhat different than his school back home. "I have to wear a uniform in Hong Kong," he said.

At the beginning of the school year, Ming said it was difficult for him to make friends because he was feeling shy. "I was very quiet because of the language barrier," he said, adding when students would say hello and ask him "What's up?" he didn't understand and it was very confusing. Ming is now learning slang from the friends he has made.

In addition to speaking a new language, adjusting to new food is one of the main differences when studying abroad. "The food in Italy was amazing," Lisa said, adding her host mother was a fantastic cook. Mealtime was very different, as Lisa said Italians have a tendency to be much more relaxed than Americans. "They take time with meals and they enjoy life more," in Italy, she said, while here people tend to rush around.

Ming said Paul Musto is a great cook and he is enjoying trying the many different kinds of dishes his host father prepares — everything from Italian to Chinese — all with an American flair. Before he goes home, Ming said, "I'm going to learn American cooking" so he can make dinner for his mother. However, his new favorite thing to eat, which he was introduced to at the beginning of his stay in Cohasset, barely requires stepping into the kitchen. "I love bagels with cream cheese," he said.

Ming said being away from his family is difficult, and was especially difficult when he first arrived, but he has been able to keep in touch with them through e-mail and instant messenging. Lisa said the computer has been a good tool for her too, as she is able to keep in touch with her Italian host family. In addition, Lisa said she met many exchange students from America while in Italy, and the internet has allowed her to remain in contact with them.

Ming is happy to be in Cohasset. "I like my host family. I like life here. It is a beautiful town, and a great town," he said, adding he would like to come back and visit after his exchange trip has come to an end. In addition, being present for the snow storm which hit last week was an exciting bonus. "I never see the snow in Hong Kong," he said.

Curtain to rise on Cohasset playwright's latest adventure classics, such as "It's a Wonderful Life," and "A Christmas Carol," are somewhat tired, her fictional playwright sits down to write a new, entertaining show — most of which is accomplished while sitting at her desk during work as a way to help her "look busy."

While the character delves into her own reservations about her ability to put on a play and whether her ideas are good enough and funny enough, her co-workers, pushy mother, and a local news channel "celebrity" are thrown into the mix, adding many different plot lines. "I think it's going to be a great show. It's very entertaining," Deveney says.

While Deveney said she is a little nervous, her 15 years directing shows in Cohasset has her well prepared. "I loved my experience in Cohasset. All the things we learned doing plays in Cohasset apply to this," she says, including the most important part to any of her shows was to have at least one other Deveney sister backing her up.

While Elizabeth is the sister with the ear for language, Sarah Deveney is the one with the eye for design. Sarah currently lives in California with her husband and their new baby, Abby Rose, whose arrival has made her involvement in the show limited to phone conversations. Grace Deveney is the sister with the eye for staging and Elizabeth was overjoyed to be able to "rope her into" her city debut. "There couldn't be any other way," says Elizabeth.

The sisters have been producing theater together since before they were teenagers and Grace was always able to bring Elizabeth's artistic visions to life. "She's my dream director," Elizabeth says.

"This is the first time I've worked with adults in all of our years."

— Elizabeth Deveney

But Elizabeth almost had to produce "A Bucket Full O' Christmas Cheer" without her. Grace is a nurse and is very involved in humanitarian efforts; she recently returned from a six-month stay in Sudan and will leave for Niger in January. Elizabeth is happy to be able to spend time with her sister while she is home and take advantage of her directing skills. Grace, who was always the one helping line up the children backstage, is excited because for the first time, she'll get to watch the show, says Elizabeth, who has cast herself in one of the roles.

"I haven't been challenging myself to perform," she says. Elizabeth joked with the children's summer theater, she would have stood out among the other actors if she had given herself a role. "This is the first time I've worked with adults in all of our years."

Because she is working from a new location, there were obstacles to overcome. Where in Cohasset things were well established — in Boston, Elizabeth was required to start from scratch, finding everything from the venue to a new way to sell tickets. "It's a challenge finding a way to take something you've done for so long and bringing it to a bigger city," she says.

Elizabeth said she believes she has found the perfect venue in the Devanaughn Theater as it is small enough that the audience will be involved, but not so small that people will need to be turned away. However, she hasn't completely ruled out going back to her roots at some time in the future.

"I'd love to go back in the summer and do it (children's workshop) again. Cohasset has so many talented kids," she says. But for now, Elizabeth awaits opening night and has agreed to take things, "one play at a time."

"A Bucket Full O' Christmas Cheer" will be performed at the Devanaughn Theatre, (the entrance to the theater is in the back of the Piano Factory, 791 Tremont Street) Thursday, Dec. 22 and Friday, Dec. 23 at 8 p.m. To order tickets, please call (866) 811-4111 or visit the TheaterMania Web site at www.theatermania.com. Tickets are $18 each and the show is roughly 1-1/2 hours long with a brief intermission.

Cohasset teachers escalating Work-to-Rule

Cohasset teachers protesting the lack of a new contract have decided to escalate their Work-to-Rule actions. Starting this week, teachers in each school are leaving or entering the building at the same time two days a week. Previously, they had been leaving at the same time one day a week and limiting parent conferences to one day a week.

"Teachers are used to working many, many more hours than we are contracted to work," said Patricia McGrail, president of the Cohasset Teachers' Association. "It's actually very difficult for teachers to leave at the end of the school day or arrive together right on time, rather than arriving much earlier than the students or staying later. But without a contract that allows Cohasset to compete with neighboring communities, the School Committee is forcing us to take these steps."

McGrail said that teachers in Cohasset earn less than most teachers in nearby comparable communities. As a result, excellent experienced teachers have left the district for higher paying jobs elsewhere.

"We are asking the School Committee to offer us a fair contract," said McGrail. "It is very important to teachers and important to the long-term health of the school district. The message we are trying to deliver with our picketing and Work-to-Rule actions is simple. Cohasset has excellent schools. Please help to keep them that way by offering teachers a fair and competitive salary."

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Let it snow, let it snow

The following editorial was penned by Matt Gill, editor of the Norwell and Hanover Mariners, two of the Cohasset Mariner's sisters newspapers. Matt works out of the Community Newspaper Co. South offices off Enterprise Drive in Marshfield.

Although sloppy, slippery and very often dangerous, extreme weather conditions such as last Friday afternoon's snowstorm, which blanketed the South Shore with snow, ice and even lightning strikes, can also be of benefit to the human race.

In my experience, it seems that people are often friendlier to each other — to strangers, neighbors and generally, their fellow man — when the weather whips up a Nor'easter, a hurricane, or even a freak hail storm.

As winds, rain and snow rage outside, foul weather has a tendency to slow other things down a little bit, and bring life, at least for an afternoon or so, into perspective.

In the snow and ice, commuters are compelled to drive slower along the highway, but they may also feel more concern about other drivers in front of them, or stationed on the side of the road.

I know that I'm more likely to think of my own neighbors during snowstorms; whether they have everything they need — food, batteries, coffee, etc. — and whether they need to be shoveled out, than when the sun is shining.

As temperatures dipped Friday afternoon and the windows of the newsroom at our Marshfield headquarters began to freeze up on the outside, the atmosphere within the office underwent a change as well.

We are often so busy writing, answering phone calls and responding to emails that it's hard to take the time to get to know one another on a more personal level. But last Friday, during the storm, my co-workers and I took that opportunity.

Peering as far out the frozen windows we could, we talked about the journey we'd soon have to make to our homes, a trip we've made endless times before, but not necessarily during such conditions.

We discussed our families and friends, too. And as our building's Christmas wreath crashed to the ground under the burden of wind and snow, we talked of where these loved ones were at the moment, and how they were coping in the season's first major snowstorm.

Although driving north along Rte. 3 late Friday evening certainly not a fun experience — half of the lane was smoothed by traffic, while the other was bumpy and uneven — my sense of arriving at home at the end of the journey proved more one of accomplishment, or survival, than a typical drive home.

And although being cold and covered in snow may not rank as an amusing experience, there's something to be said for the feeling one gets coming in from the cold.

The fire inside feels warmer, cozier and friendlier.

The radio's on and there are weather updates and Christmas music.

Soups are celebrated, and hot chocolate is at its most popular.

Friends and family call to inform you they're safe, and when they'll be home.

Those are nice feelings.

So when a storm hits, or when the local weatherman calls for a bout of nasty weather be sure to make all the necessary preparations (shovels, salt and snow tires) but consider, too, the human positives that might come along with it.

For me, if the arrival of inch upon inch of the white stuff brings with it a greater consideration for one's fellow man, then my wish for the winter is clear: let it snow, let it snow, let it snow.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Arts get a boost at CMHS

TO THE EDITOR:

Extraordinary things are happening at Cohasset Middle-High School due to the generous donations made to the Cohasset MHS Arts Boosters! On Friday Dec. 9, the high school band, chorus and jazz ensemble students participated in a first-ever professionally sound engineered CD recording session under the direction of teachers Stephanie Hoskin and Bryan Marks.

Equally exciting is the close collaboration on this project with the Art department that has yielded student art work to be used as the CD jacket cover. A limited number of CDs will be available at the Dec. 21st high school Winter Concert which will be held in the middle high school auditorium at 7:30p.m. You will not want to miss this exciting opportunity as the CD promises to make a treasured keepsake, a unique holiday or hostess gift as well as a professional level college portfolio addition. A $15 donation will help defray production costs — any amount beyond will help ensure future enrichment opportunities for our talented students.

Working closely with arts department chair, Mary Charwat, the Cohasset MHS Arts Boosters applied for and received a 2006 Cohasset Cultural Council grant recipient! The Cohasset Cultural Council is a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council. The art gallery will grace the middle high school walls and will consist of picture frames that will enable the art teachers to change student work that is being displayed, hence its nickname, "living" gallery. Until now there has not been the capability to professionally exhibit the work of so many talented students. It is also hoped that visiting local artists will lecture Cohasset students and display their pieces here. Look for this exciting installation in the coming weeks.

The award winning Cohasset High School Drama Workshop, under the new direction of Mr. Todd Ferguson, has been given funds to enter the prestigious Massachusetts High School Drama Guild's 75th annual Festival. We are pleased to report that the middle school will, for the first time, enter the Drama Guild's Middle School Festival supervised by Mrs. Stephanie Noble.

Finally, we would like to thank Melissa Clark of Melissa Clark Designs and CHS Junior Austin Breslow for their tremendous work creating the Cohasset MHS Arts Boosters new web site. Visit us at www.CohassetArtsBoosters.com for all the latest information regarding the fine and performing arts created by our gifted grade six through twelve students.

Thanks for giving the arts a boost!

HEALTH NOTES

Staying healthy over the holidays

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As the holidays approach we like to celebrate by entertaining friends and family, throwing parties, and preparing feasts. From the buffet table to the office party, food moves center stage throughout the holiday season. In order to avoid a digestive disturbance in December: Keep food safe by following good sense food safety practices.

- Clean: Wash hands and food-contact surfaces often. Bacteria can spread throughout the kitchen and get onto cutting boards, knives, sponges, and counter tops.
- Separate: Don't cross-contaminate — don't let bacteria spread from one food product to another. This is especially true for raw meat, poultry and seafood. Keep such foods and their juices away from ready-to-eat foods.
- Cook: Cook to proper temperatures. Foods are properly cooked when they are heated for a long enough time and at a high (>160°F) temperature to kill the harmful bacteria that cause food borne illness.
- Chill: Refrigerate promptly. Refrigerating foods quickly keeps most harmful bacteria from growing and multiplying. Refrigerators should be set at 40°F and the freezer at 0°F, and the accuracy of the settings should be checked occasionally with a thermometer.

Don't spread germs

Whether you are with friends, family or at the mall: Holidays are also the time we meet more people. It's a good thing to remember how germs are transmitted. Illnesses like the flu (influenza) and colds are caused by viruses that infect the nose, throat, and lungs. The flu and colds usually spread from person to person when an infected person coughs or sneezes. Take care to:

- Clean your hands often: When available, wash your hands — with soap and warm water — then rub your hands vigorously together and scrub all surfaces. Wash for 15 to 20 seconds. It is the soap combined with the scrubbing action that helps dislodge and remove germs.

When soap and water are not available, use alcohol-based disposable hand wipes or gel sanitizers You can find them in most supermarkets and drugstores. If using a gel, rub the gel in your hands until they are dry. The gel doesn't need water to work; the alcohol in the gel kills germs that cause colds and the flu.

Reflecting on our first year in town

COMMENTARY

CATHERINE O'CALLAGHAN

The statue of limitations has recently run out on my "New to Town" status. I relocated to Cohasset with my husband and four daughters just over a year ago from Westchester County in New York. We arrived last year; the day before school began and I confess I was forced to use Map Quest to find my way to the Cohasset Middle High School. After being sent a circular way around town and definitely not the route of choice, my children began taking the bus.

Being the native New Yorkers, we showed up half an hour early to ensure a parking space and to be first in line before the fresh produce and fruit were sold out.

I was amazed at their bus route which took them along the coastline of Jerusalem Road. I never imagined that going to school could be so scenic and inspiring. I called my mother back in Connecticut as I drove that same route, trying to give her a detailed description of what I was seeing out the window of my car each day. I described the little row boat that sits in Little Harbor by the marshes, Minot Lighthouse out in the distance, the sound of the tide rolling over the rocks on Pleasant Beach, the ever changing color of the ocean, the waves rocking the coastline and the birds and gulls flying overhead. I couldn't believe this was our home.

We heard about the Farmers Market held on the village common. Being the native New Yorkers, we showed up half an hour early to ensure a parking space and to be first in line before the fresh produce and fruit were sold out. We arrived at 1:30 p.m. and parked right in front and immediately thought that we had the wrong day or time. There were a few tables and a white tent set up on the lawns, but no people lined up and no cars circling the block for parking.

It was a beautiful fall day, so we decided to enjoy the duck pond and sit out on the grass. By 2 p.m., most of the vendors had arrived and we started thinking that we had the day right, but must have been off on the time. We wandered over as people started to arrive and graciously got in line behind the others. We bought fresh strawberries; which were so much sweeter and riper than any I had ever tasted from a supermarket; lettuce, tomatoes, the most aromatic basil and fresh honey from Holly Hill Farm; and the most delicious oatmeal cookies from Maggie's Bake Shop. (I thought for the first month that you could only buy Maggie's cookies at the Farmers Market, held once a week on Thursdays. My waistline didn't appreciate the realization that Maggie actually has a store where you can buy her cookies, cakes and breads six days a week.) By 3p.m., more people were enjoying the live music, pony rides and face painting as well as the still abundant produce, sweets, gifts, jewelry, jams and jellies. In fact everyone was having a wonderful time. We made the Farmers Market a weekly ritual through the fall, showing up promptly at 2 p.m., as some habits are hard to beat.

We attended the Cohasset Village Fair in December on the village green and came out to enjoy the treats and temptations in the downtown stores during their holiday open house night. Most of our Christmas gifts came from the stores in Cohasset, as did our tree, wreaths and decorations. The children and adults of our welcoming neighborhood serenaded us with carols as they went door to door spreading their good cheer. On the night of the big January 2005 blizzard, we were invited for an impromptu dinner at our neighbors. We enjoyed a delicious dinner; contributed from everyone's refrigerators and freezers. The snow falling was the perfect backdrop to a night of good company and great food. Locals actually apologized to me for the unusual snowy winter that hit the New England last year. They thought we might pack up and flee to southern parts. We stayed; enjoyed the snow and waited for spring.

Spring brought activity everywhere. Joggers, walkers and strollers were back on the streets. Boats started appearing in the harbor and registrations arrived at the house for the Music Circus, Cohasset Swim Center, Cohasset Sailing Club and other summer programs. We inherited a well-designed, colorful and bounteous garden from the previous owners of our home. Each blooming plant and flower was a much anticipated surprise as we experienced our first spring in our home in Cohasset. Fragrant lilacs filled our house from the three different lilac species on our property. We explored the rocks along Black Rock Beach and rode our bikes along the coastline into town. We actually went to Sandy Beach during the April school vacation when temperatures hit a mild 80 degrees. (My daughter actually swam in the very frigid waters for a mere $20 wager.)

JJ's Dairy Hut

Nothing brought more excitement to our family however than the opening of JJ.'s Dairy Hut on 3A. We had the ascertained the opening date from the contractors painting the outside of the building before it opened. We were there the first day it opened for our soft serve dipped cones. Never having tasted orange or mint dip we felt inclined to try all the flavors over the summer months. We also enjoyed the opening of Henry's Root Beer stand in town. It was the perfect place to grab lunch, dinner or an ice cream after a lacrosse or soft ball game.

Summer was delayed by the extended days of school and some cool weather, but it was well worth the wait. All year we had been hearing, "Have you been to the beaches?" "Have you eaten at the Olde Salt House?" "Have you been out to Bassings Beach?" We found our spot at Sandy Beach, where we met friends or just enjoyed the scenery and relaxed. Ordering pizza and take out food to be delivered to the beach was beyond our dreams. We comfortably enjoyed the ocean breezes while those inland were forced to endure the hot and humid summer weather. In July, we leased a small Boston Whaler for the summer. My husband fished for stripers and blues in the harbor and out at Minot Lighthouse, accompanied by whichever child was awake in the morning when he left. We picnicked out at Bassings Beach and toured the waters looking at all the beautifully maintained homes along the coastline.

In the early morning hours, I biked along the coast to Scituate, happy to escape the gym and indoor exercising. The scent of the rosehips, lily of the valley and honeysuckle along with warm sun on my face somehow made my spirit lighter and my thoughts seem clearer. We enjoyed meals at the Olde Salt House, watching the boats come into the harbor and the fisherman proudly unloading their daily catch. We ate the local lobster, steamers and tasted many variations of the "Best Clam Chowder in New England". We haven't determined a clear winner yet.

Returning to school was much easier this fall. The girls weren't the "new kids" and we knew our way around the schools, where to pick up and drop off, and many familiar faces. In giving up my "New To Town" status, I now am prepared to offer my time and talents when the phone rings looking for volunteers. I am looking forward to not getting lost going from Cohasset to Hanover and learning more short cuts through the back roads. I am eager to support the local schools and the teachers that offer such valuable services and resources to Cohasset. I look forward to making the annual holiday parades, community fairs, art festivals, shows and athletic games a ritual for our family. I look forward to welcoming those "New to Town" with a smile, confident that they will find our town to be as wonderfully special as we all know it to be.

Still waiting for facts and logic

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

Ms. Jenkins's commentary of two weeks ago, "Teacher salaries don't tell the whole story," once again is filled with the same sort of misinformation, tired clichés, and personal accusations which are typical of everything she writes.

Her commentary begins, "There is an unfounded theory that teachers salaries determine our school system quality and our home values."

Putting aside that in the course of the next 24 column inches of newsprint of her commentary Ms. Jenkins does not come close to discussing (let alone validating) the truth of her broad assertion, let's deal with what she says on her own terms.

If we parse out her topic sentence, Ms. Jenkins is taking issue with two separate propositions being put forward by our teachers and others in our community: (1) Higher teacher salaries equal a better school system and (2) a better school system equals higher property values.

As regards the latter, I would be curious to know from Ms. Jenkins and her organization, the so-called Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers (CCT), whether they disagree with the notion that there is a strong correlation between the quality of a community's schools and its property values.

I know when my wife and I were house-hunting 11 years ago, the real estate agents provided information (without our asking) about the SAT scores and four-year college attendance rates of area schools and even the number of AP courses at Cohasset High compared to surrounding communities — and we did not even have children of school-age at the time.

In an article in the Boston Globe just this past Sunday about a couple relocating from Boston to North Carolina with their children, the article notes that the mother "extensively researched the school systems near Raleigh, and she especially was impressed by the test scores and diversity of a town called Knightdale."

The point is, I think it is clear that if Ms. Jenkins and her fellow CCT members fail to understand (or admit) that a quality school system is important to the value of their homes, they are ignoring reality. Moreover, if they focus on the small issue of the few hundred additional dollars that an override entails without considering the tens of thousands of dollars that a good school system adds to their home values, they are being penny-wise and pound-foolish.

The more controversial of the two questions is whether higher teacher salaries — which implies that a school district will attract better teachers — will result in a better school system. I don't have the time to research that subject – and Ms. Jenkins surely did not either – but my experience in the world, both first-hand and as an observer, is that higher salary levels tend to attract the top performers in every industry, all other things being equal. This is a competitive world, even in the arena of public education, but that too, is a reality to which Ms. Jenkins appears to be oblivious. While it may true, as she writes, that the Cohasset teachers' contract has included many "concessions" (not that I agree with that descriptive word) in the past 14 years, there is not even a hint of a suggestion in her commentary that the parameters of the Cohasset teachers' contract are out of line with those of other communities.

Unlike Ms. Jenkins, who has lived in Cohasset for a long time and therefore has a certain tunnel vision and narrow perspective, I have seen what happens in other communities where I have lived when (a) a school district's salaries start to fall out of line with the norm and (b) the teachers perceive that they are being treated unfairly. The result, which occurs in a surprisingly short period of time, is that the good teachers leave for greener pastures where they are appreciated and where the environment does not involve a battle of the sort now going on with our School Committee. After all, if you're good at what you do, why wouldn't you go to a place that will pay you more without the aggravation?

I'm not going to go through all of the points Ms. Jenkins makes in her column, if for no other reason than that they do not make a coherent whole, amounting to nothing more than a series of non sequiturs. However, there are a couple of other things she says that are worth mentioning:

The point is, I think it is clear that if Ms. Jenkins and her fellow CCT members fail to understand (or admit) that a quality school system is important to the value of their homes, they are ignoring reality.

• She correctly states that "average salaries are misleading." (I wrote a letter to the editor on that subject two years ago when a School Committee candidate noted that Cohasset's average teacher salary is lower than many surrounding communities.) Ms. Jenkins then also correctly states, "A more logical way to look at salaries is to view the top salary offered." But what does she do? She selectively ignores the top salary figures for Hingham and Scituate! Apparently, from what she writes, Hingham and Scituate offer higher salary levels for teachers with Ph.Ds, but Cohasset doesn't. So, she writes, "I have eliminated the Ph.D. salaries to reduce the skew."(!?!) But the "skew" between Cohasset and these other towns is precisely the point – but that also is something which she conveniently wishes to ignore. Interestingly, an ad from the Cohasset Teachers Assoc. (which appeared a few pages before Ms. Jenkins's commentary) appears to present the full picture, rather than just the half that Ms. Jenkins offers. The ad states that Cohasset's maximum teacher salary is $1828 below Hingham's, $2802 below Scituate's, $5325 below Norwell's, and $7363 below Duxbury's.

• Ms. Jenkins writes, "Through my years of following Cohasset education I have actually seen a decline in the curriculum and a hiring of some middling individuals while turning away true stars." I personally have no idea what she is talking about. But can she support what she is saying with some facts? Furthermore, if the Cohasset curriculum is indeed "declining" and "stars" are being turned away, isn't it more likely than not that these are functions of the structural financial deficit which our school system faces year-in and year-out which has been addressed only on a piecemeal basis for at least the past decade? Ms. Jenkins purports to make a strong conclusion about the declining state of the Cohasset schools, but she offers no reasons for why it has happened or what to do about it. Her tired and worn-out mantras of "no new taxes" and "money alone won't solve our problems" do not directly address the problems she feels exist. If money is not part of the solution, then what is, Ms. Jenkins?

• Finally, as regards the many accusations and outlandish statements that appear throughout her commentary (none of which I will repeat), suffice to say that last week's letter to the editor from the student-editors of the school newspaper (in response to one of her statements) was well-written, concise, and based upon facts, with none of the negativity that typifies Ms. Jenkins's commentaries.

She could learn a lesson.

Doggie Christmas

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

If I ever get on the Oprah Winfrey TV show and she asks me what was my most embarrassing moment I'm going to tell her it was the time I took a dog to have her picture taken with Santa Claus.

And someone saw me.

I recall this every Christmastime since I am usually required to buy gifts for two or three dogs of my acquaintance and, in case you guys haven't noticed, dogs of the 21st century just aren't satisfied with simple bones anymore.

Not while peanut butter and liver chip cookies are available at $3.75 a box.

In fact, Christine Wilford, a columnist for the American Kennel Club Gazette, will tell you that you aren't doing your pooch any favors by giving him a bone since he can break his teeth on it and you know how expensive those doggy dentists are.

In case you want to chance it, though, I'm told there is a book called "The Doggy Bone Cookbook" on the stands.

I was thumbing through USA Today the other day when I came across a report by Kelton Research which found that 66 per cent of the eligible females among us would not date a person of the male persuasion if he disliked her dog.

I long ago retired from the dating game but that certainly explains why I struck out so much during my playing days.

But I digress . . .

Needless to say, I'm not a big dog fancier, although we do have one and occasionally I tune in to the Animal Planet channel to watch Spot or Fido pull a drowning boy from the pond and revive him with artificial respiration.

But somebody must enjoy them since they spend $34 billion a year on their pets and 31 million dog owners are expected to buy gifts for their dogs this Christmas, including --- get this now — disposable diapers.

Don't laugh. I wish they were available when our dog was growing up.

PetSmart, which has changed its name from Pets Mart to reflect a change from discount store to boutique, likes to refer to dog owners as "pet parents," indicating they look at their dogs much like they look at their children.

In fact, you can get a cardigan with pearl buttons for your dog-child for $38.50 at PetSmart.

"The whole concept of being a pet parent is that in some cases pets have replaced children," says Ken Hall, chief marketing office for PetSmart.

Pet parents can even get a bone-shaped mobile phone called a Petcell, a phone that dangles from the collar and is programmed to recognize incoming numbers. Neiman Marcus has them for $349 plus $16-a-month.

Just the thing for Paris Hilton's lost Chihuahua.

Neiman Marcus also has a Gucci dog carrier for a mere $750 and Dog Spa in Beverly features $50 aromatherapy baths and monogrammed terry spa robes for $29 and $40.

What do you do if you take a dog to see Santa and she asks for one of those?

Urges support for AfTA anti-Greenbush lawsuit

COMMENTARY

MICHAEL WEYMOUTH

Residents who have resigned themselves to Greenbush may look at the Army Corps of Engineers' endorsement of a high-quality fence along the rail line as a victory of sorts. For those of us who still see the possibility of stopping the project (yes, all that construction is still being done at risk), the Advocates for Transportation Alternatives (AfTA) lawsuit, seeking a Full Environmental Impact Report (FEIR) from the Army Corps, is still awaiting a hearing, the filing for which will take place this week.

What is the AfTA lawsuit about?

AfTA contends that the Army Corps should not have issued a Finding of No Significant Impact (FONSI), one of the most important Greenbush permits, without first conducting an FEIR.

Building a project the size of Greenbush without a proper FEIR is unprecedented, especially one being built as a so-called Design/Build project, which essentially allows the MBTA to proceed with construction without all its permits. The Design/Build concept, while admirable in its intention, was never created for such a complex and controversial project as Greenbush. Design/Build also comes with a risk factor for the MBTA, since failure to get a permit down the line could jeopardize the entire project.

On the federal level, the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) would "require" an oversight agency to conduct an FEIR. In the case of Greenbush, the Corps relied on the project proponent (the MBTA) to conduct its own environmental review of the project, primarily because the Corps is not budgeted to conduct such a review. This is tantamount to allowing a student to correct his own homework, which may account for all the dubious data AfTA claims the T used to make its case for Greenbush. The ACOE/Greenbush FONSI is an example of just how easily state environmental laws can be circumnavigated when it is politically expeditious to do so. As US citizens, let alone as citizens of one of the most enlightened states in the Nation, when we are confronted with an environmentally invasive project such as Greenbush, we should all insist the project be subject to the more stringent standards set by federal agencies and the environmental laws they oversee, laws that are immune to the look-the-other-way shenanigans of local politicians and special interest groups.

It is with this concern in mind that AfTA has filed its suit in a federal court and not the state court.

The tendency for some is to say, "Well, this is just politics at work, and you know, you can't fight city hall." To AfTA's credit, it's trying to do just that, and were it to succeed in convincing the courts that an FEIR should be conducted, the project would be put on hold for a lengthy period of time, and were the FEIR to support AfTA's contention that there are less environmentally invasive and less expensive ways to remove the same number of new riders from the roadways than the project could be stopped. Which is not to say that all that construction would be for naught: there's always the bike path.

Is this a battle worth waging at this point in time?

I have heard more than a few residents say that if there were still a small chance of stopping Greenbush, they would support the effort. Success with the AfTA hearing, which will take the judge a month or two to rule on, will determine if that chance exists. If it does, hopefully all those who oppose the Greenbush restoration will re-energize their support for AfTA and the enormous effort John and Martha Bewick have put into the AfTA lawsuits. Few residents are aware of what they have done for Hingham, as well as the entire South Shore, and they deserve our full support to help fund the lawsuits. Their travails have been especially difficult as construction has proceeded and Greenbush opposition has understandably waned. Fortunately, the Bewicks, and the South Shore residents who continue their financial support for the lawsuits, have stuck to their guns.

It is only natural to be discouraged by the construction, but all one has to do to re-engage is to: imagine those behemoth engines and double-deckers spewing diesel emissions through our neighborhoods in the MBTA's misdirected quest for clean air; think about how this project was denied by the Federal Transit Authority because it was too environmentally invasive, and yet the Army Corps accepted the MBTA's data that concluded the opposite, and then issued a FONSI, which makes no sense whatsoever in the historically rich areas through which the train would pass; think where Greenbush would have ended up if the project had been subjected to NEPA standards rather than the machinations of Massachusetts' politics; think about federal EPA regulations governing diesel locomotive emissions compared to the shrug-of-the-shoulders emissions non-data from the MBTA; think about the Cashman sign in Weymouth touting Greenbush because it "provides jobs" compared to the Romney aide who said, "Good public transit is not about jobs, it's about good public transit."

I think about these things all the time and when I do I get mad all over again. Which is what I urge all citizens who oppose Greenbush to do. For those who want to help AfTA continue the fight, call 617-335-9059, or email jbewick@comcast.net. Your support will be greatly appreciated.

HEALTH NOTES

Staying healthy over the holidays

FROM HEALTH NOTES, PAGE 14

• Cough or sneeze into a tissue and then throw it away. Cover your cough or sneeze if you do not have a tissue. Then, clean your hands, and do so every time you cough or sneeze.

Avoid close contact and stay home if you're sick

Avoid touching your eyes, nose, or mouth Germs are often spread when a person touches something that is contaminated with germs and then touches their eyes, nose, or mouth. Germs can live for 2 hours or more) on surfaces like doorknobs, desks, and tables.

When you are sick or have flu symptoms: stay home, get plenty of rest, and check with a health care provider as needed. Your employer may need a doctor's note for an excused absence. Remember: Keeping your distance from others may protect them from getting sick. Common symptoms of the flu include: fever (usually high), headache, extreme tiredness, cough, sore throat, runny or stuffy nose, muscle aches, and nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea, (much more common among children than adults).

Traveling

• Holiday Travel — If you're flying, get a good night's sleep before a trip. Wear loose-fitting clothing, since the body expands slightly in flight. Keep important medical and insurance information with you during your trip. If you have dietary restrictions, contact reservations at least 24 hours prior to a flight.

If crossing time zones, prepare in advance to counteract the effects of jet lag by adjusting sleep time in the days before a trip. Retire earlier than normal if heading east, and later if traveling west. Limit alcohol and caffeine intake, which tend to dehydrate the body.

• Practice other good health habits — Be physically active, manage your stress, drink plenty of fluids, and eat nutritious food. Practicing healthy habits will help you stay healthy during flu season and all year long.

Participate in all decisions about your general health and its treatment. You are in charge of your health care team.

Christmas tree pickup

TO THE EDITOR:

The Middle School Student Council is having a Christmas Tree Pickup in January to help support Project Safeguard. Project Safeguard is a community-based committee that plans a variety of educational programs for middle school students. Since the school does not pay for Project Safeguard, the Student Council is having a fundraiser to benefit them. All you need to do is place your Christmas tree on your front lawn and parents will drive middle school students to your home to bring your tree down to the street where it will be picked up. This will take place on Saturday, Jan. 7 from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Sunday, Jan. 8 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The cost for a pickup is $15/tree and $10 for senior citizens.

If you would like to schedule a pickup for your Christmas tree please call the Teen Garage Center at (781) 383-2492 and leave a message with your name and address. Please call soon to help us plan for January.

If you have a child in the middle school, please encourage them to sign up with their friends at lunch and volunteer to drive if you can. If your child helps he or she is invited to go back to the garage for pizza and refreshments after their service.

Please help us support a wonderful cause! Happy Holidays!

Looking for bigger and better things

CHS boys hope to improve on last year's record

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

In his second year at the helm of the Cohasset High boys basketball program, Dorian Bryant is hoping for bigger and better things.

There is no sugarcoating the fact that last season was a rebuilding one for the Skippers. Having lost its entire starting five from the 2003-04 team that made the state tournament, Bryant inherited a team with no seniors that almost entirely comprised of newcomers to the varsity level.

Cohasset won five games, but improved as the year went on and played some of their best ball toward the end of the season. Bryant is hoping to see more of that caliber of play this season.

The former CHS hardwood standout has enough confidence in his team that he is implementing new, more complex schemes on offense and defense. Bryant says his team will need time to adjust, but says they should be able to do so, particularly on offense, where the coach feels he has more go-to options.

"We have a few more players that can score, and that's a big plus," Bryant said a couple days before Tuesday's season opener at Holbrook. "Now, we can get all five guys on the court around the basket and get everyone looks. Overall, it's going to be a better brand of hoops."

This year's team has four seniors on the roster: Trevor Brady, Nick Arment, Chris Bryan and Will Pinkus.

Brady was Cohasset's leading scorer in 2004-05, and Bryant will be counting on him to do a lot again this season.

"Trevor had a pretty nice season last year, and we're looking for him to repeat it," Bryant said.

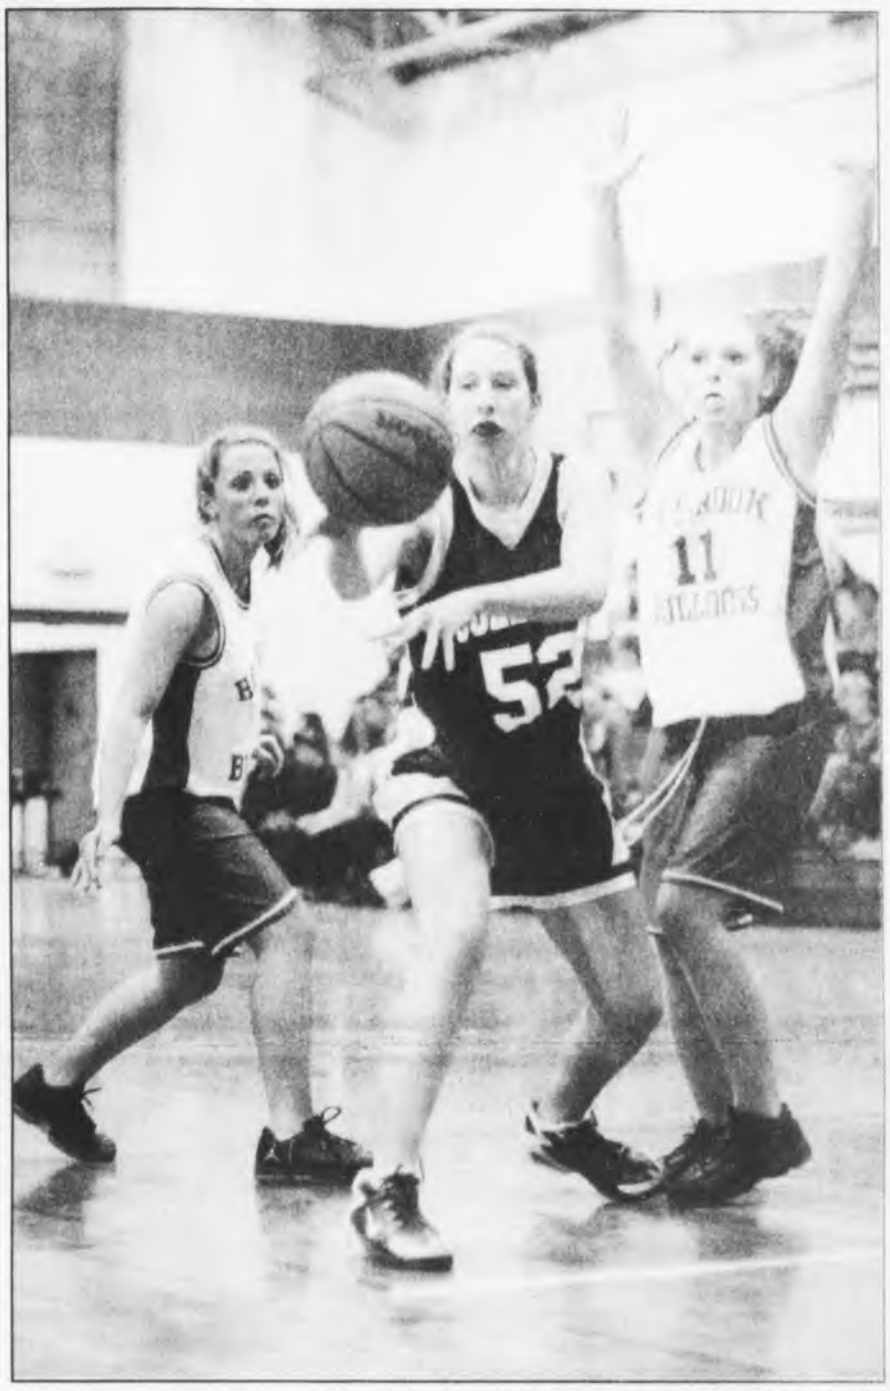
Youth movement for girls hoops

Varsity squad will carry six freshmen this season

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

A quick glance at the 2006 Cohasset girls varsity basketball roster would trigger a common response: "Is that a typo?"

Out of the 14 available varsity spots, veteran coach John Levangie has filled six - yes, six - of them with freshmen. What sparked Levangie to make this decision?



"The underclassmen have a lot of talent to offer," said the head coach. "As they build confidence and gain experience, they can make great contributions to this team."

Samantha Lehr, Carly Salerno, Kayla Farren, and Marissa Tangherlini will make their appearance as first-year forwards. These newcomers, Lehr in particular, will be looked to for solid rebounding. Sarah Coggins and Gabriella Flibbotte will sign in at the guard positions, both bringing plenty of speed and ball-handling skills.

Levangie recognizes the importance of spending a lot of time on the fundamentals if he carries through with his strategy to frequently utilize the new kids on the block. Last year, the squad finished with a 12-9 record during regular season play. The Skippers qualified for the tourney but quickly ran into an overpowering Cathedral team in the first round.

Despite the high rookie count, the fans will recognize several veteran Skippers lacing up for their second or third years on the varsity court. Seniors Mia Lieb-Lappen, Katie James and Chelsea

WORLD CUP COMMENTARY

MARK GOODMAN

Draw not as bad as it looks for U.S.

There I was last Friday afternoon, face buried in hands, a feeling of unrelenting angst taking over my body.

And, no, it wasn't over how I was going to get home in the apocalyptic snowstorm that was prevailing over the area.

It was over the United States' luck in that day's World Cup draw in Leipzig, Germany. Joining an Englishman (more on that arrogant lot in a minute), huddling over his laptop, listening to the BBC broadcast of the event - with everyone else in the office wondering what on Earth we were doing - I waited with great anticipation and borderline maniacal intensity for the U.S. to come up.

The Yanks were in Pot 4, meaning they would be the last team drawn into one of the eight four-team groups that will begin play on June 9. Each team plays three games - one against each nation in its group - with the top two sides advancing to a single-elimination,

Coach sees great future for Scituate-Cohasset swimmers

New team ready to take the plunge

By Mary Jane Hanron
CORRESPONDENT

Even growing up in West Hartford, Conn., Jon Fortin knew that his passion was swimming.

His enjoyment of the sport — one that requires discipline, training, competition and skill — during his youth and later at Elizabethtown College in Lancaster, Pa. prepared him for his new role: coach for the newly formed Scituate-Cohasset High School swim team.

A mathematics teacher at Cohasset Middle School, Fortin believes endless opportunities exist to teach the swimmers not only technique but also lessons that can remain valuable throughout life.

The new team started the season by participating in an innovative program with Boston University's Sargent Center for Outdoor Education that focused on "team building." Leaders from BU work with such groups to target team experience level and help them expand their understanding of the team's goals.

Through interactive exercises and friendly exchange, the team was motivated by the leadership of Fortin and the BU facilitators and anxious to begin the season, Fortin says.

CHS boys hope to improve on last year's record

"We're looking for Trevor to give us leadership and play well for us."

Pinkus will see time at the 4-spot and should provide a strong rebounding presence for the Skippers. Bryant is a classic swingman and one of Cohasset's best shooters.

The Skippers will welcome back two integral parts of their tournament team from two years ago: senior Nick Arment and junior Jeff Brown. Arment, a reserve center in his sophomore season, sat out last year with a football-related injury.

Brown was a revelation his freshman season, using his impressive athleticism to get on the boards and score some points, particularly on offensive rebounds. After not coming out for the team last season, Brown is a welcome addition to this year's squad.

"Jeff has fit in nicely with the team," Bryant said. "He gives us a little more scoring inside."

The other juniors on the team are Justin Alexander and John McCarthy. Alexander was the starting center last season and gives Cohasset another sizeable, athletic presence in the paint.

"He could have a really nice season," Bryant said of Alexander. "He's a big rebounding forward for us, and gives us some leadership and toughness inside."

Bryant is also expecting big things from sophomore guard Patrick McCarthy, who can play both the point and off-guard positions. Three more sophomores – Jake Cuneo, Dave Snowdale and Kyle Pinkus – will provide further frontcourt depth for the Skippers.

After dropping their season-opener on Tuesday in Holbrook, Cohasset travels to league foe Mashpee tonight, and play their home opener Thursday against Holbrook.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse holds "Try-It" for new players

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is hosting its first ever "Try-It" for boys and girls in grades 3-8, on Wednesday, Dec. 28 from 9 - 11 a.m. in Pembroke.

This is not a "tryout" for experienced players, but rather a "try-it," a chance for kids who have never played lacrosse — but who are curious about it — to get a feel for what the game involves, to throw and catch with some personalized instruction and to run through some beginner drills.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will provide as much lacrosse gear as it can; while the group encourages Try-It participants to borrow equipment for the day from friends and neighbors, it does not want anyone to purchase sticks or protective gear just to participate in the Try-It.

"We recognize that kids may not be sure if they like lacrosse, or they may have some notion about what the sport is or is not all about, so we want to give them a chance to work with our coaches and to see if lacrosse is something they might want to participate in," says Chuck Jaffe, director of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "Lacrosse can be expensive too, and the Try-It is a way for kids to experience some drills, to make sure they are not afraid of the ball, and to get a sense of what it takes to play lacrosse before their parents ever go out and spend money buying equipment.

"The Try-It is a good chance to ask your kid 'Are you sure about lacrosse?' before spending money on equipment that might otherwise never get used."

There is no charge and no obligation for participating in the Try-It.

Due to space restrictions, the event is limited to "new players," defined as those who have never played a spring season with Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. Latecomers are welcome. Says Jaffe: "We know how busy the vacation week is, so it's fine if someone shows up late or has to leave early; we just want them to get a taste of what the game is all about."

The Try-It will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 28 from 9 a.m. - 11 a.m. on the turf field at ProShots Athletic Center in Pembroke. (For directions, go to www.proshotscenter.com <http://www.proshotscenter.com/>.) Because the field is indoors, the event will be held regardless of weather conditions.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will complete registration for the spring 2006 season on Saturday, January 7 at Cohasset High School. For information on Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, registration or the Try-It, see cohassetlacrosse.com or contact Chuck Jaffe at 781-383-9858 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

Cohasset Soccer Club Spring 2006 Travel registration

Registration for the Spring 2006 Season has begun! Boys and girls, U16 and U18 players, or any U12 or U14 players who did not participate in the fall season and who wish to play in the spring Coastal League season, may begin registering.

Registration can easily be completed online by going to the Club's web site www.cohassetsoccer.com. Registration will remain open until Dec. 31. After this date, players wishing to participate will be accepted only if there is room available on the applicable rosters. All players who already registered for the travel fall and spring seasons are automatically signed up for the spring session with no additional registration or fees required.

Cohasset has experienced strong success in Coastal League competition, with two to three teams each year over the past five years winning their League championship and then participating in the State's Tournament of Champions held each year at UMASS Amherst.

To be part of this winning tradition, players should register now to be assured a spot to play in the upcoming spring competition.

For additional information please go to the Club's web site or contact Mark Richardson @ 781-383-0998.

Wrestling Clinic, Grades 6-8

The Cohasset Recreation Department is pleased to offer a grade 6-8 wrestling clinic that will meet from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings through February 16, 2006.

The fee for this unique opportunity is $115 for the tri-weekly program. Checks should be made payable to: Town of Cohasset. Parents will be required to sign permission/registration form prior to participation. Registrations will be held at 6:30 p.m. at each meeting of the class, at the CHS wrestling room. Classes have started, but you may register at any class.

Leading the clinic will be Mr. Mark Laramee, four-time Division 3 state champion.

Indoor winter softball

Sponsored by South Shore Senior Softball, this indoor league for individuals 55 and over begins Monday, Jan. 9, 2006, from noon to 2 p.m.

For more information, contact Jim Hyde at (781)545-4681.

Youth lacrosse sign-up open through Jan. 7

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will finish its spring 2006 registration with a second sign-up day, on January 7 from 9 - 11:30 a.m. at Cohasset High School.

Parents can come to that sign-up day, or can request paperwork via e-mail and return it by January 8.

"After January 7, we would expect to be at our ideal roster size in a few different age groups, so signing up on time is important," says Chuck Jaffe, director of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "We will take everyone who signs up during the registration period, even if it puts us above our ideal roster sizes, but there's not going to be much hope for latecomers in certain age groups once the registration period closes."

To that end, Jaffe suggests that parents who have any concern about forgetting or missing the Jan. 7 final sign-up simply drop him an e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com or call 781-383-9858, telling him the number of children they are registering for the season.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will field boys and girls teams in the 11-and-Under (grades 3 and 4), 13-and-Under (grades 5 and 6) and 15-and-Under age groups.

At all levels, practices should not conflict with most other youth sports activities.

Registration for 2006 costs $150 for one player, $275 for two players and $100 per child thereafter.

To receive forms or get more information on Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, call 781-383-9858 or e-mail CAJaffe@aol.com <mailto:CAJaffe@aol.com>.

Golf All-Scholastics

Kevin Barber - Junior (Capt.)
Cohasset

Kevin Barber

An All-Scholastic honorable mention last year, Barber made an impressive jump in 2005 to lead the Skippers to a share of the South Shore League crown... Went 1-0-1 in his two matchups with fellow All-Scholastic Cody Cavicchi of Norwell, shooting a 38 and 40 in those two rounds... Earned four critical points in the league-clinching match against Carver, a 32-22 win for the Skippers... Shot one of his best rounds at Furnace Brook Golf Course in Quincy, earning medalist honors with a 36 in his team's 42-30 victory over the Presidents... Says one of the highlights of his season was seeing the solid play of the team's newcomers in the 3-6 positions in the lineup... Has played baseball and tennis in the past, but is now focusing on golf... Won a father/son tournament in Rhode Island with his father over the summer... Has written for the Mariner and has had work appeared in the CHS art magazine... May play golf in college, where he plans to study something in the realm of humanities... Coach Torin Sweeney called Barber during the season "one of the best players in the league," a well-deserved compliment

Bill Jackson - Junior
Hanover

Bill Jackson

Just a junior, Jackson is making waves on the Indians squad... Jackson had a stroke average of 39, consistently scoring points for the Hanover squad as the team's No. 2 man...His steady, consistent play helped the Indians cruise to an 11-3-1 record, placing them second behind Hingham in the Patriot League standings...A PL All-star, one of Jackson's greatest strengths on the course was his short game...Also a talented hockey player at HHS, Jackson made our All-Scholastic team in that sport last winter...This is his first appearance on the golf AS team...Just a junior, Jackson will captain the golf squad next Fall. Hanover coach Ron Turocy: "He drives well and putts well. He's well-known around the league and is one of its better golfers. He played well all year long and earned a lot of respect from the other schools."

Pat Cadigan - Senior (Capt.)
Hingham

This two-time Mariner All-Scholastic was Hingham's No. 1 man again this season and paced the Harbormen in a tough race for the Patriot League title...With key performances against Pembroke and Hanover, Cadigan helped Hingham capture the crown with a 12-2 PL record...The team was 13-3 overall...Cadigan had a scoring average of 37 and was the medalist or co-medalist in six matches this season...The senior captain finished a strong third at the Patriot League Championships...A four-year golfer at Hingham, Cadigan also shined in the postseason, helping the Harbormen capture a fourth place finish at the Div. 2 South Sectional...The PL All-star competes year round in the sport and recently won the Titlest Tournament in Rhode Island back in October...He plans to attend golf school next season, looking at both Methodist and Tampa. Hingham coach Jack Curran: "He's not a super long hitter, but he's great on the greens and plays with a lot of confidence. He's the elite golfer on the team."

Cody Cavicchi - Sophomore
Norwell

Cody Cavicchi

Extremely gifted three-sport athlete makes his second straight appearance on the golf All-Scholastic team... Got off to a strong start this season and didn't look back... In two matches against Cohasset, shot a 37 and 40 against fellow All-Scholastic Kevin Barber... Was bested in the season opener between the two teams, 35-37, but the 40 in the rematch led to a tie, 4.5 holes each... Also shot a 37 against Sacred Heart on Sept. 21, and followed that with the same score the next day against Abington... Scored a key 5.5 points for his team in a road win over Plymouth North late in the season... A Mariner All-Scholastic honorable mention in hockey last winter as a freshman, Cavicchi also played varsity lacrosse last spring... Along with classmates Dan Dempsey and Mike White, is part of a strong, young nucleus for the NHS golf program... Norwell coach Ken Camerota: "Cody made the switch from the number-two starter in his freshman year and has been very valuable for us this year."

Devon Crowley - Junior
Rockland

He missed his sophomore golf season after transferring back to Rockland, but made his presence known in his junior campaign this year...Was one of the Patriot League's best golfers, going dropping only a pair of matches all season long...Went 12-2-2 this season, notching a big tie against Duxbury's Michael Gunderson, the Globe's Div. 2 Player of the Year this season...Finished very strong at the Div. 3 South Sectionals, earning a trip to the State Individual match...There he took 23rd under extremely tough conditions...Shot under par three times this season on Rockland's home course, going three under against Randolph...Had a stroke average of 3.07 in match and scoring play this year...Also a talented hockey player at RHS, Crowley will return to the golf squad next Fall. Rockland coach Jack Murphy: "He has tremendous mechanics, a flawless swing, and excellent course management. He understands the game and plays within himself. He doesn't get rattled and he has a great vision of the game."

Hunter Talcott - Senior (Capt.)
Scituate

Hunter Talcott

Simply put, one of the best high school golfers this area has seen in recent history... Won the Div. 3 state championship in 2004, and followed that up with a sixth place finish this season at Pembroke Country Club... At that same course the week before, shot a 79, making three birdies in the last five holes to qualify for the championships by a stroke... Consistently in the mid- to late-30s on his home course of Hatherly, including a 36 on Sept. 19 in a tri-meet with Hingham and East Bridgewater... Also fired an even-par 36 on Hingham's South Shore Country Club on Oct. 6... A four-time Patriot League All-Star... Finished second out of 30 golfers at this year's league All-Star match... Still deciding on college, where he plans to study for a career in golf course design... Filling his shoes will be huge task for next year's Sailors team... Scituate coach Bob Beatty: "Hunter cannot be replaced. With his love and expertise for the game, no one has ever reached that point in the history of the program. It may take 20 or 30 years for someone to match his accomplishments."

Pat Johnson - Junior
Pembroke

Zach Ripatrazione - Junior
Pembroke

Youth movement for girls hoops

Grossman will take charge in their tri-captain roles. Senior Lisa Musto will also play a substantial role on the court.

Juniors Haley Haracz, Lacey Richardson, and Aisling Guinee will represent the junior class on the squad. Fans will remember the buzzer beating points Haracz scored last February against Hull to send the Skippers into the playoffs. Sophomore Anna Haggerty will join the team for her second year.

Of these eight upperclassmen, six have seen plenty of varsity playing time.

"While I am bringing up six freshmen, we still have some very experienced players," said Levangie. "Our captains know the game very well as do many of the other upperclassmen."

The '05 graduations of Casey Anderson and Nicole Whitney created two major roles to fill. Anderson led the South Shore League for two consecutive years in points per game. Veteran observers called Whitney's defense "the best in the league."

"Their [Anderson and Whitney's] presence will clearly be missed on the court," admits Levangie. "However, we can fill these spots with a team effort."

Levangie went on to say that this year's lineup requires a much more balanced team playing rather than having one or two players carry the team. Lieb-Lappen agrees.

"We can't rely on one person [Anderson] to score all of our points any more," she said. "We need to use our speed and work on our shooting if we want to put up the points as a team."

Speaking of experience, Levangie brings a sizeable amount to the court. The '05-'06 team marks his sixth season at the helm of the Skippers program. When you add in his years coaching at B.C. High School and Westwood, he has completed an amazing total of 40 years in basketball leadership.

He has also walked in his players' sneakers. Levangie filled a guard position for the Division 2 Merrimack College team. Levangie's son Jack, along with Kay Long, will also assume vital roles in assisting him.

So far, the Skippers have shown rapid improvement. In scrimmages with Scituate, Quincy, and Notre Dame, Levangie noted progressively better play in each game.

Hopefully, the Skippers team will come together to meet the skill levels of teams like Carver, Abington, Harwich, and Norwell, all expected to be contenders in the South Shore League.

Keeping emotions in Czech

16-team tournament.

As the drawing for that final pot began, there were two groups any American soccer fan clearly did not want a part of. There was Group C, the infamous "Group of Death," which had already drawn world powers Argentina and Holland, as well as one of the best African sides, Ivory Coast. There was also Group E, the hereby named "Group of Near-Death," featuring a traditional superpower (Italy), one of the best teams in the world (the Czech Republic), and an underrated Ghana team.

As we now know, the U.S. was indeed drawn into the Group of Near-Death. And they deserved better. They most certainly should have been one of the seeded teams in Pot 1, ahead of Mexico, who cannot beat anyone of consequence outside their nation's capital. And for that, they were rewarded with one of the easiest groups, with only Portugal standing as a threat to defeat them.

Then there are the Spanish, perennial underachievers, who did less than nothing to deserve their entrance into the Group of Patsies with Ukraine, Tunisia and Saudi Arabia. Honestly, this for a team that crashes and burns in every major tournament and could not even beat out Serbia and Montenegro in the European qualifying stages? There should be dancing in the streets of Madrid, Barcelona and Sevilla for weeks on end for this remarkable turn of good fortune.

But, you won't hear U.S. coach Bruce Arena complain. And, after a couple days of thought, you won't hear me complaining, either. There is one simple reason for that.

The U.S. can beat the Italians.

This is not your father's Azzurri, or even your older brother's for that matter. Italy has been in a World Cup spiral since Roberto Baggio's errant penalty kick in the 1994 title game shootout gave the trophy to Brazil. In 1998, Italy bowed out in the quarterfinals to eventual champion France, and in 2002, went down in the Round of 16 to host South Korea.

If the trend continues in that direction, Italy will not even make it out of the group stages this time around. Can that actually happen? Yes, and the biggest reason why is a relative lack of world-class attacking players. Gone are the days where the likes of Baggio, Alessandro Del Piero and Christian Vieri dominated up front.

Vieri is now a shell of his former self (ask anyone in Milan, they will tell you), and if manager Marcello Lippi is wise, he will leave Vieri off the team altogether. Del Piero is hardly a lock to make the squad either, although his decent form of late as a substitute for Juventus could see him to Germany. Luca Toni and Alberto Gilardino are solid, but far from invincible. The American defense can cope with them.

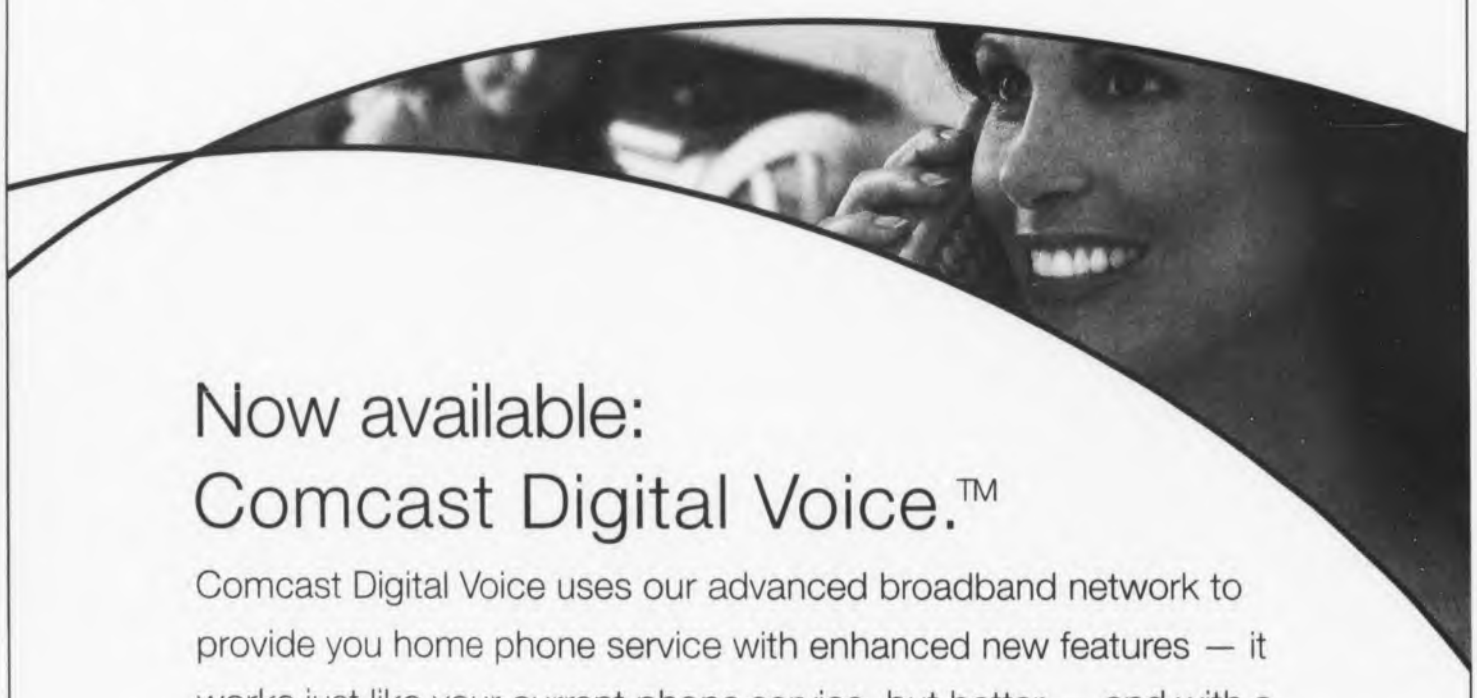
Only Roma's Francesco Totti should make American defenders lose sleep at night. If the Yanks can find a way to control him, they will be that much closer to victory.

The staple of Italian soccer is strong defending, and the side that will take the pitch in Germany this summer will be no different, led by the likes of Juventus' Fabio Cannavaro and AC Milan's Alessandro Nesta. Both have practiced with and played against top-notch forwards, to be sure, better than American's best in Landon Donovan and DeMarcus Beasley. But rarely have they seen the speed and intangibles that Donovan and Beasley bring to the table.

In short, a draw or even a win, likely by a 1-0 score, is far from out of the question for the U.S., who open their World Cup campaign on June 12 against the Czech Republic, the team to beat in Group E. If the U.S. can get any sort of result against the Czechs, they will be in good stead heading into their subsequent matches against Italy and Ghana, who are certainly not a pushover with the likes of Chelsea's Michael Essien and former Juventus player Stephen Appiah.

One thing in the Americans' favor is a lack of pressure on the home front. The domestic press have already downgraded the home team's chances of making it out of its group. Such is not the case in, say, England, where the BBC commentators just minutes after the draw were already talking about the Brits' inevitable spot in the semifinals.

Part of the reasoning was, to quote one individual choking on his own hubris, "an automatic six points against Paraguay and Trinidad and Tobago" (teams get three points in the standings for a win). Trinidad should easily result in a win, yes, but Paraguay is far from a pushover. A tie against them, which is quite possible, would leave England in a somewhat perilous position going into their third and final group game against Sweden.



And even if the English do win their group, and even if they do get out of the Round of 16, a quarterfinal match looms with the runner-up from the Group of Death, either Argentina or Holland. I wouldn't fancy England's chances against either side. And lest we forget, the English would have to overcome the raging incompetence of manager Sven Goran-Eriksson, who can't seem to establish a consistent attack despite having arguably the best group of attacking players in the world (outside of Brazil) in Wayne Rooney, Frank Lampard, Steven Gerrard and Michael Owen.

Anyway, back to the U.S. and the lack of expectations. The team was not expected to do much in the 2002 World Cup either; they had no chance of beating Portugal or of getting out of their group, the experts said. Well, we know what happened there. Arena and his charges beat Portugal and made it to the quarterfinals; Jack Edwards' eyes are still seeing the glory.

Can the Americans repeat the feat? We will see in June.

Coach sees great future for Scituate-Cohasset swimmers

Fortin is enthusiastic about the joint team's first year.

"My goals for this season are clear," he said. "This is a rebirth of a great sport in Cohasset and Scituate. Because of the support it has received and the dedication of the kids, new life has been given to this project.

"I want to establish a sense of team unity…an understanding among the kids that we act as one even though there are members from two schools," Fortin continues. "Right now, the record of the team is secondary. We have come such a long way because there is a renewed enthusiasm for this activity and it can only grow as time passes."

He said since this is a new program and he doesn't know all the capabilities of the team, "it will be a learning experience for all involved. There is so much kids can gain from participating in this sport."

Fortin reflected on his own experience on a swim team.

"There really isn't a lot that's different from when I was their age and on swim teams," he says. "I try to recall what I would have liked to know when I was in their shoes. Some kids connect right away; others take a bit longer. Giving them support and challenging them is how I help them to learn some really important skills."

Fortin says being on a team is really an extension of the classroom.

"Instead of writing things on a white board as I do in math classes, I use different tools when coaching swimming…for example, I hold a stop watch," he says. "But the lesson is the same: You can find pride in your accomplishments when you work hard."

Fortin is very familiar with meeting challenges and time management. In addition to teaching and coaching, he also is working on a graduate degree and attends school several evenings each week. He uses these experiences to set an example for the team.

"Participating in swimming teaches lessons these kids are unaware they are learning right now," he says. "The more you have to do, the more you can do. This teaches discipline, managing and budgeting time, meeting deadlines and how to do all these things efficiently.

"Swimming also forces everyone at some point to deal with setbacks, realize that it's OK to fail and you pick yourself back up and move on."

Having this opportunity in the public schools is an important factor as the students prepare to choose colleges, Fortin says.

"There is no doubt that colleges want athletes," Fortin says. "Of course some schools recruit swimmers, but unlike many sports, this is one that can be practiced in any part of the country all year round."

Fortin is amazed by the dedication and passion of the parents and other residents who worked through the summer and early fall to raise funds for this program.

"The support of the parents here is fantastic and all I can say is, 'Thank you'," he says.

A committee comprised of Cohasset and Scituate residents formed earlier in the year to generate interest and raise the money to make it possible for the two towns to form a joint swim team.

Affectionately called the "SCICOH's" — a title that combines the names of the two towns — the team is grateful to the Knights of Columbus in Scituate and to the Cohasset Summer Swim Team that made the first donations to Scituate and Cohasset members, respectively. Many local businesses and individuals were extremely generous as they contributed to the development of this group, Fortin says.

As the program expands and the team grows as is anticipated, loyal support from these sources as well as new ones will be necessary. Fortin remains grateful, moved by the kindness of these supporters, and confident that this sponsorship will continue.

"At the lobster and clambake fundraiser last fall [held at sunset one evening at Cohasset Harbor and supported by Atlantica] the good will was unbelievable!" he recalls. "People attended just to wish us well and encourage us.

"Many didn't even have kids in the schools but felt it was beneficial for the towns. It was one of those moments that leaves you with a really nice feeling and you see how good people really are," he says.

Sci-Coh starts season on right foot

By Caitlin Donovan
CORRESPONDENT

The Scituate-Cohasset Sci-Coh Swim Team is showing signs of a promising season. With six returning seniors and numerous returning lettermen, just on the Scituate side, the Sci-Coh swim team is bound to come out with a winning season.

Captains for this 2005-2006 season include seniors Maura Whalen, Kerry Sorensen, and Jennifer Noonan from Scituate, and senior Mamme Daley from Cohasset. Scituate, together with Cohasse,t is shaping up to be an unbeatable combination.

Sorensen is optimistic about the season, saying, "I am very excited for this season. We're working really hard and I think we have the potential to do very well this season."

The rest of the team members are enthusiastic as well. Returning lettermen junior Justin Damaso says, "I've never seen a team work so hard. This year we are the real deal."

There are also two new faces on the Sci-Cohs this year: head coach Jon Fortin, a math teacher at Cohasset Middle School, and assistant coach Alissa Atonowicz, an english teacher at Scituate High School. Fortin is an experienced swimmer, competing for four years in high school as well as four years in college. Atonowicz also swam in high school.

Both coaches run an extremely hard practice, often having the team swim up to 100 laps per day. The Sci-Cohs had their first meet at Middleboro High School on Dec. 9. It was a League Invitational Relay meet in which all of the teams competed against each other at one meet. The first event, the Sci-Cohs were awarded first place and continued to succeed from there.

The team recently had a meet on Tuesday, Dec. 13, and has an upcoming meet against Hingham High School on Jan. 5, 2006.

Caitlin Donovan is a member of the Scituate-Cohasset swim team who will provide the Mariner with reports throughout the year.

Needy find food, hope at pantries

Editor's note: This is one in a series of articles focusing in the various food pantries which serve South Shore communities.

By Seth Jacobson
CORRESPONDENT

The two subjects of the following story chose not to use their last names.

Laura never thought she'd have to use a food pantry, but because of an unfortunate set of circumstances, she did.

These days, Laura doesn't need the assistance but she still visits the Norwell Food Pantry — as a volunteer.

Robin has been using the Norwell Food Pantry on and off for the past 12 years. She's a single mother with four kids living at home and she's been struggling to keep things afloat financially for a long time.

Both women are residents of Norwell, considered to be one of the more affluent towns on the South Shore. Both women say hunger is something that is everywhere, even in the most prosperous cities and towns.

"There were a bunch of things that happened that got us in the position we were in," Laura said, referring to the time she was using the food pantry.

Laura, her husband and their three children moved to Norwell from Plainville a few years ago to be closer to family in Scituate.

Laura's husband is in construction and has always made pretty good money. But last year, things started to go wrong.

"He got laid off for a month," Laura said, adding she and her husband still had a financial cushion they had saved, so they both figured things would be OK.

But then Laura got into a car accident and was forced to buy a new vehicle.

Shortly after that, her husband's appendix burst and he was told he would not be able to work for a while.

"It was a six-week period that he could not work," Laura said, adding her husband did not get sick pay. She noted he didn't have disability insurance, either.

"There was no money coming in," she explained. "It just seemed like everything went wrong in a short period of time."

Laura and her husband were forced to use more of the financial cushion they had, which was dwindling away.

Laura and her family were struggling but they didn't immediately go to the food pantry for help.

"Coming forward wasn't even a thought for me," she said.

Laura said it was her son's teacher who noticed something was wrong and called Laura to ask her if everything was OK. Laura said everything was fine but the teacher called Norwell Food Pantry Director Kathy King Tedeschi and told her she thought Laura and her family might be having some financial problems.

After that, Laura started using the food pantry and soon discovered the value of the facility.

"There was an element of embarrassment for me at first," Laura said. "I didn't really want to come forward and say we needed help. I felt like something like that could never happen to us."

After about six weeks, Laura's husband was able to go back to work and the family did not have to use the food pantry anymore. But after the ordeal, Laura felt like she wanted to give back, so she became a volunteer at the food pantry.

"I was just so thankful," Laura said. "I'm glad the food pantry was there when we needed it. And I could not believe how kind people were to us there. I saw the true spirit of giving and we were on the receiving end."

Laura is now training to be a nurse and knows a lot about nutrition. That knowledge makes her a valuable volunteer.

"It's great that she has a nutrition background," Tedeschi said.

Robin said she has no problem using the food pantry. She knows the facility is there to help and she knows there's nothing wrong with getting a helping hand.

Volunteer Chris Fitzgerald finds it rewarding to see how food pantries assist community members. She said it is never easy to seek help, but once people do there is a great sense of relief.

Robin, 42, was married at the age of 19. She would like to be able to go to work again but noted that's a tough thing to do when you're taking care of four kids. Robin has been living in Norwell for the past 22 years and added it's only getting more expensive.

"Because I married young, I never acquired many skills," Robin said. "I've made a few bad choices along the way. It's been hard over the years. You're eligible for everything but you qualify for nothing."

She explained she receives food stamps and fuel assistance but does not qualify for welfare or many other state assistance programs. She supports herself and her family on the $180 in child support she gets each week.

Up until about eight years ago, Robin was a chef a restaurant in Boston. At the same time, she was going to school.

"I was gone 80 hours a week and I just couldn't do that anymore," she said.

Robin said for the past 12 years, she's used the Norwell Food Pantry intermittently. She found out about the place through the Council on Aging.

A vegetarian, Robin gets fresh vegetables from the pantry when she visits there. She said the shelves there are also stocked with things like cereal, coffee, laundry detergent and canned goods.

"The food pantry is so helpful and (Tedeschi) is such an amazing person," Robin said. "She's done so much for us."

Robin agreed with Laura in that coming forward and admitting you're hungry is not an easy thing to do, but is often necessary.

"It's horrifying," she said. "It's very hard to come forward but there's no shame in asking for help. If you have kids, you have to do it for them. You can't have pride in that situation. I never thought it would happen to me but it did. Nobody ever thinks it will happen to them."

Both Laura and Robin said anyone who is out there going hungry should not hesitate to visit a food pantry in their area.

"It's not easy but I would tell people that there's no sense in not coming forward," Laura said. "Unfortunate things can happen to anybody. You should be fed. It's a human right."

"If you need it, use it," Robin added. "Anyone can go hungry. It's not just substance abusers or people who are lazy. I'm a person who was in a situation that just snowballed. There's no shame in it, it's something that just happened. I'm here because of real circumstances. My advice to other people out there would be to make the call if you need to. And don't lose hope. You can get out of the box but you have to want to try. Believe me, I know how it feels."

Laura said she really enjoys volunteering at the food pantry and explains what she went through to many of the people who visit there.

"I relay my own experience to some of the people who come in," she said.

Laura said as soon as her husband went back to work, she knew she wanted to volunteer.

"It was just an immediate reaction for me," she explained. "I had to do something. When you receive, you want to give back. Volunteering is probably one of the greatest things you can do. It's important to remember there are a lot of people out there who don't have what you have, so it's important to help.

"Going through something that we went through really grounds you. It makes you see what's real."

Tedeschi said she, along with other residents, the VNA and area churches founded the Norwell Food Pantry in 1991. The pantry is located at Norwell Town Hall.

"There are so many programs we're doing through the food pantry," she added, noting people can get involved in the Adopt-a-Family program or the Kids-in-Need initiative.

Tedeschi said she's seen a lot of inspiring people walk through the doors of the food pantry and said Robin and Laura are two good examples.

"Laura was just so appreciative when she was getting the help," Tedeschi said. "She always told me that as soon as she got back on her feet, she wanted to help. Now, she does. The compassion she was shown she now shows to everyone else.

"Robin is so grateful for everything people do, and she's really just a wonderful person. It just goes to show you that everyone's situation is different. Anyone can have a good day or a bad day, a good year or a bad year. And we're here to fill in the blanks."

'Dream Team' falls to Rockets

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

The Harlem Rockets were in town on Thursday providing entertainment to the residents of Cohasset with their unique and comical playing style. The Rockets matched up pretty well against "Cohasset's Dream Team", which featured such stars as Joel Antolini and Police Chief Hussey.

Unfortunately the Rockets took the win, but it was all in good fun as the citizens of Cohasset were treated to a basketball game where at least one of the two teams could dunk the basketball. Oh well, all's well that ends well I guess.

The High School Band and Jazz Ensemble, along with the High School Chorus successfully recorded a CD on Friday, which will be available for purchase at the High School Winter Concert on Dec. 21st. The music department is also trying to reschedule its holiday walk-around concert that was cancelled on Friday because of the snow. Old news aside, let us begin with the smorgasbord of new news that I have for you this week.

• The Social Awareness is still sponsoring the Clothing Drive in both the High School and Middle School. Receptacles are located at all of the main entrances around the entire school. This campaign will be active until Christmas so make an effort to donate anything that you can.

• Attention students in Grades 9-11, if you have not yet received your school picture, you can pick it up in the main office this week. Picture retakes will be this Friday at 10:30 a.m. and the forms for this are available in the Main Office.

• The National Honor Society will have met at lunch on Thursday in Mr. Newkirk's room.

• The High School Winter Concert will be on Wednesday, Dec. 21st in the High School auditorium at 7:30 p.m. The CD that was made will be available at said concert.

• The Art Magazine is looking for submissions and will meet every Tuesday. Also, the Art Magazine is looking for submissions for the cover of the Band/Chorus CD that was made. Visit the Cohasset Arts Boosters web site at www.cohassetarts-boosters.com.

• Students remember, you are not allowed to bring your backpacks to class any longer; they must be left in your locker.

• Attention seniors: If you are interested in an AFL-CLO Scholarship, sign up to take the labor history exam before January 2006. See Ms. Leahy in the guidance office to order your test. It will be ongoing through Jan. 6, 2006.

• The Cohasset Basketball Boosters is inviting everyone to the Girls Varsity Hoop Home Opener on Friday in the High School gymnasium at 6:30 p.m. against Mashpee. Students will be admitted for free and can win one of five gift certificates to The Good Sport.

• Congratulations to all seniors that have been admitted to college thus far. The list is as follows; Jessica Wheelwright, Prescott Busk, Katherine Whoriskey, Daniel MacCarthy, Vanessa Plante, Erin Liddell, Caitlin Sanchez, Jess Bilbo, Remy Lee, Chris Reynolds, Mark Bouchard, Aaron Bigley, Ben Bolster, Susan Curry, Kaitlin James, Will Pinkus, Aly Belz, Jess Hinman,Steve Abrams, Lisa Musto Devin Smith, Katherine Murphy, Ellen Tarpey, and Kate McBride. Please let Ms. Leahy know about any acceptances as they are received.

• A motivational speaker, Mark Mainella spoke to the Freshman class on Friday in an assembly in the High School auditorium.

That's all the news for this week. Let's make it a habit this year to attend the Varsity sports games this winter; it would be great to see the stands filled with students and exuding energy. Remember to be safe in the upcoming weeks as we all know that the winter season can be dangerous if not approached accordingly.

The high school concert band records a CD last Friday afternoon. The chorus and jazz ensemble were also recorded. The CDs will be available at the Winter Concert on Dec. 21.

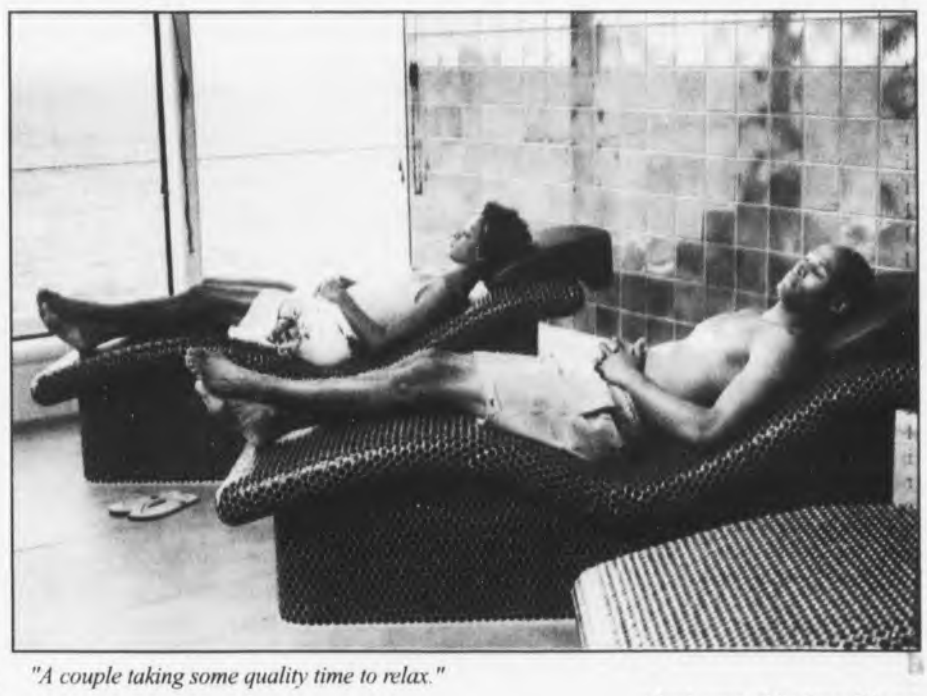
Cruise with the kids on Caribbean's gleaming Jewel

By TOM MASHBURG

Aboard the Jewel of the Seas. Somewhere out on the Atlantic Ocean between St. Thomas and Bermuda, our 8-year-old daughter scaled a 30-foot rock wall -- to loud applause.

Our family of three was sailing on the Jewel of the Seas, Royal Caribbean Cruise Line's first vessel to offer 10-day passages from Boston to the Caribbean (after this year's experiment, the line decided to reposition the ship on the more popular weeklong New England/Canada cruises next fall).



The climbing wall is a signature feature on the line's sleek, modern ships. And Annie was the youngest of the 2,161 passengers on this mid-October voyage to give it a try. Her triumphant climb, witnessed by an exuberant throng, was a soaring example of how cruising can be an ideal family vacation.

My wife, Barbara, and I had wanted to celebrate our 10th anniversary with a classy, romantic boat trip. But with Annie in tow, we needed a ship that would keep kids on the go (and out of our hair, at least some of the time). We got just what we wanted from the Jewel, an airy, elegant 2-year-old vessel with acres of windows -- there are ocean views from nearly everywhere -- superbly friendly service and full-day children's programs managed by a young, warmhearted (and well-trained) staff.

"The ship caters well to children, including a kids' pool with a long looping slide."

"A couple taking some quality time to relax."

Annie is outgoing, and she bonded her first morning at the Adventure Ocean center with Kirsten, a 9-year-old from Lynn who was traveling with her mom and grandmother. As the days floated by, we let her loose more and more to roam the vessel with her new friend, and felt supremely confident when she was in the children's program (open till midnight) that crew and counselors were always on alert.

That left time for me and Barbara to enjoy the ship itself.

Our first two days on the Jewel were at sea, with no stops, and the ship steamed full speed -- about 25 knots. The weather was a bit soggy, but Barbara and I discovered a great place to hide out shipboard -- the "thermal suite" in the vessel's elegant spa. Here, for an extra $15 per day, you get to recline on toasty, tile-covered chaises shaped like deck chairs while watching the rough surf through a panoramic picture window. For us, this relaxing place felt like a private cruise within the cruise.

While we chilled, Annie took full advantage of the high-energy Adventure Ocean program. The counselors concocted endless scavenger hunts and other challenges, or let the kids amuse themselves in a suite filled with arcade and computer games. As the weather warmed, the kids shifted onto the sports deck, with a basketball-volleyball court, and into the kids' pool, with a long looping slide.

Cabin life is minimal aboard a cruise ship, but our "deluxe, ocean-view stateroom" featured a balcony large enough for two to sit in splendid privacy over morning coffee. More delightful, for Annie, was the child-size bunk-bed berth above our queen-size bed, which folded into the ceiling and had a safety rail and ladder for access. She slept as soundly there as Gilligan in his hammock.

Royal Caribbean works feverishly to provide highly attentive round-the-clock service, and this was personified by our cabin attendant, a gentle Indonesian named Putu who doted on Annie, delighting her with towels folded like animals left on her bed each evening.

Our cruise carried a crew of 865 and it was impossible not to be impressed by men and women from 35 nations striving to speak English and working with great energy (the ship was fanatically clean), all the while knowing they will remain onboard for another cruise, and another.

Cruises are in large part about eating, and the Jewel has an ideal mix of formal and informal dining. Annie could join us for breakfast or lunch in the Windjammer, a huge buffet-style restaurant on the Lido deck. To cut down on lines, Royal Caribbean devised a system of food stations for individual courses (meats, sandwiches, omelets, make-your-own pizzas). Still, it's in the Windjammer that you realize you're on a "mass cruise," as passengers converge from every angle during peak eating hours. (Another place you notice this is the Lido deck pools on a sunny day; the ship also has an indoor solarium pool for non-sunny days.)

Barbara and I supped elegantly at 8 each night in the formal Tides dining room, while Annie and her new friends from the kids' program ate with Brainy Brian, Loony Lisa, Rowdy Randy, Chili Pepper Pamela and other counselors. Some days we met her for an afternoon snack or evening nosh at the ship's hideaway diner called the Seaview Cafe on the 12th deck, which offered a kid's dream of endless hot dogs, burgers and onion rings.

Dining options also included two specialty restaurants -- the clubby 90-seat Chops Grille, with superb steak options, and the romantic Portofino, an excellent Italian restaurant, both with ocean views. (Dining is $20 per person extra but worth the price.)

Sailing out of Boston, the cruise had a heavy New England feel, with more than 60 percent of the passengers from the region. Red Sox hats and Hub accents abounded (the sports bar was filled when Boston sporting events were on). A featured performer was piano-bar maestro "Barry from Boston" (Barry Rocklin), whose bottomless repertoire and witty, winning way with patrons left the leather-rich oceanside Schooner Bar jukking and swaying for 10 nights straight.

The Coral Theater, a plush two-deck venue, hosted fine shows every night -- comedians, pianists, tango superstars and the Royal Caribbean's own song-and-dance troupe, which performed excellent adaptations of Broadway numbers. One night, Annie and others from the kids' program, dressed as pirates, marched onto the stage and shouted a rousing "Aargghh!" The applause was deafening.

This is the stuff family vacation memories are made of.

The Jewel of the Seas is wintering in the western Caribbean, doing six-night cruises from Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Rates are from $449 per person inside, $749 for oceanview. Rates for weeklong New England/Canada cruises from Boston next fall are priced from $999.

For reservations on Royal Caribbean cruises, call 800-327-6700 or go to www.royal-caribbean.com

Poetry circle and labyrinth walk

Old Ship Church in Hingham will celebrate its 10th annual Winter Solstice Poetry Circle and Labyrinth walk on Wednesday, Dec. 21, at 7:30 p.m. Each seasonal crossing time, Old Ship conducts an evening of poetry to honor gifts of the season and of time's passing, because poetry holds the power to lend courage and give vision. In this darkening time, and during a hectic week, the community is invited to bring a poem that sheds light on something true, or just come and listen, and enjoy a respite. Following the readings participants will walk the labyrinth, accompanied by Joanne Cavatorta on Celtic harp. Refreshments will be served. For information call 781-749-0543. The Labyrinth is located in the Old Ship Church Parish Hall, 107 Main St., (rear) in downtown Hingham.

The following poem by Rachel Field was submitted by Elizabeth Torrey:

Something Told the Wild Geese

Something told the wild geese
It was time to go.
Though the field lay golden
Something whispered, 'Snow.'
Leaves were green and stirring,
Berries, lustre-glossed,
But beneath warm feathers
Something cautioned, 'Frost.'
All the sagging orchards
Steamed with amber spice,
But each wild breast stiffened
At remembered ice.
Something told the wild geese
It was time to fly –
Summer sun was on their wings,
Winter in their cry.

Religious traditions at Glastonbury Abbey

This seventh annual series of "Listening to Other Voices" has the theme of "Religion and the World We Live In." The title was motivated by the abundance of news items that were defined or interpreted by a religious perspective, from the Tsunami to stem cell research, from war to political elections, from creationism to end of life issues. Although religion can be polarizing among people, this year's speakers have found it to be inspirational in shaping their life's work and its potential to draw people together. The series will include presentations by speakers representing the Christian, Jewish, Hindu, Buddhist and Muslim traditions. Each of us is asked to listen to these voices in dialogue with our own particular religious tradition.

This series continues on the following dates at 7:15 p.m. at Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center, 16 Hull St.,

The remainder of the series includes:

• A Documentary — Produced by Rachel Antell, narrated by Dr. Diana Eck, featuring three women — Jan. 19, 2006 — "Acting on Faith: Women and New Religious Activism in America."

• Dr. Mohammad Dadrass and Westy Egmont — Feb. 16 — "One Nation? Under God."

• Tania Leontov — April 6 — "The Common Heart, and Inter-Religious Dialogue Lasting 21 Years."

• Margaret O'Brien Steinfels — May 4 — "Catholic Culture and American Culture."

Young business leader Hagearty honored

Dependable Cleaners announces its president, Christa Hagearty, was honored as one of Boston's "best and brightest young business leaders" in the Boston Business Journal's eighth Annual "40 Under 40" supplement.

Hagearty, one of only 40 Massachusetts winners named from thousands of entries received, was acknowledged for: tripling the company's sales in nine years; her recent investment of more than $1 million in environmentally friendly, state-of-the-art equipment; the company's full benefits packages for employees; and its charitable community support.

With a full-time nanny and a staff of 250, Hagearty continues her family's legacy of having "a passion for people and service."

Town counsel named Massachusetts 'Super Lawyer'

Cohasset Town Counsel Paul DeRensis

DeRensis' practice is concentrated in the area of municipal law,

Cohasset Town Counsel Paul DeRensis was recently named a Massachusetts Super Lawyer for 2005 along with five other members of his firm, Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis & Holland, P.C. The list is based on surveys of more than 32,000 lawyers across the state designed to select the top five percent of Massachusetts' attorneys in more than 60 practice areas, as Super Lawyers.

DeRensis's practice is concentrated in the area of municipal law, and he was one of only nine lawyers statewide recognized as a Super Lawyer in that field. All of the Massachusetts Super Lawyers were cited in the November issue of Boston Magazine. For more information call Beverley O'Reilly, administration director at Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis & Holland P.C., 617-951-2300 or William White publisher at Law & Politics, 206-282-9527.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

THE ZINC-AIR BATTERY

The zinc-air battery found in most of today's hearing instruments uses air from outside the battery to react with zinc inside the battery to generate energy. Pulling the tab from the top of the cell (allowing air to travel inside) activates the battery. Replacing the tab, however, will not prolong battery life. Zinc-air batteries deliver more energy than the older mercury or silver batteries. They are also smaller, enabling them to work well in any of the canal-style instruments. While the size of the battery is one indication of its storage energy and service life, the amount of energy being drawn from it is another. The more constant the draw, the longer the battery life.

If you have questions about hearing instruments, or if you need to talk to a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist about your hearing loss, we want you to know that you are always welcome here at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. Perhaps you have a hearing aid that sits in the back of a drawer somewhere instead of in your ear because it did not live up to its reputation. If so, bring it to us at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, and let us take a look. All the hearing instruments we sell are custom-fitted to each individual, and complete customer satisfaction is our goal for everyone who come to us. PH: 781-337-1144.

P.S. The energy requirements of many of today's advanced hearing instruments may translate into battery service lives measured in hours instead of days.

School chief seeks hefty budget hike

More teachers, programs needed

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Meeting balanced the 2006 budget, bringing that fiscal year to a close. Now, it's on to fiscal 2007 and at this preliminary stage, the school department is predicting it will need an increase of roughly 13.5 percent.

At the Dec. 15 school committee budget hearing, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh presented a budget overview with a proposed bottom line figure of $14,022,455. The new figure is $1,678,073 more than was allocated for fiscal 2006.

"We have a quality program and we are hopeful to maintain what we have and move forward with our program," she said.

Walsh said the figure reflects the needs and goals of the schools — as outlined in department's five-year Strategic Plan — but reminded the school committee the numbers are not set in stone. A contract has not been negotiated with the teachers' union, and the salary line item could be increasing with that settlement, she said.

Walsh said this year she continued with last year's practice of zero-based budgeting.

Walsh said there are two offsets to this year's budget which the school department can likely count on. She said the increase in athletic fees will likely generate $81,000 for the school department. In addition, there is roughly $150,089 in circuit breaker funding coming the school's way from the state. Circuit breaker money is reimbursement from the state for part of the out-of-district special education charges. With the two offsets, Walsh said the budget request becomes $13,791,366, or an 11.7 percent increase over fiscal 2006.

Bus fees

Could help bottom line

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Implementing bus fees is at the top of the list of finding ways to save on transportation costs for the school department in fiscal 2007.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh has sent out bid information to companies that might be interested in taking over all or a portion of the school's transportation program as a cost-saving measure. The school committee must wait until bids are received in mid-January before it can make any decisions on whether it would like to have the service outsourced. In the interim, the school committee is weighing the pros and cons of charging a fee to students who ride the bus.

"Regardless of what we do with the bids, this is a decision we need to make," said Walsh about implementing fees.

At the Dec. 15 school committee meeting, School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said he has been working with Transportation Coordinator Kelly Dickson to come up with a real-

The development team hasn't changed but the plans have.

Back before the planning board Wednesday, Dec. 14, business partners David Calhoun and Tom Ragno — who together with David's wife Kelli make up King Taylor Cohasset, LLC, the company which brought the Cedarmere development through the permitting process — unveiled plans for their latest joint-venture.

The company has purchased roughly 14 acres of land next to Cedarmere and would like to build a new subdivision, which will have a total of six single-family homes. The existing house on the land, formerly owned by Charles Flint, will remain, and five new homes will be added to the property.

"Our philosophy is to try to put 2-pounds of potatoes into a 5-pound sack."
— David Calhoun, developer

"We've taken the same approach as Cedarmere," said Calhoun, adding his company has had enough experience working with the planning board to know what it likes to see. He said he is very familiar with the board's "5-pound sack test," as members often joke they don't want to see overly-dense developments which try to fit "10-pounds of potatoes into a 5-pound sack."

"Our philosophy is to try to put 2-pounds of potatoes into a 5-pound sack," Calhoun said.

Architect Jim Sandell, who also designed the buildings for Cedarmere, said the topography of the land will have the homes spread out over the rolling hills. The smallest lot will be roughly 40,000 square feet, and the largest will be roughly 180,000 square feet. "They're going to have to be designed to take full advantage of the sloping grounds," he said.

The former Flint home does have an address of 215 Main St., although it is set back a distance from the road. The property is accessed via Castle Road, which the developers own. There is also an easement through Cedarmere that carried over when King Taylor sold the property to Leggat McCall Properties. Residents of the subdivision will therefore have access to their homes through Cedarmere's Rte. 3A entrance or its Beechwood Street entrance.

Some Mendel Road residents, who will abut the new subdivision, and have concerns about the potential environmental impact the development could have on their neighborhood.

Susan Kent, 3 Mendel Road, said she is concerned the property houses a buried fuel well. She said in 1993, before the property was owned by the Flints, a 3,000 gallon oil tank was removed and at that time the board of health and Department of Environmental Protection ordered all oil be cleaned up.

However, Kent said there is a

Village gas station easement still stalled

Owner wants to recoup expenses

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

George Roukounakis owns the Citgo gas station on South Main Street and part of the private way between his property and the Red Lion Inn, dubbed James Lane. The town has been in negotiations with Roukounakis to purchase an easement over the land.

With the town parking lot located behind Roukounakis' property, the private way has always been used by residents. But now the tiny lane provides access from South Main Street for those who are working on constructing the Greenbush rail line and making parking lot improvements as part of the Greenbush project. Town officials say with all the activity taking place in the municipal lot, time is of the essence in terms of moving forward with the transaction.

At the 2004 Annual Town Meeting, voters agreed to authorize selectmen to purchase the easement from Roukounakis for $64,200 in anticipation of the Greenbush construction. The easement is approximately 1,310 square feet.

However, prior to that Town Meeting vote, Roukounakis said he spoke about the purchase with then Town Manager Mark Haddad. Both Roukounakis and the town had appraisals done on the property. The town valued the property at $64,200, while Roukounakis ' appraisal was $330,000.

Roukounakis said therefore, because he felt the town's offer was too low and the town felt he was too high, he and Haddad agreed to meet somewhere in the middle. Roukounakis said Haddad told him the town would pay him the $64,000 in addition to his expenses, and "call it even."

However, Haddad resigned from his position in May, 2004 and there is nothing on the books to back up the verbal agreement. Roukounakis says he has $11,346 in expenses, including lawyer's fees, engineering costs, and costs for the appraisal. In an interview after the meeting, Roukounakis said he never expected his fees to be so high, but with all the language changes proposed by Town Counsel, none of which have been acceptable compromises for Roukounakis, he has been required to keep using the services of his attorney.

But selectmen say the town agreed to pay only the $64,200, which means if the board agrees to carry out what Roukounakis says Haddad agreed to, another Town Meeting vote would be required.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said Roukounakis should not be paid for his expenses, as there is nothing in writing that says the town agreed to cover those costs. He said the town voted on $64,000, and "that is what is intended to be spent."

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said he has known Roukounakis for between 30 and 40 years and said he has no reason to doubt he had that conversation with Haddad.

However, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the town agreed to spend the $64,000 on the easement and in his opinion, that is a fair deal. He said the town would be purchasing just over 1,000 square feet, which "When you do the math," figures out to be roughly $2 million per acre. If the town went with Roukounakis' $330,000 appraisal, the land then becomes worth $10 million per acre.

"The $64,200 is fair. You should sign it and be done with it," Dormitzer said.

Selectman Rob Spofford asked Roukounakis if he would be willing to split the difference of the cost of his expenses with the town. It would still require a Town Meeting vote, but Roukounakis would be reimbursed for $5,668. "I can't guarantee what Town Meeting will say, you know what Town Meeting can be like," he said.

Roukounakis said the town has been using his land for the past 30 years and all this time, he's been a "nice guy." He said he doesn't think Dormitzer's estimate is fair because appraisals deal with the potential money to be made on the land if it is given away. He said he would consider the new offer from selectmen and would get back to the town manager.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said due to the history of the matter, it would be a good idea for Roukounakis to bring in copies of the bills for which he would like to be reimbursed in order to have something tangible on the books.

The board voted 4-1 in favor of bringing the matter of reimbursing Roukounakis for half the cost of his expenses before Town Meeting. Dormitzer was opposed. At the time the Mariner went to press, Roukounakis had not made a decision about whether he would settle with the town.

Chief Hussey: sex offender poses no immediate risk

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police Chief James Hussey said police have alerted administrators at Cohasset schools that a registered sex offender was seen driving in Cohasset. The man does not live or work in town, he said.

Hussey stressed there is no immediate cause for concern and explained schools were alerted simply as a precaution.

On Monday, Dec. 12, Hussey said a police officer travelling through the intersection at Pleasant Street and Cushing Road passed another car whose driver looked away as if to avoid eye contact. He said the officer turned around, followed the car, and ran a check on the plate.

He said the vehicle is registered to a registered sex offender.

Hussey declined provide the Mariner with the man's identity because he was not doing anything wrong by driving in town. "He is under no restrictions," he said. Responding to rumors, Hussey added "he was not seen parked near a school."

"Since this person was only seen driving through our town and we confirmed that he is not under any restrictions from his previous involvement with the judicial system, publishing his name could be considered harassment or discriminatory, both of which are illegal," Hussey said.

He explained the sex offender had not been convicted of any physical assault on any person. He declined to say what level of sex offender the man is registered as. The State Sex Offender Registry Board categorizes sex offenders as Level 1 (low risk); Level 2(moderate risk); or Level 3 (high risk).

He said he provided school administrators with information, such as a description of the car, in case they should see him on school property.

Cohasset Center in the snow – January, 1955.

Cohasset in 1955: the A&P, junior prom, football and family

By Joel S. Pratt
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset Center under a gentle January snow in 1955 appeared much as it had the year before and as it would in the years to come. The cars and store signs have changed with the years, but the scene remains nearly the same in 2005 as it had in 1955.

To Cohasset teenagers, the annual cycle of events seemed unchanging too. In May our class held its Junior Prom. All day Saturday we worked to transform the Ripley Road School gym into a romantic Parisian bistro. We were told we could not climb the high step ladder to hang the crepe paper streamers: it was too dangerous. Ripley Road School janitor Abe Antoine did that chore. When we were done, it still looked like a gym.

Memories of the 1955 Prom remain. Our neighbors Brooks and Claire Ryder stopped by to see me off in my tuxedo. At the door, Brooks handed me the keys to his brand-new sea-foam green 1955 Buick Century convertible! I was so proud I would have driven it right into the gym if I could. The Junior class mothers served a formal sit-down dinner at the Unitarian Parish House. Classmate David Truesdell surprised all by arriving in a pink shirt, grey flannel Bermuda shorts and knee socks. Then we were off to the prom. Girls in formal gowns and boys in suits and tuxedoes danced to a five-piece orchestra. For a few hours, we felt grown-up and glamorous.

The tradition of the High School prom has altered over the years. Now kids rent limos and have suppers in elegant hotels. I liked it better our way.

For many years the A&P was in Cohasset center across South Main Street from the rival First National Store. In 1955, the A&P moved into a new and, to us, huge supermarket on the corner of Beechwood Street and Route 3A. Cohasset had its first shopping plaza! For High School Juniors and Seniors, the A&P meant jobs. It quickly became Cohasset's largest employer of teenagers. I and many of my classmates took the train to Boston for the required interview and test. In June I donned my uniform – a white apron – and started to work for $ 1 an hour as a part-time clerk. For the first time we encountered payroll deductions: income tax and Social Security withholding (called 'Old Age' on our pay slips) shrank our pay. A few years ago the 'old' A&P that we thought was so big and modern was torn down: an even bigger supermarket rose in its place.

Twice I drove to Neponset circle: once to order the covers and again to pick them up. They were a bright electric blue. And they covered the holes until 1958 when the car was sold.

In the early 1950s, hurricanes hit the South Shore almost every year. Carol and Edna had battered Cohasset in 1954. In August, 1955 hurricane Diane soaked New England with 19 inches of rain. The A&P closed due to high winds, heavy rain and, probably most important to the management, lack of customers. I drove home via Sohier Street behind a gasoline tanker. The road was flooded at the bottom of the hill by the Music Circus. The truck was parting the water, so I tucked Pop's '51 Chevy in tight behind and got through. I arrived home to find Uncle Edwin Pratt rescuing the oil burner. My sister Cindy and infant nephew Douglas were staying with us: she had called for help when water reached the third step on the cellar stairs.

Cindy had arranged to drive to Newport, Rhode Island to pick up her Navy-Lieutenant husband Bob from his ship, the USS TARAWA. We left the morning after the storm. The flooding was so bad that it took three hours to get to Braintree, so we turned around and went home. Bob and the carrier had ridden out the storm at sea so he didn't make it to Newport either.

We became High School Seniors in September, 1955. We

Cohasset in 1955: the A&P, junior prom, football and family were now the big kids. Some Seniors were Hall Marshals. Little felt "M" armbands conferred vast powers on us. "Slow down, Seventh Graders! Stand over there until I say you can go."

The certainties in our lives were slipping away. It was the last year we would play on CHS teams, sing in the school Christmas concert, attend school dances and do the myriad other familiar things which made up each year. For the first time in our lives, we didn't know where we would be the following September. Classmates hoping to go on to college mailed applications, took SATs and wondered which schools would have them. Others filled out job applications or met with military recruiters.

Fall Saturdays meant football. Cohasset had been depressingly consistent through our high school years. The CHS nine went winless in 1953 and 1954. In our eight-game 1953 season, our opponents scored a total of 256 points to our 76. It went downhill from there: the 1954 totals were 275 to 52. But 1955 was a turn-around year! After three scoreless games, the team celebrated on the bus after beating Hanover 6 – 0. After one more scoreless loss, we rallied to end the season by besting Holbrook 19 – 0. Our spirit never flagged. The CHS band tooted and our cheerleaders cheered.

Thanksgiving came. By 1955 the Pratt family had grown too large to gather under one roof for holiday meals. My sister, her husband and my year-old nephew had moved to Illinois. Our Thanksgiving became a gathering of friends. Elderly neighbors with no children nearby, my parents' friends – couples and divorced singles — sat down together to give thanks. Mother called it "gathering the waifs and strays."

Christmas followed close behind. I had decided on my gift for my parents. Though only four years old, the upholstery on their '51 Chevrolet's seats had worn through. Synthetic fibers had not yet appeared so holes in the seats — particularly the driver's seat, were not uncommon. I don't think it bothered them, but it did bother me. Appearances are important to teenagers. So people bought seat covers. And that is what I did. Twice I drove to Neponset circle: once to order the covers and again to pick them up. They were a bright electric blue. And they covered the holes until 1958 when the car was sold.

On December 24th the A&P was staffed almost entirely by part-timers. The meat counter was an exception. Staying on the good side of the butcher was important back then. Meat arrived as half-sides and was cut to order in the store. All day long shoppers arrived at the meat counter carrying bottle-shaped brown paper bags. "Just a little something to thank you," they would say. Through the afternoon meat cutting slowed as the celebration grew more boisterous.

Christmas Eve was payday. A Christmas surprise was waiting for me in my pay envelope. After a year and a half, my hourly rate was increased from $ 1 to $ 1.05 an hour.

Eagle Scout hits a homerun with ballpark project

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset Boy Scouts participate in countless community service projects which greatly benefit the town. Every year, improvements are made that might not otherwise have been possible, thanks to their volunteer efforts.

This year, Brian Pratt, a member of Cohasset's Troop 28, provided the Beechwood Ballpark with a new set of bleachers, and refurbished the old bleachers. This effort has not only made his fellow Boy Scouts proud, but no doubt countless generations of Pratt family members, who have all played on the field.

Pratt took on the challenge of making the Beechwood Ballpark improvements as his Eagle Scout project. When the project was complete, Pratt was bestowed with the highest honor a Boy Scout can achieve, when he became an Eagle Scout; projects must be completed before the scout's 18th birthday, which for Pratt, was in July. Pratt graduated from Cohasset High School this June, and is now in his first year at Daniel Webster College in Nashua, New Hampshire.

Pratt's project was a natural choice. Living on Beechwood Street, "I grew up playing on that field," he said, adding he knew when he saw spectators sitting on the unsteady bleachers, someone needed to replace them. "It was becoming a safety hazard," he said. He said standing or sitting on them, the wood would noticeably bend. "I'm surprised they hadn't already broken."

Pratt began the refurbishing part of his project in the beginning of June, but the preparation began close to a year prior. "I talked to Mike Buckley who was the acting Town Manager at the time and got his approval," he said. Once the project was approved by the town, Pratt was able to begin the fund-raising campaign that made it possible.

Pratt sent letters to residents in town asking for donations and was able to raise $2,000. "It's amazing how generous people are," he said. He said the Cohasset Little League club donated $500 toward the project. "They were going to help purchase an aluminum set of bleachers, but they are $2,800 a set, which is a little too much," he said. In the end, Pratt decided to purchase a nice set of steel frame bleachers with wood plank seats. "They're a little more comfortable to sit on too," said Pratt.

"I grew up playing on that field."
— Brian Pratt, Eagle Scout

All tolled, Pratt said he had the bulk of the funding in hand about a month and a half after sending out the letter. Once the money came in, he made the trip to Home Depot to pick up some primer and other necessary items to refurbish the older bleachers. He stripped the old wood, scraped down the steel so it was bare, and ordered new lumber as necessary. He then re-painted to make the old bleachers look as good as new.

Pratt said it took him roughly a week and a half to refurbish the old bleachers. "I was out there just about every day doing it," he said, adding some days were more difficult than others with the heat of the summer sun beating down on him. "On the days it got up to 95 degrees it was almost unbearable," he said and ultimately cut his progress short for the day.

"My house is right around the corner," he said, which came in handy during the refurbishing stage. Pratt was able to disassemble the bleachers and work on a good portion of the project at home, stripping and painting the wood in his own driveway.

Once the old bleachers were on their way to completion, Pratt decided it was time to place the order for the new bleachers. He called a company in Florida, and two weeks later, the new bleachers arrived in pre-painted sections, ready to be assembled. Fortunately, Pratt had no shortage of help pulling things together.

As part of his Eagle Scout project, Brian Pratt refurbished old bleachers and raised money for new bleachers at Beechwood Ballpark.

"I had a few scouts come over and help me paint (the old bleachers) and install the new bleachers," said Pratt, including Paul Posniak, Christian Quebec, August Oddleifson and his brother Tucker, and Harrison Schmidt. In addition, he received help from his grandfather Donald Pratt as well as his aunt Margy Richards and his uncle Bill Earle.

Pratt said right away he could tell people appreciated his project. "One or two weeks after I'd assembled one set, people were actually using them, which was nice," he said, adding he knows it was an inconvenience for spectators for one week when there were no bleachers at all during the refurbishing. However, he said he knows there are even bigger plans in the works for the ballpark, which could soon see a new orientation for its baseball diamond, a new playground, and potentially a concession stand with working restrooms.

"It's nice to see it being improved," he said of the ballpark, but added he hopes his bleachers will be kept with the renovations. "They're a gift to the town."

Pratt has been a Boy Scout, "Since the very beginning," starting out as a Tiger Scout when he was 6 years old. However, now that he is an Eagle Scout and is no longer in high school, that doesn't mean his scouting career has come to an end. Pratt said he would like to volunteer his time as an adult leader. "I'll hand in my application one of these days," he quipped. But the matter is only one of processing the paperwork, as he has already expressed his intention to become the assistant scout master of Troop 28.

Pratt said what he enjoys most about scouting is the fact that it provides a means for relaxing and "having a good time with the guys." He said the activities are a lot of fun, from the camping trips to the ski trips, and "you learn a lot about stuff you couldn't learn in a classroom."

Pratt said he plans to join up with members of his Troop for a ski trip at Bretton Woods during Cohasset's school break in February. While class will be in session for him, he has plans to drive up on a Friday afternoon and spend the weekend as a chaperone for the younger scouts. While the amount of time he can devote to his Cohasset troop will be more limited during his college years, to him the program is an important one, and "I'm going to try to stay as involved as possible."

OUR WORLD

Are you ready for the holidays and school vacation? In preparation for the holidays Our World, Children's Global Discovery Museum on Sohier Street in Cohasset will be closed Saturday, Dec. 24. It will be open regular hours, Wednesday-Friday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Saturday 1-5 p.m., during school vacation week and will have a Kwanzaa arts and crafts project offered at the craft tables.

On Thursday, Dec. 29, two special programs are offered:

• At 11 a.m. Juega y Aprende, Play and Learn, for grades K-2. Children will learn Spanish by playing, singing, dancing and hearing stories. They will adapt familiar group games such as the Hokey Pokey and Simon Says and play them in Spanish (Simon Dice) in order to learn the parts of the body and simple commands. Fun props and high energy make this class enjoyable for all kids. $6 for non-members, $4, for members.

• At 1 p.m. Hola Espanola, Hello Spanish, for grades 3-5. Older school-aged children will enjoy this class that will include puppet shows, which they will perform, rhymes and riddles and a host of other activities that will inspire and motivate learning a second language. Basic vocabulary will cover how to greet someone and have a simple conversation in Spanish, among other things. Don't be surprised if your child asks for a trip to Mexico from Santa next year to practice their new skills. $6 for non-members, $4 members.

Preregistration is not required but these programs are offered on a first-come, first-serve basis and doors will close when the class is full.

General admission is $5 per person, free for members. The museum is located at 100 Sohier St., just down the road from the Music Circus tent and behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Call for more information 781-383-3198 or visit Web site: www.ourworldcgdm.org.

'Twas the Night Before Christmas

Or Account of a Visit from St. Nicholas by Clement Clarke Moore (1779-1863)

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse;
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
In hopes that St. Nicholas soon would be there;

The children were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of sugar-plums danced in their heads;
And mamma in her 'kerchief, and I in my cap,
Had just settled down for a long winter's nap,

When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter,
I sprang from the bed to see what was the matter.
Away to the window I flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash.

The moon on the breast of the new-fallen snow
Gave the luster of mid-day to objects below,
When, what to my wondering eyes should appear,
But a miniature sleigh, and eight tiny reindeer,

With a little old driver, so lively and quick,
I knew in a moment it must be St. Nick.
More rapid than eagles his coursers they came,
And he whistled, and shouted, and called them by name;

"Now, DASHER! now, DANCER! now, PRANCER and VIXEN!
On, COMET! on CUPID! on, DONDER and BLITZEN!
To the top of the porch! to the top of the wall!
Now dash away! dash away! dash away all!"

As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with an obstacle, mount to the sky,
So up to the house-top the coursers they flew,
With the sleigh full of toys, and St. Nicholas too.

And then, in a twinkling, I heard on the roof
The prancing and pawing of each little hoof.
As I drew in my hand, and was turning around,
Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound.

He was dressed all in fur, from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot;
A bundle of toys he had flung on his back,
And he looked like a peddler just opening his pack.

His eyes — how they twinkled! his dimples how merry!
His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry!
His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard of his chin was as white as the snow;

The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke it encircled his head like a wreath;
He had a broad face and a little round belly,
That shook, when he laughed like a bowl full of jelly.

He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old elf,
And I laughed when I saw him, in spite of myself;
A wink of his eye and a twist of his head,
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread;

He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work,
And filled all the stockings; then turned with a jerk,
And laying his finger aside of his nose,
And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose;

He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
And away they all flew like the down of a thistle.
But I heard him exclaim, ere he drove out of sight,
"HAPPY CHRISTMAS TO ALL, AND TO ALL A GOOD-NIGHT!"

According to sources cited at University of Toronto English Library, the original 1823 version has the last two reindeer named, "Dunder and Blixem." Also according to the UTEL, this ballad was written in 1822 for Moore's two daughters, Margaret and Charity, and a year later was anonymously published in the Troy [New York] Sentinel on December 23, 1823.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Help us build animal shelter

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to correct a misconception about the campaign to raise funds for a new animal shelter to replace the one that serves Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham, Hull and Norwell. Many people assume that the job is done, and nothing could be farther from the truth! The Mariner did a great job of covering the 3A Farm Fund campaign kickoff several months ago. At the time, the goal was to raise $534,000 by February to allow the shelter to move from its current location next to the Greenbush line terminus in Scituate to the former 3A Farm in North Scituate. So far, thanks to many generous donors, we have raised $160,000. Unfortunately that leaves a gap of $374,000 and a very short time left to go.

This is where Cohasset's stray animals are taken and cared for until they are claimed by their owners or adopted by new families. This is where many of our citizens found their best friends. Now they need a better place than next to a vast commuter parking lot and crowded streets. There are very few sites suitable for an animal shelter, and the 3A Farm is perfect.

One major milestone was reached in October, when Scituate Town Meeting approved the move. This means that the current shelter and land can be sold and the money applied to the new shelter. But we still need much more to be able to buy the farm and build a new structure. Not a cent of the capital or operating costs of the shelter comes from taxes; all of the money is supplied by donations. The current shelter was built with two bequests, and the $125,000 it takes each year to buy food, litter, utilities, vet services, etc. has to be raised continuously.

One donor, who wishes to remain anonymous, has set up a challenge. He has pledged $15,000, and he will add another $10,000 if someone will match it. In other words, $15,000 can grow to a total of $35,000, if some kind person seizes the opportunity. Beyond that, if 380 people among the five towns each give $1000, the shelter can be built. Or 3800 people could give $100, whatever works. You can find out how at 3afarmfund.com. I know that there are many worthy causes competing for your donations, but how many of them will take you for a walk or curl up in your lap on a cold winter night?

Major station work starts in March

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

It has been awhile since our last article and while there has not been much construction going on due to the weather, several construction activities continue along the right of way. During the winter many construction activities will be very weather dependent. So, they will stop and start as conditions permit. A brief update follows :

Station – Work on Cohasset station continues with some grading and excavation, but the major work on this area will start in the March time frame. For now the area is used largely for a staging area so that the enormous amount of construction materials required for this portion of the Greenbush project can be close at hand as the construction work progresses in other areas of Cohasset. As you drive by you may see huge piles of concrete railroad ties, large rolls of fencing as well as a myriad of other necessary construction supplies and equipment.

King Street – As reported two weeks ago, this part of the project was delayed with complex utility relocations and the several large rain storms that turned the area into a sea of mud. We had originally expected this crossing to be completed this month. That is not possible with all of the delays. So we can probably expect a completion some time in January or even February. We will keep you posted as things develop.

Rocky Lane Bridge - There is not much happening here with the weather. We did have a note on the schedule that indicated the bridge construction would continue in December. However, we have seen a halt to activity and that is due to the fact that bridge crews which were earmarked for this work have been occupied elsewhere on the project.

Pleasant Street/Smith Place – This crossing's construction was to have started this past week. As noted in our last Mariner column, the Town requested and had a meeting with the MBTA and the local merchants before this construction should start. The merchants had previously asked whether construction could be delayed to start after the holiday season. At that meeting, we were informed that this crossing would be delayed until after the first of the year. Local merchants were grateful for that response from the CBB representative.

On a separate but related subject, the Town was still waiting for the MBTA's technical responses to comments we raised on the design package for this crossing. We just received those comments and are reviewing them. We will keep you posted on that as well.

As you drive by you may see huge piles of concrete railroad ties, large rolls of fencing as well as a myriad of other necessary construction supplies and equipment.

Spring Street – The replacement of the incorrectly located culvert that we have mentioned several times is complete. The Town can now trim the grass in Ellms Meadow for winter skating. At the Pond Street portion of this crossing, there will be blasting required before the actual crossing work commences. The MBTA has submitted a blasting plan to the appropriate authorities and will need to review that plan with Cohasset's Fire department prior to blasting. There is no firm schedule for this work at this time. But we do know that the actual crossing work in the street can not proceed until the Pleasant Street crossing work is completed. But, the blasting itself can be done without closing Spring or Pond Streets. More to come on this.

Castle/Sestito Private Grade Crossings – This design package details the two crossings that will be constructed on two of Cohasset's private ways, Castle Road and Sestito Lane. We are in the process of submitting our second set of comments on this design. There are still ongoing negotiations between the MBTA and impacted residents on how the area is to be accessed during and after construction. Those issues will also be addressed in our comments to the MBTA.

Beechwood Street – As you may recall we mentioned in a prior article that while this crossing has been re-opened, there are still some drainage concerns that we have passed on to the MBTA who have acknowledged the Town's concerns. The issues raised are being researched within the Greenbush project teams. Once this research is completed, they will inform us of what happens next. We did express a sense of urgency given the time of year. We are now waiting for their answers. Some work has also taken place at this crossing to construct the concrete bases for the signaling equipment.

Lincoln Lane – The access issue for the resident on the Route 3A side of the right of way, mentioned this summer, is still open. The MBTA is working with the impacted local land owners and the Town of Scituate to come up with a resolution. Generally, the MBTA has been pretty good about keeping us informed about their progress. There is nothing new to report at this time.

General Note –Several residents have asked an interesting question. If their normal driveway access is behind a construction barrier who plows the snow to provide them access? The MBTA has told us that CBB is responsible for any plowing that is necessary within the construction zone. If for any reason this is not done please call the CBB Hot Line 24 hours per day at 781-682-6350. If this doesn't work, please call us at the Cohasset Greenbush office.

Well, that is a brief review of the Greenbush project construction activities. It is hard to believe that we have been working on this project now for nearly a year. We truly appreciate your interest and all of the positive input we have received from our many concerned citizens. We look forward to continuing in this effort and hope to make this project as seamless and painless as humanly possible for Cohasset. Most of all we want to make sure we all remain safe as this project unfolds.

So from your "Greenbush Guys", we wish you the best and safest holiday season.

Santa's tiny reindeer really can fly!

ON THE WILD SIDE

JUNE FREEDMAN

Yes, Virginia, there really are flying reindeer!

Do you ever wonder why Santa chose reindeer to pull his sleigh on Christmas Eve? Why not polar bears, which would so nicely complement his fur-trimmed suit? And why "eight tiny reindeer"? One would think Santa would enlist the biggest he could find.

The answer is that one species of reindeer, Peary caribou, Rangifer tarandus pearyi, have, no pun intended, one leg up for the job. Named after Robert E. Peary, the American Arctic explorer who is credited with discovering the North Pole, Peary caribou weigh only about 150 pounds and are the smallest deer in the world. They are also the northernmost deer and therefore hardy and strong. Many live on the ice cap, but they have also been seen on Ellesmere, at the Kane Basin on Greenland, at Hyperit Point on Axel Heiberg Island, on North Devon Island, on Prince Patrick Island, and on Meighen Island. There are estimated to be about a half million Peary, 95 per cent of which live or migrate above the Arctic Circle.

Peary caribou are excellent swimmers. Their hair is hollow in the center, which gives them buoyancy, and their large, splayed hooves make great paddles. These hooves also act as a kind of snowshoe on the ground, and in the air as a small, solid wing. The Peary antler configuration is also important. They have developed palmated, or broad-ended, horns, and they have a tined forehead at the base of the antler which in flight acts as an extra sail. The tine also keeps snow out of their eyes, if it happens to be snowing on Christmas Eve!

So scientists do believe Peary caribou can fly. But all of them? Or only Dasher, Dancer, Prancer and Vixen, Comet, Cupid, Donder and Blixen? It is agreed that only one pattern of antler allows for extended flight, a complex configuration which creates a vortex of wind at high speeds. They estimate that only one Peary in a thousand can really fly. There is an old, disputed U. S. government photo showing a half dozen Peary rising above the rest of the herd. Santa must have done considerable interviewing.

Reindeer are also equipped with a unique blood circulation system that allows them to adjust to temperatures all over the world as they make their rounds on Christmas Eve. Similar to the rete mirabile system, which means "miraculous bundles," small arteries and veins are intertwined so that cool blood from the legs is warmed by the arterial flow, the blood from the heart. Scientists report the miracle bundles work like a heater in cold temperatures and an air conditioner in the heat. The only other animal with such equipment are deep-diving whales.

Two remaining questions: it is not yet documented whether the recently reported mutation and addition to Santa's team of a Peary caribou with a luminous, red nose actually does result in leadership qualities. And, no, as far as I know no Peary has been brought to the N. E. Wildlife Center for treatment on Christmas Eve.

HEALTH NOTES

'Tis the season to get stressed out

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

During the holidays, often there's a tendency to be up tight. Nationally, the number of homicides and suicides goes up, and stress, as well as good will, prevails. A principal condition attending most stressful episodes is that ones blood pressure rises. Many factors can affect blood pressure, including volume of water in the body; salt content of the body; condition of the kidneys, nervous system, or blood vessels; and levels of various hormones in the body and of course being late for a performance, breaking an antique tree ornament and arguing with practically anyone.

I learned from bitter experience when I baked a batch of salted pumpkin seeds, ate them and kept a doctor's appointment. When the doctor measured blood pressure, it was out of sight; ankles swelling, the works.

With every heart beat, blood pressure rises, when the heart relaxes, the pressure goes down. Systolic is the "top" number of your blood pressure measurement, which represents the pressure generated when the heart beats. One has high blood pressure when the number is consistently over 140. Diastolic is the "bottom" number of your blood pressure measurement, which represents the pressure in the vessels when the heart is at rest. You have high blood pressure when the diastolic blood pressure is consistently over 90. 120 to 139 diastolic and 80 to 89 systolic on multiple readings signals a risk factor and precursor to hypertension or high blood pressure. If you consistently have this condition, your doctor will recommend lifestyle changes to bring your blood pressure down to normal range.

A principal condition attending most stressful episodes is that ones blood pressure rises.

Causes, incidence, and risk factors — Blood pressure is determined by the amount of blood pumped by the heart, and the size and condition of the arteries. Without other symptoms, hypertension has no identifiable cause. It may be caused by genetics, environmental factors, or as noted earlier, diet, such as how much salt you use.

However, high blood pressure can be caused by other disorders, including: misuse of medications, drugs, or other chemicals, oral contraceptives, also ailments of the kidneys, adrenal glands or a host of other factors, most of which can be diagnosed from separate symptoms.

Symptoms — Usually, no symptoms are present. Occasionally, you may experience a mild headache. If your headache is severe, or if you experience any of the symptoms below, you must be seen by a doctor right away. These may be a sign of dangerously high blood pressure (called malignant hypertension) or a complication from high blood pressure. They are: tiredness, confusion, vision changes, angina-like chest pain (crushing chest pain), heart failure, blood in urine, nosebleed, irregular heartbeat, ear noise or buzzing.

Complications — The trouble with high blood pressure is that it leads to complications which include a variety of maladies: heart disease, heart attacks, congestive heart failure, blood vessel damage (arteriosclerosis), stretching of the heart muscle, kidney damage, kidney failure, stroke, brain damage, loss of vision.

Treatment — The goal of treatment is to reduce blood pressure to decrease complications. Treatment may be imposed by your doctor accompanied by recognized medications: diuretics, which reduce the water in your system, other medications designed to dull your excesses in some way will also be prescribed: alpha blockers, beta blockers, etc. but most important is to change your first impulses. Relax, settle back, and think — is it that important? A life changer and one of the last things Frannie Wakeman said to us was "it's never really that important". Strange, but very potent words for life; especially if you have high blood pressure.

Prevention — Lifestyle changes may help control high blood pressure: Lose weight if you are overweight. Excess weight adds to strain on the heart. In some cases, weight loss may be the only treatment needed. Exercise to help your heart. Adjust your diet as needed. Decrease fat and sodium — salt, MSG, and baking soda all contain sodium. Increase fruits, vegetables, and fiber.

Expectations — High blood pressure is controllable with treatment. It requires a change in your lifestyle, attention to the details of your life in the little things: stay with your program; never have too much of anything ….and for Heaven's sake: stay calm.

No ties

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I see where Judge Raymond Brassard in Suffolk Superior Court has ordered trial jurors in his courtroom to wear neckties when they deliberate the future of the druggies, the pimps and the gang bangers who pass through there daily.

Well, maybe "ordered" is too strong a word. Try "suggested" instead. But I've hung around courtrooms long enough in the past five or six decades to learn that a suggestion from a judge carries the same authority as a spanking from dad.

My only brush with the fine art of tie-wearing came about 15 years ago when I was invited to a wedding in Milton…

In the unlikely event I were ever summoned to jury duty before Judge Brassard I think I'd run it past the ACLU first because I don't own a tie and have owned one only briefly since they stopped selling clip-on bow ties at Woolworths.

I don't know what I have against ties, although a friend once opined that my family tree must include so many hoss thieves that evolution has produced a family aversion to wearing anything that is tight around the neck.

My only brush with the fine art of tie-wearing came about 15 years ago when I was invited to a wedding in Milton and, Milton being Milton, the bride wouldn't sit still for a simple but tasteful turtle-neck or open neck sports shirt.

I think the tie, a sedate dark blue with red stripes, cost me something like $15, and, of course, I had to buy a shirt to go with the tie because I never needed one before. The salesman was working on a jacket to go with the shirt when I escaped from the store.

I don't know where the tie is right now since I haven't been invited to any weddings in Milton, Cohasset or Duxbury lately. I think it was given to the Salvation Army and probably will next appear on a defendant in Judge Brassard's courtroom.

Back around 1970, I drove to Burlington, Vt., to cover a UMass-Vermont football game for the old Boston Herald. I was wearing what every sportswriter in the country considered high fashion — sweat shirt, dungarees and tennis shoes.

After the game, I decided to drive on to Montreal to see Boris, an old friend from New York who worked for Canadian Press. I called Boris and found that he was at a party at the men's press club and why don't I join them.

I did, only to be stopped at the door. I couldn't go in without a jacket. Fortunately, they kept a stock of jackets on hand for just such occasions. Unfortunately, the only one that would fit me was a tuxedo jacket with velvet lapels.

So I spent the evening with Boris and his friends exchanging pleasantries and tossing off Molsons clad in sweat shirt, dungarees, tennis shoes — and a tuxedo jacket.

That was the night I heard the story about Duncan MacPherson, a creative editorial cartoonist for one of the Toronto papers, who was at a party in the Toronto press club one night when a fight broke out in which he lost his shirt.

Duncan barely had time to get his jacket on when the cops came. The Toronto press club was on the second floor of the King George Hotel and his escape route was out a back door and though the hotel dining room where he was stopped at the door.

"You can't go in there without a tie," he was told. So Duncan reached in his coat pocket, produced a magic marker pen, drew a tie on his bare chest and continued his escape unmolested.

Or so I was told.

School chief seeks hefty budget hike for fiscal 2007

The majority of the increases in the fiscal 2007 budget comes from contractual obligations and fixed costs. Walsh said of the 11.7 percent increase [which factors in the anticipated circuit breaker and athletic fees] 5.5 percent, or $679,932 is out of the department's control. She said while the salaries are not yet final due to an unsettled contract and therefore have yet to be figured in, the step changes and column changes have been factored into the budget as a fixed cost. Other fixed costs included in the budget include special education/tuitions, utilities, contractual services, athletics, and transportation.

New personnel makes up 4.7 percent of the increase, or $581,759. At the elementary level, it is expected kindergarten enrollment will increase by as many as 40 students. The Osgood School will therefore need to offer two more kindergarten sessions to accommodate the new students. The school will likely offer one additional full-day and one additional half-day kindergarten session. Currently, there are four full-day and one half-day kindergarten sessions. The school department will only need funding for next year's half-day kindergarten teacher as the tuition paid by the students in full-day kindergarten will cover the cost of that classroom teacher.

In addition to kindergarten teachers, Walsh is proposing a new physical education/health teacher which will split his or her time between Osgood and Deer Hill. The position will be a 1.3 position. At the elementary level Walsh would also like to see a new grade two teacher.

In the middle school, Walsh proposes adding an English teacher with reading certification available for sixth-grade students. She is also requesting a one-tenth foreign language teacher to be added to the staff for grades seven and eight. Another top priority is a guidance/adjustment counselor for grades six through 12 and additional staff for the music department.

"We have a quality program and we are hopeful to maintain what we have and move forward with our program."

— Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh

At the high school level, Walsh is asking for a new English teacher and math teacher. She said the block scheduling which has students taking classes for longer periods of time during the day, "Is a double-edge sword." She said block scheduling allows students to cover more material "but you run out of electives because we don't have the staff. It's slim pickin's when you get to the junior and senior level."

Walsh said there is also a need to hire a second secretary/receptionist at the high school. Currently, there is only one adult working in the office, and while there are students helping out, there really should be an adult there at all times. Only adults are allowed to buzz visitors into the main office, and if that adult is tending to business outside the office, guests must wait until she returns. Adding foreign language staff at the high school level is also important and Walsh would like to add a one-half position to the budget.

District-wide, Walsh said she would like to hire an athletic trainer to work 20 hours per week. In addition, two vacant custodian positions need to be filled. Walsh said she would also like to add a juvenile police officer to the payroll to have a constant, friendly police presence in the building that would help keep the lines of communication open between the school and police departments. The police officer would be a shared cost for the school and police.

In addition to adding $581,759 worth of personnel to the budget, Walsh is seeking $185,293 in school programming. Due to the increase in kindergarten students, Walsh said she will need materials and supplies for two new kindergarten classrooms. Osgood will also be embarking upon year two of the expansion of the Scott Foresman reading series, which will require additional professional development for teachers. At Deer Hill, the staff is looking at inclusion of enrichment programs in areas such as reading, math, music, and art.

Walsh said it is also a goal to increase student support services in grades six through 12, as well as add science, technology, and engineering programming at the middle school. At the high school level, Walsh would like to add math and English electives, which would likely help keep class sizes down.

Textbooks must also be updated and Walsh seeks to purchase reading books for Osgood. At Deer Hill she would like history, science, and language arts books for grade three, and science and language arts books for grades four and five. At the high school, she is asking for engineering, physics, foreign language, English language arts, science and social studies books. "Some texts haven't been replaced in years," she said.

Together, the contractual obligations and fixed costs, new personnel, and program improvements make up an 11.7 percent increase over the fiscal 2006 school department allocation when the anticipated athletic fees and circuit breaker funding are added to the mix.

The complete budget presentation as well as copies of the school department's Strategic Plan can be accessed on the school department's Web site at www.cohassetk12.org. The school committee will meet again Jan. 5.

istic number of students who could be charged. Public schools are required to provide free transportation for all children in kindergarten, and children in grade one through grade six who live two miles or more from the school they attend. Schools are not required to provide transportation for students in grades seven through 12 regardless of where they live.

Schools are also required to provide transportation for those students whose Individualized Education Plan, more commonly referred to as an IEP, requires transportation or whose physical condition makes transportation necessary.

DeGennaro said Dickson "roamed the streets of Cohasset," to find the homes within the two-mile limits for grades one through six who could be charged for transportation as well as all households for grades seven through 12 and calculated the number of students who could potentially be charged a fee to ride. The number she came up with was roughly 1,207. If the school department charged $180 per child to ride the bus annually ($1 per day), the potential exists to collect $217,260.

However, DeGennaro said it is not realistic to assume all 1,207 students will ride the bus if fees are implemented. Therefore, Dickson counted the number of students who are actually currently riding the bus, and found there are 775. Of those 775, only 571 could be charged for transportation, which brings the likely profit down to $102,780. "That's assuming all 571 ride," said DeGennaro.

Walsh pointed out, however, there could be a cost associated with charging students. Someone will need to handle the bookkeeping for the program and keep track of who has paid and someone will need to check bus passes on a daily basis. There could be a need for crossing guards if more students are walking to school, she said.

School committee member Rick Flynn said while the information DeGennaro presented is good to have, it does not take into account those families that may not be included in the mandated transportation radius due to their proximity to the school they attend, but might argue their child should be a mandated rider due to safety reasons. If a child would be required to cross railroad tracks or Rte. 3A, that is a significant safety issue that may require additional students receive transportation for free. "Safety issues always come up," said Flynn, noting in his six years on the board, the issue of implementing fees has come up many times. "Somewhere, this (safety issues) is all going to catch up with us."

School committee chairman Jamie Williams said the calculations also do not take into account the possibility of putting a cap on charges per family.

Member Adrienne MacCarthy said there is already a problem with traffic in the school driveways every morning, and by implementing fees, more students will likely be driven by their parents in the morning, which means the situation could get worse. Walsh suggested looking into having a police officer on duty in the morning to help direct traffic whenever possible.

MacCarthy noted that increasing bus fees should be recognized for what it is — a tax. "But it's only on a special group of people," she said.

However, Williams said she does not view it as a tax, but a user fee. She said transportation "is a discretionary service the school now provides for free."

MacCarthy said in her view, it is not the role of the public school system to charge for services that should be part of the public school process. While she understands there will be waivers for families who cannot afford to pay the fee, "public school should not be something you should have to be able to afford."

Williams said if the school department has an opportunity to supplement transportation costs and put the savings back into a non-discretionary fund such as teacher salaries, she believes it is worth the exercise to explore the option. She added she believes the school department should now begin looking at what the additional cost would be for printing up bus passes, for the extra bookkeeping help, for adding additional crossing guards, as well as police details.

But MacCarthy said if the town begins charging for services that should be public, where does it stop? She asked whether the committee would be so enthusiastic if the public library decided it would begin charging $180 for a library card, or if every person who wanted to go to the beach was charged $180 for a beach pass.

"I would venture to say if the library was going to close its doors, it might consider charging for library cards to support itself rather than close its doors," Williams said.

A Jan. 12 deadline has been set for the school department to receive bids from companies looking to take over the transportation program for the schools. Once bids are received, the school committee will have more information to base its decision on whether to implement transportation fees or not. The school committee meets again Jan. 5.

Adding more teachers on Slanetz's holiday wish list

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cutting teachers has almost become a reality, due to fiscal restraints. However, one member of the school committee said he was disappointed to see the fiscal 2007 budget presented without considerable additions in staffing.

Vice chairman Alfred Slanetz, who has been a staunch advocate for reducing class sizes, said he would like to see 26 teachers added to the school department's payroll — 13 between Osgood and Deer Hill and 13 at the middle-high school.

With that kind of increase, "We could get the numbers down to 15 or 20 per class, at least at the elementary level, and that would be enough to get us to the top level of best practices. I'm not seeing as much of that as I expected," he said.

It seemed as if some of Slanetz's fellow board members couldn't believe what they were hearing. "So you're saying we need to add 26 new positions?" asked Adrienne MacCarthy. Slanetz replied, "It's not as difficult as you might think."

However, Rick Flynn, who has been on the school committee for the past 6 years, said from a practicality standpoint, "I'm not as optimistic as you are. Hiring 26 new teachers is a huge undertaking. You need new desks, new supplies, everything," not to mention the cost of salaries.

Slanetz agreed it is a huge undertaking, but said he would at least like to see some additional teachers and necessary items for the additional classrooms included in a supplemental budget for consideration.

Slanetz said classroom teachers are not his only concern. He wants specialists come on board as well. "The performing arts help with confidence and building public speaking skills," he said, adding branching out in those areas are just as important as regular classroom learning.

School natural gas costs heat up

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department is predicting it will need at least $140,000 of additional funds to cover natural gas heating costs for fiscal 2006.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said energy consultant Robert Patterson of the South Shore Educational Collaborative, which the school contracts with to purchase utilities at a better rate, predicts there will be about a 27 percent increase in the cost of heat for the schools this year.

Patterson's estimate means the school department must add $140,346 to its fiscal 2006 budget translating into a total of $529,746 this year just to heat the buildings.

"No matter what, unless we had a crystal ball, we never would have had $500,000 projected" under the line item for heat, said Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh.

Walsh said part of the problem is that utilities have historically been underbudgeted and that is affecting the fiscal 2006 budget. An unpaid gas bill in the amount of $93,000 surfaced for fiscal 2004 just before the close of that fiscal year, which the town then paid in fiscal 2005 as an unpaid bill. Because fiscal 2004 was underbudgeted, it was obvious fiscal 2005 would also be underbudgeted; an additional $93,000 (fiscal 2004 deficit amount) was therefore put into the reserve fund for fiscal 2005 to be used if needed.

However, Walsh said because the money was put into the reserve fund it did not become part of the school's budget moving forward, and the line item for fiscal 2006 does not take the $93,000 into account.

"That bill was paid outside our budget, so it throws off the usage cost," said Walsh.

School committee member Alfred Slanetz said he believes the school committee should be accounting for what it uses from the reserve fund. "It should be added on for planning purposes," he said.

Walsh said all along she has been saying the funds used from the reserve fund cannot be discounted. She said when the town votes to allocate money for the schools into the reserve fund, is not included in the school budget, and is therefore not reported as an expense to the state Department of Education. "It all depends on how it is set up when it is voted," she said.

School committee member Rick Flynn said Cohasset and every other school in the state is going to be affected by the rise in the cost of natural gas. "Everyone is in the same boat," he said, adding it is better to be told now, rather than in June, that there will be a deficit situation.

Patterson of the collaborative only gave the projected cost for natural gas and not electricity. Patterson will likely provide the school committee with the projected electricity costs in January. "We may be in the same situation as we are with the gas," said DeGennaro.

Plans unveiled plans for Castle Road subdivision

second 275 gallon oil tank, which is buried somewhere on the property, and no one knows where it is. "It has never been removed," she said.

Kent said in 2000, she and her husband put an addition on their home and dug a basement on a portion of their property which is close to the Flint site. Two years later, she said she began to smell oil in her basement drain; she reported it to DEP. Kent told the planning board she asked Flint if he would grant access to his property to check for the well but her request was never granted.

"We want to clean up the oil, even if it's just a small leak," she said.

Kent said she would like to be sure where the oil is coming from before another five houses are built on the property. "Lot two is almost adjacent to where oil is coming out of our pipe," she said.

Ragno said in terms of the oil, the DEP has been contacted and it is responsible for granting the right to access the property. "DEP thinks it is highly unlikely the contamination is coming from our property. DEP has not told us we need to grant permission," he said.

However, Mark Brennan, 2 Mendel Road, said because the Flint home is on the highest lot, if there is oil on the property and it is disturbed, it will flow downhill. "It's going to go toward the wetlands or Lily Pond," he said.

Planning board member Bob Sturdy said while the concerns are valid, he believes they are not under the jurisdiction of his board and should be taken up with the conservation commission or the water department.

"We could lead ourselves to lawsuits for holding things up for matters outside our jurisdiction," Sturdy said. "The issue has been brought to the state. I've been involved in oil spills and the state comes rushing out. They haven't done that."

Wearing his "Greenbush liaison hat," Brennan is worried the private grade crossing the MBTA has planned for Castle Road may not be sufficient for the proposed development. He said the MBTA is anticipating one house being serviced by the gates, not six. The crossing will be 12 feet wide, and Brennan suggested developers inform the MBTA of their plans.

The planning board will hold an informal site walk on the Castle Road subdivision property Saturday, Jan. 7 at 10 a.m. The meeting will be posted and is open to the public. For safety purposes, the owners of the property may require residents who attend to sign a waiver.

Alumni Field upgrade could be revisited at April 1 Town Meeting

Would seek CPA funding OK first

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department said it was surprised to see voters rescind a $98,500 appropriation from the Community Preservation Fund for improvements to Alumni Field at the Special Town Meeting Dec. 5.

At Town Meeting, the Community Preservation Committee said the money was no longer needed because the school department decided to go in another direction for field improvements. The article was touted as a "housekeeping" article, to prevent the approved allocation from "floating around," without being dispensed.

In an interview Wednesday, CPC chairman Stuart Ivimey clarified when the scope of the field project changed, the CPC could no longer approve allocating the funds for the project without knowing whether it complies with CPC standards. Ivimey said the school department may submit a new application for funding for the new project.

During the school committee meeting Dec. 15, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said when the article was presented at Town Meeting, Ivimey incorrectly stated the money was no longer necessary.

"I didn't know the money was going to be returned at Town Meeting," said Walsh, adding it was her understanding the project had merely been put on hold.

In a memo to Walsh dated Dec. 8, athletic director Ron Ford said he too was surprised to see the funds returned at Town Meeting and has since spoken with Ivimey to clarify the situation. He said Ivimey encouraged him to submit a second proposal to the CPC for field improvement funding.

In the memo, Ford updated Walsh on the history of the Alumni Field improvement project, which dates back to at least 2004. He said in February 2004, then Town Manager Mark Haddad brought the request for $98,500 to the CPC to reconstruct the surface of Alumni Field, add drainage, and replace the grass surface with sod. The work was going to be completed by Foye and Lentendre Landscaping, Inc., which had previously completed work on the field.

Athletic Director Ron Ford said he will submit a second proposal to the CPC, based on the $209,000 quote submitted by Sports Turf Specialties, Inc.

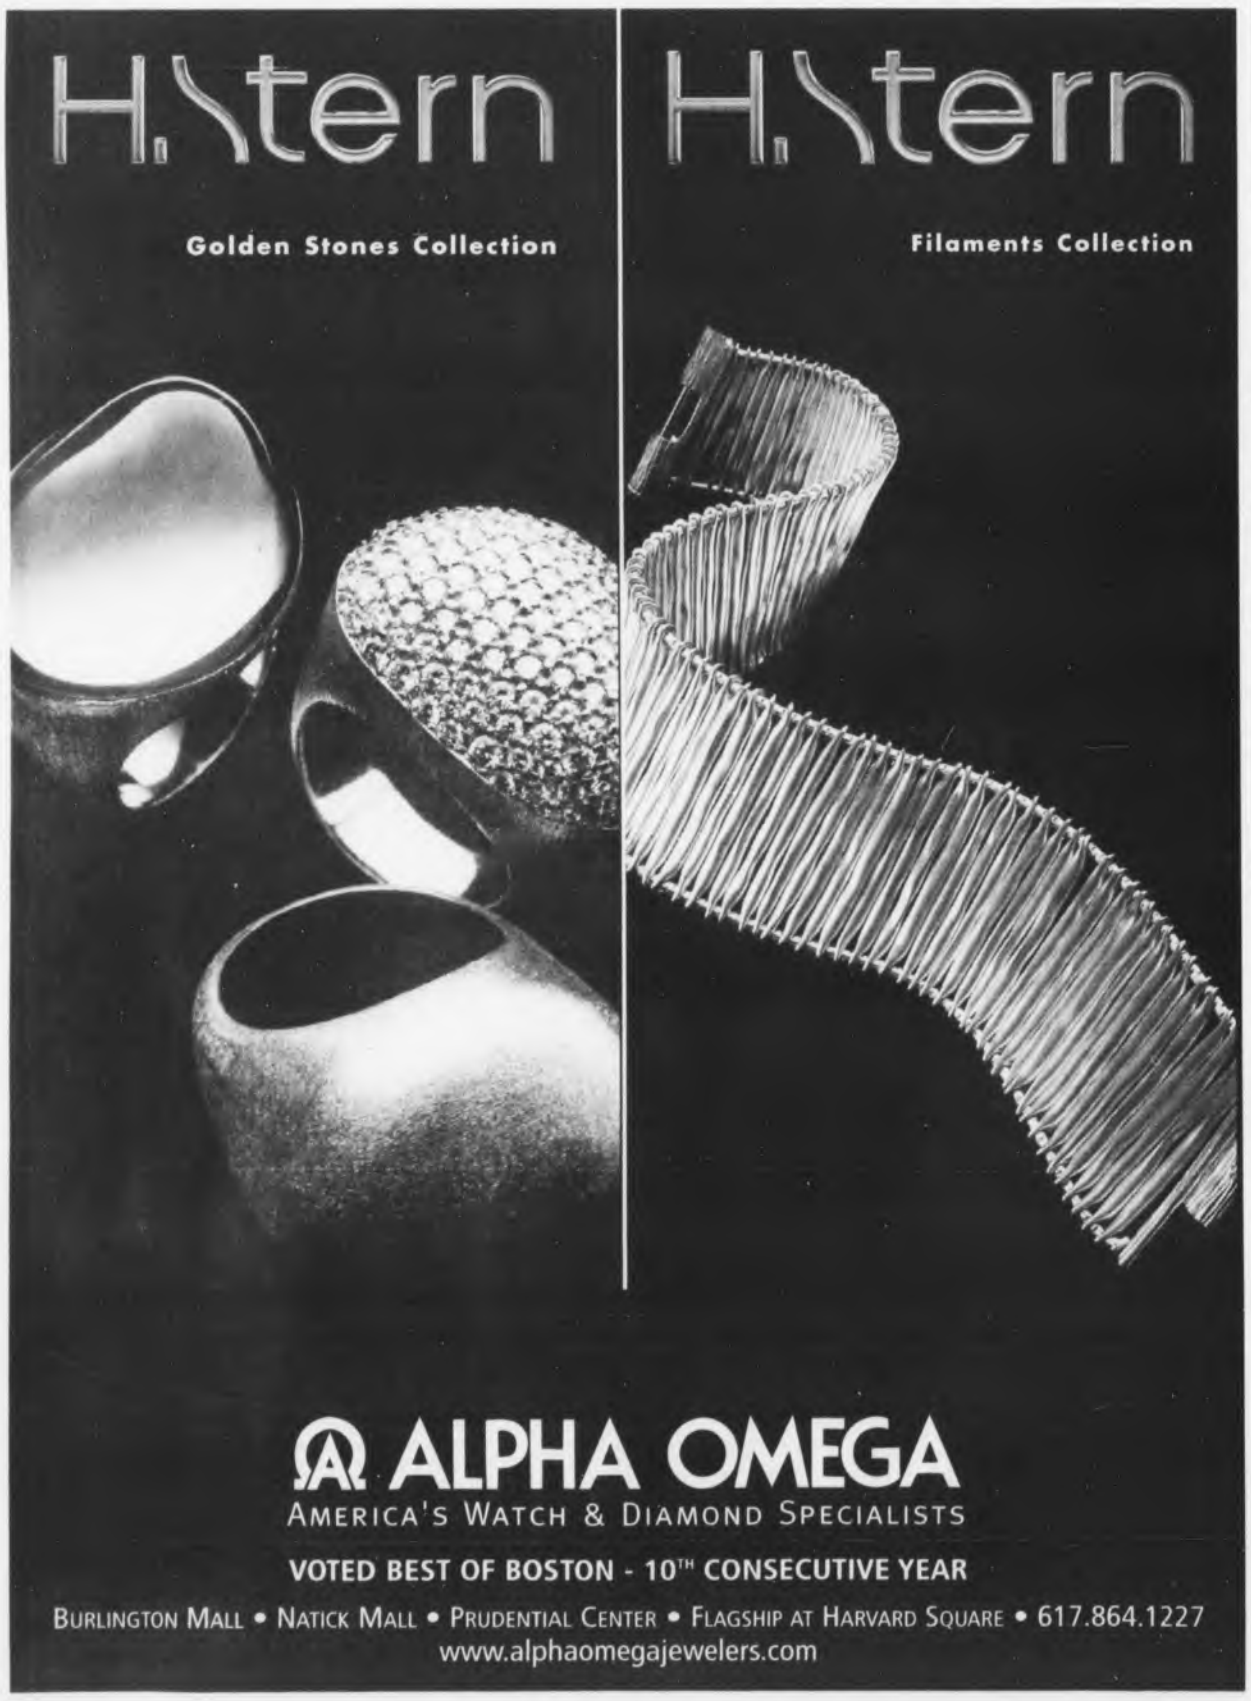
However, Ford said after Haddad resigned from his post that May, the project was put on hold, and the Department of Public Works later began looking at other companies and approaches to solving the drainage problems for the field. Andy Swanson of the DPW brought in Sports Turf Specialties, Inc., which then took the field maintenance program in a different direction.

During the summers of 2004 and 2005, Ford said the company used core aeration methods, topping with sand, and reseeding the field, which led to a great improvement in the condition of the field over those two years. That company then submitted a quote for $209,000 to reconstruct the field using a seeding method which in Ford's opinion is the direction the school department should take. Ford said moving forward with the initial proposal from Foye and Lentendre would have been a mistake and the second company's proposal is better suited for the town.

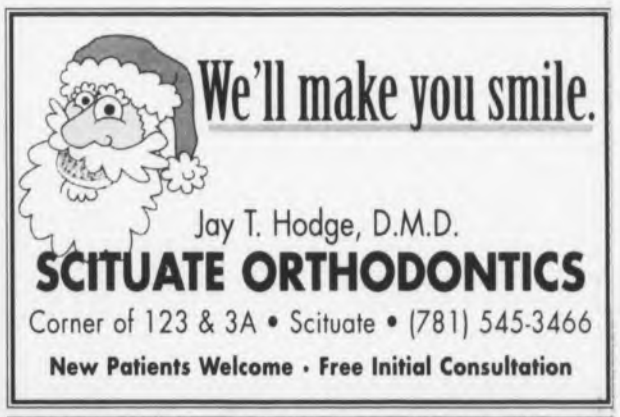
This week, Ivimey said because the project the school department is looking to complete is different from the original proposal, the CPC cannot approve spending the funds.

"They weren't doing the overhaul they had intended," he said and the money cannot legally be kept to carry over to another project which has not been approved. Procedurally, the school department must submit a new application for the new project, and the CPC must then review the application to make sure the new project fits in with Community Preservation Act funding guidelines.

Ford said he will submit a second proposal to the CPC, based on the $209,000 quote submitted by Sports Turf Specialties, Inc. Ford said he will be in contact with Sports Turf to receive a more updated quote for the project.



Ivimey said he is not sure what the new proposal will entail, and therefore cannot speculate whether the request will be approved, but said it will be carefully considered if it comes forward. He said $209,000 would make up roughly 50 percent of the CPC's annual revenue.



If the CPC approves the request, it would require a Town Meeting vote. Town Meeting is scheduled for Saturday, April 1. Walsh said in her view, the project should be considered a capital project rather than a school department project.

School committee member Rick Flynn suggested the school department take a look into what it would cost to install a turf field. "They're weatherproof and they can accommodate more people," he said, because wear and tear on the material is much less.

Walsh said while improvements to the field are on the table, the school department should also look into resurfacing the track. "We have to look at what is state-of-the art and what is better in the long run," she said.

School committee chairman Jamie Williams said with projects such as these "cheap can be expensive" and it may be better to pay more up front than be faced with costly repairs in the future.

An even split

CHS girls win one, lose one to begin new season

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Midway through last week, one common thought went through the heads of Lady Skipper fans everywhere: "Uh oh."

Holbrook handed Cohasset a loss in the season opener by a commanding score of 41-29. Things looked pretty glum for the Cohasset girls basketball team on this Dec. 13.

"They [Holbrook] had exceptional outside shooting," explained head coach John Levangie. "For our first game, I was very impressed with our defense and our younger players. We were a bit sloppy in the second half, but we can work on that."

What made this loss even more painful? The Skippers led by four points at the half.

Unfortunately, all composure went out the Holbrook gymnasium window when crunch time came late in the second half. One Skipper turnover led to the next as the Bulldogs sank their teeth in.

"It's obviously tough to lose our first game," observed junior forward Haley Haracz. "This just showed us that we need to focus on our fundamentals. We can't win games with so many turnovers."

Looking on the bright side, though, the Skipper newcomers proved almost immediately they belonged on the varsity court. Freshman Samantha Lehr ripped down several rebounds and managed to score nine points. Levangie applauded the "exceptional" defense of rookie Gabriella Flibbotte.

Senior captain Mia Lieb-Lappen also performed very well in her defense. Classmate Chelsea Grossman added seven points from the point guard position.

Still, a loss is a loss. And this one unnerved plenty of Skippers fans. Will inexperience and lack of fundamentals plague this team through February? Apparently not.

The next Friday the Skippers welcomed Mashpee into Cohassetland for the first home game and first league game of the year. And what a show it was.

Lehr tore down plenty more boards while adding another nine points. Grossman also contributed nine. Lieb-Lappen turned in another strong rebounding and defensive game. Both senior Lisa Musto and junior Lacey Richardson made solid contributions in cleaning the glass.

But the real surprise came with Flibbotte's over-the-top 18 points. But is this really a surprise? Not to the crowd who watched her last year in the eighth grade Patriot League games. Stay tuned fans. You may be witnessing the start of an incredible high school career.

The game did not flow in Cohasset's direction as easily as the 45-37 final score implies. Late in the game the Falcons nibbled away at the Skipper offense through their effective press. The Skippers' lead waned from 18 to eight in the last six minutes.

But no harm done. The buzzer sounded, and Cohasset jogged off the court with a 45-37 victory.

"This was a great game," exclaimed Lehr. "We had a lot of turnovers, but we also forced them to make some too. Just an awesome team effort."

Young wrestling squad starts season with winning record

By Ben Libby
CORRESPONDENT

Things are looking positive for the wrestlers of Cohasset-Hull, considering that the team came into the season with a enormous bullseye on their back and through several tough dual-meets, they've come out with a winning record.

With wins against Middleboro, BC High, Hanover, and Tri-County and losses to Canton, Pembroke and Mansfield, Cohasset-Hull stands now with a record of 4-3. The squad, which is made of Cohasset wrestlers and five grapplers from Hull, is very young and inexperienced.

Nonetheless, veteran wrestlers such as senior co-captains Shane Dorian, Dave McKenna and Jake Watts have carried the team to some key early season wins.

The season started with a tri-meet with Tri-County and Hanover, in which Cohasset-Hull won both matches. In the Hanover match, the team got pins from Watts (103 pounds), Nick Cambi (189), McKenna (152), Dorian (145), Tim Toomey (160), Adam Smith (140), and Hull's Steven Menley (135). After winning the Hanover match (48-34), Cohasset-Hull followed up with a crushing (51-18) victory against Tri-County.

The following weekend, the wrestlers battled two tough opponents in Pembroke and Mansfield, and lost both matches. Pembroke, rated #32 in the team rankings in the state, featured a surprise pin by Steve Tressel over McKenna ('05 state champion) at the 152 weight class. Meanwhile, Mansfield was just too strong for a young and inexperienced team like Cohasset.

In a much anticipated dual match with BC High, Cohasset snuck out a very close (39-36) victory with a final match pin by Ryan McClellan (125). According to coach Torin Sweeney, the match was "back and forth." Wrestling against the top competition from BC, Dorian (140, ranked #1 in the state) and McKenna (152, #5) both delivered key victories for Cohasset, winning by 9-3 and 7-1 margins, respectively.

Also performing well for Cohasset-Hull was Watts (112), Cambi (215), Toomey (160), Steven Hurlburt (189), and Hull's Steven Gratta (103), who all pinned in their matches. In the end, it was exciting as Cohasset trailed BC 36-35 going into the final match at 125. However, McClellan delivered with a huge pin for the victory.

On Tuesday, Cohasset traveled to Middleboro for a dual meet. In a match that also went down to the wire, it was Cambi (215) who helped deliver the victory for his teammates with a pin.

"Cambi won a very important match for us, as we were down (36-37) and he was the final wrestler, but he pulled it out with a huge pin," Sweeney said.

In the match, Dorian, McKenna, Smith and McClellan all pinned their opponent.

As of late, Sweeney has been going with a line-up of: 103, Watts; 112, McClellan; 119, Joe Capen (Hull) or Devon Bell; 125, Dave Toomey or Mike Froio; 130, Sweeney's pick; 135, Menley (Hull; 140, Adam Smith; 145, Dorian; 152, McKenna; 160, Gannon Dorian or Tim Toomey; 171, Charlie LeCerte (Hull); 189, Steve Hurlburt; 215, Nick Cambi, and heavyweight George Miller.

On top of that, Sweeney made note of about six JV wrestlers who were, "working hard and about to get some varsity action."

Sweeney says he has been very impressed with the whole "team atmosphere."

"We have a lot of new wrestlers who have never wrestled in a varsity match," Sweeney said. "But by the time we get to the postseason, we'll be a strong team who will contend for the South sectional title. Right now, I'm just taking it day by day, but the kids are working hard and we'll improve very rapidly as the season extends on."

Looking ahead, Cohasset has three tournaments ahead of them with the Marshfield (Dec. 28 and 29), North Quincy (Jan. 7) and Cohasset (Jan. 14) Tournaments all in the next three weeks. After that, there are no more tournaments for Cohasset until the sectionals, in which Cohasset has to have a winning record to compete as a team.

Nonetheless, with the leadership of McKenna, Dorian, and Watts, and the coaching of Sweeney, Cohasset could be in for another successful and exciting season.

While the opening night reviews were glowing for both the Cohasset and Holbrook boys basketball teams last Wednesday night, the Bulldogs were the ones who stole the spotlight.

The two teams fought feverishly from the tip-off, with the Bulldogs of Holbrook clipping the Skippers of Cohasset by a score of 55-44. Junior Jeff Brown came off the bench to score a team-high 12 points to go with seven rebounds.

Adding to Brown's output, junior John McCarthy chipped in with nine points and three rebounds, while sophomore Pat McCarthy added eight points and four boards.

Head coach Dorian Bryant said the teams' difference in speed was the biggest factor in Holbrook's win.

"Holbrook was quick, and they took advantage of their ability to capitalize on fast break situations," said Bryant.

Playing well for Cohasset in an unfamiliar situation was sophomore Ryan Crough, who came

A new beginning for gymnastics

By Rachel Thomas
CORRESPONDENT

The Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team will have their first meet against Pembroke tonight, and they will do so under new leadership.

Amy Maree, a graduate of the Norwell High School class of 2003, assumes the roll as coach of the Norwell-Cohasset team, taking over for Kara Connerty. Maree, who attends Bridgewater State College, was a member of the Norwell gymnastics team for her four years in high school, and is thrilled to obtain the position.

Although Maree only recently stepped in as head coach,

The team looks very promising for this season, as all of the seniors possess strong skill in the sport and are presumed to be a large advantage for the team.

Norwell senior and co-captain Erin Kelly says, all of the girls have really warmed up to her. Along with Kelly, Norwell's CJ Himberg and Cohasset's Lisa Spirito and Kate Carpenter, all of whom are seniors, were named captains.

Maree says all four will be huge assets for the team this year.

The Norwell-Cohasset team will face exceptionally tough competition this season, as Barnstable, the 2004 state champion, was just recently added to the Cranberry League. Even with the challenging competition, the team is optimistic for a successful season.

We have a pretty strong team this year from both Cohasset and Norwell, and although the

SPORTS NOTES

Youth lacrosse sign-up open through Jan. 7

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will finish its spring 2006 registration with a second sign-up day, on January 7 from 9 - 11:30 a.m. at Cohasset High School.

Parents can come to that sign-up day, or can request paperwork via e-mail and return it by January 8.

"After January 7, we would expect to be at our ideal roster size in a few different age groups, so signing up on time is important," says Chuck Jaffe, director of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "We will take everyone who signs up during the registration period, even if it puts us above our ideal roster sizes, but there's not going to be much hope for latecomers in certain age groups once the registration period closes."

To that end, Jaffe suggests that parents who have any concern about forgetting or missing the Jan. 7 final sign-up simply drop him an e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com or call 781-383-9858, telling him the number of children they are registering for the season.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will field boys and girls teams in the 11-and-Under (grades 3 and 4), 13-and-Under (grades 5 and 6) and 15-and-Under age groups.

At all levels, practices should not conflict with most other youth sports activities.

Registration for 2006 costs $150 for one player, $275 for two players and $100 per child thereafter.

To receive forms or get more information on Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, call 781-383-9858 or e-mail CAJaffe@aol.com.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse holds "Try-It" for new players

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is hosting its first ever "Try-It" for boys and girls in grades 3-8, on Wednesday, Dec. 28 from 9 - 11 a.m. in Pembroke.

This is not a "tryout" for experienced players, but rather a "try-it," a chance for kids who have never played lacrosse -- but who are curious about it -- to get a feel for what the game involves, to throw and catch with some personalized instruction and to run through some beginner drills.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will provide as much lacrosse gear as it can; while the group encourages Try-It participants to borrow equipment for the day from friends and neighbors, it does not want anyone to purchase sticks or protective gear just to participate in the Try-It.

"We recognize that kids may not be sure if they like lacrosse, or they may have some notion about what the sport is or is not all about, so we want to give them a chance to work with our coaches and to see if lacrosse is something they might want to participate in," says Chuck Jaffe, director of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "Lacrosse can be expensive too, and the Try-It is a way for kids to experience some drills, to make sure they are not afraid of the ball, and to get a sense of what it takes to play lacrosse before their parents ever go out and spend money buying equipment.

"The Try-It is a good chance to ask your kid 'Are you sure about lacrosse?' before spending money on equipment that might otherwise never get used."

There is no charge and no obligation for participating in the Try-It.

Due to space restrictions, the event is limited to "new players," defined as those who have never played a spring season with Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. Latecomers are welcome. Says Jaffe: "We know how busy the vacation week is, so it's fine if someone shows up late or has to leave early; we just want them to get a taste of what the game is all about."

The Try-It will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 28 from 9 a.m. - 11 a.m. on the turf field at ProShots Athletic Center in Pembroke. (For directions, go to www.proshotscenter.com. Because the field is indoors, the event will be held regardless of weather conditions.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will complete registration for the spring 2006 season on Saturday, January 7 at Cohasset High School. For information on Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, registration or the Try-It, see cohassetlacrosse.com or contact Chuck Jaffe at 781-383-9858 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

Cohasset Soccer Club Spring 2006 Travel registration

Registration for the Spring 2006 Season has begun! Boys and girls, U16 and U18 players, or any U12 or U14 players who did not participate in the fall season and who wish to play in the spring Coastal League season, may begin registering.

Registration can easily be completed online by going to the Club's web site www.cohassetsoccer.com. Registration will remain open until Dec. 31. After this date, players wishing to participate will be accepted only if there is room available on the applicable rosters. All players who already registered for the travel fall and spring seasons are automatically signed up for the spring session with no additional registration or fees required.

Cohasset has experienced strong success in Coastal League competition, with two to three teams each year over the past five years winning their League championship and then participating in the State's Tournament of Champions held each year at UMASS Amherst.

To be part of this winning tradition, players should register now to be assured a spot to play in the upcoming spring competition.

COHASSET GIRLS TRAVEL BASKETBALL

The 2005-2006 season for the Cohasset girls' travel basketball program for grades 5-8, sponsored by the Basketball Boosters, has gotten underway with some fast and hard-fought action.

The summaries for each of the teams in their opening weeks are as follows:

8th grade girls off to fast start

The Cohasset 8th grade girls travel basketball team opened the 2005-06 season in strong fashion. In the Abington pre-season tournament, the girls played East Bridgewater and Abington and were victorious in both games.

In the first game against East Bridgewater, the 8th grade cagers built an early lead and held on for a 25-23 victory as Isabelle Franklin stole the ball in the backcourt with 15 seconds left in the game and converted a short jump shot for the winning basket. Meredith Kelly led a balanced attack with six points.

In the second game against Abington's Old Colony League team the Cohasset eighth graders had an easier game and won going away, 36-18. The team was again led in scoring by Kelly, who poured in 12 points. Franklin added seven, Tori Lehr contributed six, and Mimi Mahoney hit for five, including the year's first three point shot.

In the South Shore League season-opener on Sunday, Dec. 4, the 8th graders opened with a convincing 36-23 road win at Hull. Cohasset started very strong and built-up an early eight point lead, only to let Hull back into the game by surrendering several baskets off Hull's full court press. As a result, at the half Cohasset's lead was only 14-12. The game would have been tied at the half if a Hull basket hadn't been nullified by a gutsy offensive charge drawn by Mahoney.

In the second half Cohasset shook off the early season cobwebs and outscored Hull 22-11. A strong drive to the basket by Chelsea Silvia, two perfect free throws by Lucy Noble, and a beautifully executed give-and-go by Erin Fontaine sealed the win late in the game.

Lindsey Allard led Cohasset with nine points, Kelly added eight, and Franklin chipped in with six. Lehr rebounded strongly and keyed several fast breaks, while Samantha Crough played strong defense and Hannah Burgess had several nice assists.

The Eighths continued their winning ways the following week with an impressive 42-27 victory over Halifax. Cohasset was sluggish in the first half and was having difficulty handling Halifax's aggressive man-to-man defense. Although the Blue and White girls were getting good, easy shots, they were just not falling. As a result, at the half their lead was only 15-12.

To match Halifax's intensity, Cohasset opened the second half in a man-to-man defense and quickly built up a double digit lead on strong drives by Kelly and jump shots by Allard. In the second half Cohasset scored 27 points and won going away. Kelly led all scorers with 13 points and Allard tingled the twine for eight.

7th graders split opening contests

After dropping their season opener to Hull, the 7th grade girls bounced back to claim a nice 26-18 win at Halifax to even their record at 1-1.

The Blue and White streaked to a commanding 8-0 lead in the opening minutes at Halifax and never looked back thanks to crisp passing and sharp shooting: Emma Quigley swished a 13-footer; Lindsay Davis banked a runner from the wing; Carly Haggerty drove the lane for a bucket; and Rachel Fredey sank two free throws in an opening salvo which propelled Cohasset into a lead which they never relinquished.

Although Halifax tried to make several runs at the Cohasset advantage, the Blue and White Seven-Ups always had an answer. After Halifax battled back to make it 8-4, a free throw by Kate French preceded two more of Davis' patented running drives from the wing to push the lead up to 13-4. Buckets by Carly Martin (off a fine feed underneath from Haggerty), Haggerty, and Davis left Cohasset in command at the half, 19-11.

Cohasset's play in the second half was not as sharp. Some mental lapses and poor passing allowed Halifax to forestall a blowout. Although the Seven-Ups extended their lead to 21-8 early-on in the half, they did not sustain the same kind of momentum to close out the game. Only some timely hoops by French ensured that Halifax would never seriously threaten.

Davis led all scorers with 11 points, followed by French with five, Haggerty with four, and Fredey, Quigley, and Martin with two points apiece.

In the season opener at Hull the previous week, Haggerty poured in 15 points for the Blue and White in a 34-23 loss. The lead see-sawed between the teams throughout the first half, with Hull claiming the lead at the intermission, 13-10. Although Hull extended its lead to 27-18 midway through the second half, Cohasset battled back to pull within four, 27-23, with four minutes to play.

However, Cohasset's pressure defense eventually resulted in a parade to the foul line for Hull in the closing minutes. Hull ended the game with 11 points from the charity stripe compared to three for Cohasset, an eight point differential which proved crucial to the outcome. Other scorers for Cohasset in the game were Emma Musto, Amy Costa, French and Davis with two points each.

Fifth graders play well in opening SSL contests

The fifth grade team was introduced to the South Shore League with games vs. Hull and Halifax.

In the Hull game, Cohasset fell behind quickly at the start after an 8-0 run by their opponents. But the Blue and White defense stiffened and the offense came alive to get back into the game, 12-8, at the half.

However, the second half proved to be one of those encounters where the opponent seemed to hit whatever they tossed up, as Hull swished shots from all over the key, with the final score ending up in Hull's favor by a 28-15 margin.

Christine Chase led Cohasset with six points. Isabella Flibotte chipped in with four, Kristin Alexander added three, and Sarah Fredey hit a bucket for two points. On the defensive end, Cohasset played well for their first game experience. Abby Carrier was all over the Hull guards and Kate Sookiasian, Gabrielle Rioux, Charlotte Barszewski, and Emma Smith anchored the defense under the basket, creating many fast-break opportunities for the Blue and White. Unfortunately, Cohasset was unable to capitalize on some of them.

In the game at Halifax, the Fifths fought valiantly against an aggressive defense despite playing with an undermanned squad. Two Blue and White players were away and two others were fighting colds and the stomach bug.

In the first half, Cohasset played catch up, trying to penetrate the Halifax defense, as the girls came up against a defense they had yet to practice against, which was compounded by the lack of practice because of gym unavailability the week before which further hurt their preparation. Although the Blue and White made some adjustments at the half, they were never quite able to get back into the game. The Cohasset girls tired as the second half progressed and Halifax eventually pulled away for the win.

Flibotte led the scoring with six points. Barszewski, Sookiasian and Alexander each had a bucket. Fredey and Carrier held their own with the guard duty. Smith anchored the five-spot on both ends of the court against a tough team. Again, Cohasset had opportunities, but was unable to capitalize. All in all, it was quite a "welcome" to the South Shore League for the Blue and White girls.

5th & 6th grade combined team cruises to 26-12 win

It was clear from the outset of their opening game that the Cohasset 5th and 6th grade combined team was on a mission in their season-opener against Scituate when the girls took it upon themselves to run laps prior to the game to aid in their warm-ups.

Cohasset's tough defense, along with strong rebounding led by Annie Robinson, Whitney Jaffe, and Allison Whelan, got the team off to a great start, thwarting Scituate's early offensive surge. Then guards Meghan Kearney and Mariel Teague began to push the ball up the court, assisting on baskets by Jaffe, to give Cohasset an early the lead.

The floodgates open up when Kayla Orner, Scarlett McQuade, Elizabeth Hegearty and Kelsey McCunney joined Jaffe in the scoring column, building a 12-2 advantage, and team 56 never looked back. The Cohasset girls played very aggressively on defense in the second half, diving for loose balls, cutting off passing lanes, and blocking shots to prevent Scituate from getting back into the contest. A second half offensive display by Orner sealed the deal for the Blue and White.

Orner led the team in scoring, followed by Jaffe, McQuade, and Teague. On the defensive end, Robinson had five blocked shots which, combined with Jaffe's rebounding at both ends of the court, adding to Cohasset's overall fine team effort. The Dynamic Duo of Orner and McQuade in particular continually frustrated Scituate shooters all day long.

COASTAL-STARS

Squirt C2

The headline should read "Stars win 3-3 against the South Shore Eagles". In what was a tremendously exciting post-Thanksgiving game at Pilgrim Rink, Steve Healey's Stars treated family and friends to a rousing action-filled hockey game.

In the first period Center Derek Benson put the Stars on the board early with a blazing rush on net. Forwards Tom Pilat and David Craig, provided strong back checking to hold off an Eagles attack. A quick one slid past goalie Hugh Healey and the period ended 1-1.

Defenseman Jake Denton pulled the Stars ahead in the second period with an unassisted breakaway goal. Forwards Tim Cavanaro, Daniel Cronin, Cameron Mastrangelo and Jake Moore unleashed a back checking frenzy, grabbing the rebounds and looking to stuff another in the net. Hard work by defensemen Joe Proctor and Sam Asnault kept the Eagles behind most of the period. A quick breakaway by the Eagles pulled the two teams even.

The third period was the final battleground -- after many shots on net in the earlier periods, center Mats Nelson found his opening with an impressive shot into the Eagles' goal. Smart and aggressive play kept the Stars in the lead until a loose puck and a quick shot pulled the score even again. Unfortunately time ran out and the buzzer sounded.

To cap off the Thanksgiving festivities, the Stars C-2 team fought a hard won match against their sister team the C-1 Squirts at Hobomock Arena.

Off to a quick start, center Derek Benson jumped on it from the start to score the first goal. The energy level was noticeably high as defenseman Jake Denton kicked into high gear with a steal and a breakaway run to the net to bring C-2 up 2-0. Goalie Hugh Healey was like Edward Scissorhands, fending off shots. Late in the period, one snuck in the corner for the C-1s.

Center Mats Nelson opened up the second period breaking through down the boards and flying past the goal for a beautiful corner shot that showcased strong stick handling. Forwards Jake Moore and Tim Cavanaro, along with Tom Pilat and David Craig kept the play in the opponent's zone putting the kibosh on any C-1 thoughts of a breakout play.

The third period saw center Derek Benson earn his hat trick, with wings Cameron Mastrangelo, Daniel Cronin providing strong back checking. A third goal slipped in by C-1 closed the margin, but this period was all about our strong defense. Jack Conlon, Sam Asnault, Joe Proctor and Jake Denton made it their mission to protect the net from assault. Mission accomplished! Coastal Stars C-2 Squirts win 5-3.

Jake Denton, assisted by Jack Conlon for the final game goal.

Squirt A

In a dominating display of teamwork and hustle, the Squirt A Coastal Stars scored 13-0 and 5-0 wins over Hanover and the Seahawks.

Jack Kuppens and Jake McDonough were the primary beneficiaries of the Stars' team play against Hanover. Kuppens started the scoring two minutes in on an end-to-end rush, and struck again five minutes later on a backhander to the stick side.

With 4:32 left in the first, Dan LeBlanc fired to the top right corner from the left slot. Jake McDonough took the ensuing faceoff to the net and put it home for the 4-0 lead. A minute later, McDonough scored on an aggressive wraparound. Will Golden dashed end-to-end and scored top shelf with a minute left in the first. Jack Kuppens picked up the hat trick one minute into the second on a feed in front from Will DeCoste. DeCoste scored a goal of his own a shift later when he stole at center ice, rushed on net, and found the five-hole. Jake McDonough got the hat trick one on a rifle shot from the left circle, and made it 10-0 when he went up top, stick-side, with 3:52 left.

Tom Dixon, Terrence Doonan, and Will Decoste's forechecking paid off when Dixon found Doonan in front on the left side and T-Dog banged it home. Will Golden made it 13-0, going top corner, glove side, after a rush from center ice.

The Stars continued their excellent play a day later against the Seahawks. Connor Maher was severely tested in net, but was sensational in gaining a second straight shutout. The teams skated evenly through the scoreless first. The Stars' defensive corps of Dan LeBlanc, Kevin McDougall, Andrew Geddes, and Jared McCrystal was strong throughout, particularly near the end of the first, when the Stars were down two skaters because of penalties.

Will Golden put the Stars up one minute into the second when he stole the puck at the blue line, broke in, and scored glove side. Jonathan Spitz made it 2-0 after Jake McDonough won the faceoff to Peter Bent in the middle slot. Bent's shot was stopped, but Spitz dug out the rebound and slammed it home. Terrence Doonan backhanded a dagger of a goal from in front with one second left, and the Stars led, 3-0, after two.

Will Golden scored with 10:43 left in the third on a rush from his blue line. And McDonough wrapped up the scoring to make it 5-0 on a nice pass from Geddes.

Both teams parried and created outstanding scoring chances through the rest of the contest, but Connor Maher and the Stars kept the Seahawks off the board. The Stars now sport a hard-earned 11-1-1 record.

off the bench to provide valuable minutes at the point guard spot. Bryant was impressed with Crough's "ability to make plays and work hard."

Bryant noted that, "We played very well. Defensively, we played very well, as we were able to get good pressure on the ball. However, at times they struggled offensively, but they gave me a excellent effort and that's what I'm looking for each game."

With Cohasset keeping the score close with exceptional defense and mediocre offense, Bryant had to take risks in the end to make a dramatic change on the scoreboard.

"The score got away from us in the end," said the second year coach. "We had to gamble and that's what happens when you gamble and things don't go your way."

Two key subtractions from the Cohasset team were Trevor Brady (college visit) and Chris Bryan (ankle injury). Bryant said that with the additions of Bryan and Brady to the lineup, "we are a better team." With the starting five that Bryant put out on Tuesday (Nick Arment, Justin Alexander, Pat McCarthy, John McCarthy, Kyle Pinkus), and bench players like Brown, Crough, Jake Cuneo, Dave Snowdale and Will Pinkus, things look positive for the upcoming Cohasset boys basketball season.

"The team looks good," Bryant said. "I'm excited. I think if the kids want to put in the hard work and want to learn, we can be a successful team."

Cohasset falls to 0-2 against Mashpee

Last Friday the boys' varsity basketball team traveled down the cape to face the Mashpee Falcons. Coming in 0-1 and this being their first league game, this was a very important game for the Skippers.

The game started off rather slowly with only a 5-0 score after the first five minutes, Mashpee with the advantage. By the time Cohasset scored their first basket of the game with nine minutes left in the first half, they were trailing the Falcons by eight.

Mashpee outplayed the Skippers until the final minutes of the first half when the Skippers went on an 8-2 run to cut the lead to nine points. Cohasset trailed the Falcons 24-15 at the half, led by sophomore Pat McCarthy with six points. Guard Joey Lopes led Mashpee with seven points.

Coming into the second half, Cohasset was full of intensity. They displayed there desire to win by quickly cutting the Mashpee lead to only two points. This surge by Cohasset was ended soon due to the good defense of Lopes - who drew many charging fouls - and the entire Falcons team.

Cohasset then played very sloppy ball with many unforced turnovers. All of this turned into a nightmare for the Skippers, and a 12-0 run by the Falcons. During this time, Cohasset did not score any points for almost six minutes.

A late comeback sparked by Pat McCarthy and Alexander cut the Mashpee lead to eight points. For a while, it looked like Cohasset was going to be able to pull this comeback off. But in the end, the Skippers could not overcome the 12-0 run and large deficit that they were up against.

The Skippers hosted Holbrook in a rematch last night in preparation for next week's annual holiday tournament.

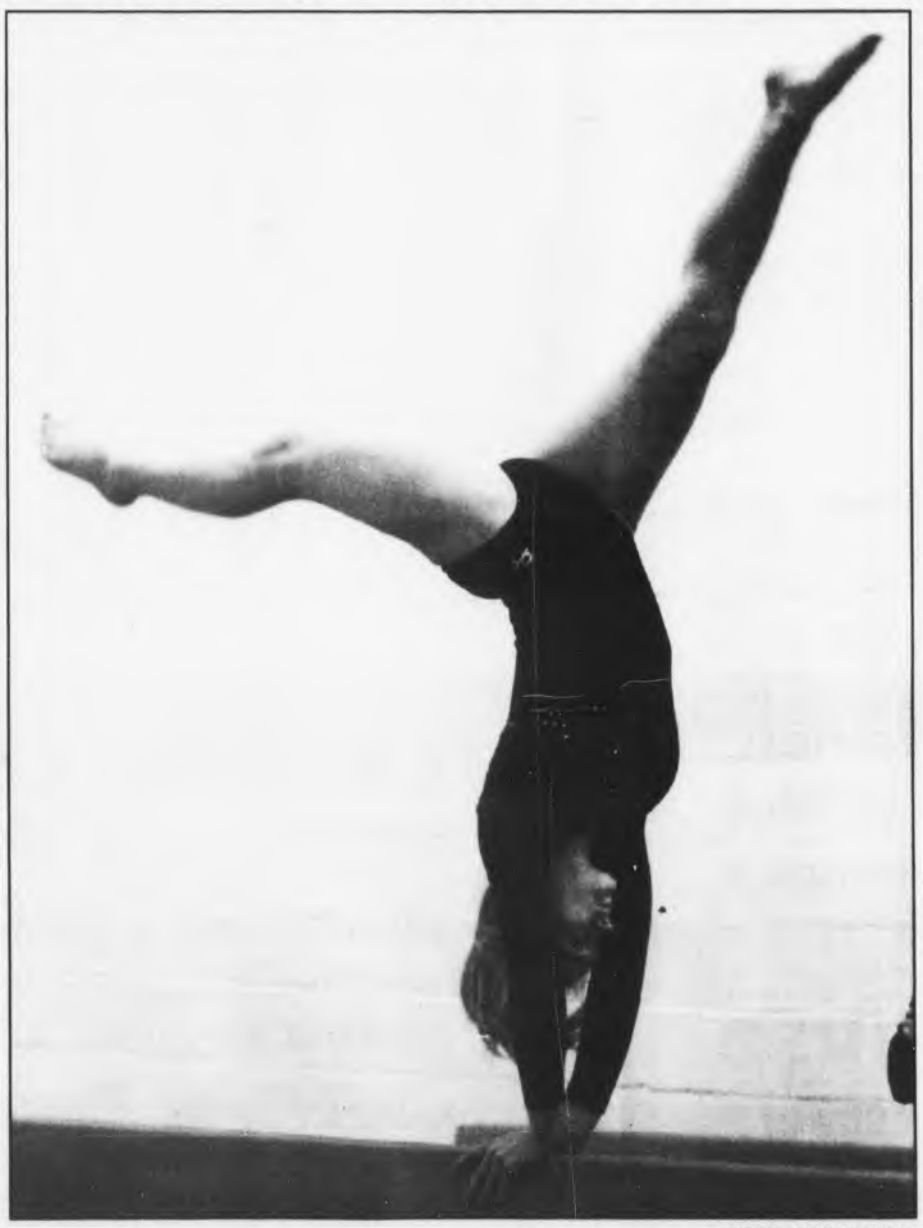
league is very hard, the girls have great attitudes and are extremely talented, Maree said.

The team looks very promising for this season, as all of the seniors possess strong skill in the sport and are presumed to be a large advantage for the team. There are also talented underclassmen that will contribute to the team, such as juniors Melissa Murphy, Jamie Nichols, and Kiersten Shontz of Norwell and some new freshman, whom Maree says she is expecting a lot from and is eager to see what they can pull out.



Both the team and the coach have confidence that the team will do well in the opening meet.

The team members met with a judge last week for a critique and showed her their routines. And, as Maree says, even though there are a lot of nerves for the first meet, the girls are excited to compete against Pembroke.

The meet, which is not a league meet, is expected to be close and competitive. Both the team and the coach have confidence that the team will do well in the opening meet.

It should be a good, competitive start to the season, Kelly said.

Nor-Coh's strengths seem to be in floor and beam, but essentially the team is pretty well rounded, according to Kelly.

'It can be anybody'

Pantries cater to those from all walks of life

Editor's note: This is the last in a series of CNC/South Gifts of Hope articles focusing on the work and needs of food pantries serving South Shore communities.

By Seth Jacobson
CORRESPONDENT

Hunger does not discriminate. Anyone can be affected by it.

If you were to walk into any food pantry on the South Shore, you'd see a myriad of people, from single mothers, to elderly people on fixed incomes, to people who have lost high-paying jobs.

"Seventy-nine percent of the people we serve own homes," said Greater Boston Food Bank President and CEO Catherine D'Amato. "That means only roughly 20 percent of people are homeless…most often a homeless person is hungry. But most often, a hungry person is not homeless.

"The people who are visiting food pantries these days aren't alcoholics in the alley. That's not what we're talking about at all. Typically, it's the working poor, people who have jobs who just can't make ends meet."

D'Amato added she has a friend who was once very successful in the local hospitality industry with his own business. She explained her friend eventually sold the business and moved himself and his wife to a place in the suburbs.

Her friend found that his wife's salary as a teacher was still not enough to cover the high costs of living in Massachusetts.

"He couldn't find another job," D'Amato said, adding her friend was soon forced to sell his cars and his home. He and his wife were forced to move to Florida, where a relative knew of a reasonably-priced home.

"The key is, it could be you, it could be me," D'Amato said.

Hanover Emergency Food Pantry coordinator Barbara Itz said she and fellow coordinator Sally Boutin see a lot of different types of people walk through the door.

"We see seniors on a fixed income, people who are working and just can't pay the bills and single moms and dads," Itz said. "We definitely get a wide range of people. There are all kinds of reasons someone might be forced to use a food pantry. And I don't think there are too many stereotypes about people who use food pantries anymore. Things have changed. People understand it can be anybody."

Pembroke Food Pantry coordinator Carol Ferguson said she also sees many types of people walk through the door.

"You can't just pin it down to one kind of person," she said. "We get a wide range of people."

Ferguson said one pantry visitor that stands out in her mind is a construction worker, who had been getting food there for a while. She explained now that construction worker is back on his feet, he buys food and drops it off at the pantry from time to time.

"He had been helped by us and he didn't forget that," Ferguson said, adding she never has gotten the man's name.

"There are all different kinds of people who come in," said Craig Martin of the St. Vincent de Paul Food Pantry in Abington. "Last week, we had a homeless guy come in. But we also get a lot of people who are living paycheck to paycheck."

"One day, everything can be fine, the next day, there could be some sort of tragedy in your life," added Scituate Church Pantry volunteer Betty Crowley. "If you have a nest egg that has to go to that tragedy, you could be in trouble."

Each pantry generally has its own rules and guidelines. Itz, Martin and Crowley said in the case of their respective pantries, one has to be a town resident to use them. But Ferguson said the Pembroke Food Pantry accepts people from all over the South Shore.

"We try to steer people from other towns to their own pantries but we help them when they come in," Ferguson said. She added her pantry does often conduct an interview with people when they first come in, as the other pantries do. However, the interviews are not invasive.

"The first time we see people, we just like to give them an overview," Itz explained. "We tell them they're allowed to visit once a month. We ask them for a picture ID or a utility bill to prove they're a town resident."

"We also ask for identification," added Crowley. "But we do our initial interviews very privately. We ask questions about income and questions on benefits people may or may not be receiving. I find most people don't mind the interviews, they actually expect them. We certainly respect the privacy laws and we don't talk to other people about our clients."

Martin said he has the same general requirements at the St. Vincent de Paul pantry.

"We ask for proof of residency," he said. "And we have a quick discussion on what the person's particular needs are. All we ask is that people are honest with us when they come in."

D'Amato said she is aware of the rules pantries have and noted structure is a good thing. She added, "Not all food pantries have the same criteria."

Crowley said although some people might be nervous about showing up at a food pantry, it is important they know that there are a lot of people who are forced to do so these days.

"The bottom line is that we're here for you," she said. "Don't be afraid to go. We know there are those out there who need us."

D'Amato said she does not see any end in sight to the hunger problem in this state. She said the problem is contingent on three things—personal experience, political costs and the lack of affordable housing.

"When it comes to hunger, there's no magic answer," D'Amato said. "The challenge is, how do we respond to it? I think we'll always be in the position where it will be important to help people. Can the situation get better? Sure. There are actions people can take that could make a difference. I think it means taking action together. Everyone has a role in ending hunger."

To donate to the Gifts of Hope, simply make your check payable to one of the food pantries listed and forward it to Anne Rodwell, CNC/South, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050. All donations will be published in the paper, unless the donor requests otherwise.

Thinking of donating food?

Area food pantries have different needs.

While all of them can always use money and volunteers, they are also looking for food in bulk. The following are some of the kinds of things area food pantries are asking for.

The St. Vincent de Paul Pantry in Abington: Diapers and snack foods. Distribution hours are Tuesdays from 6-7:30 p.m.

The Scituate Church Pantry: Tin foil, cleaning supplies, condiments, paper goods like plates, napkins and tissues, garbage bags and toothpaste and toothbrushes. Canned foods like soups and vegetables are also needed. Distribution hours are Tuesdays from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. On the last Tuesday of every month, there is an extra distribution session from 7-8 p.m.

Hanover Emergency Food Pantry: Meats and meat products like Spam, canned chicken and turkey and Dinty Moore beef stew. The pantry also welcomes pasta and pasta sauce, canned fruit, cereal, canned vegetables, rice, peanut butter and jelly, paper goods, shampoo, toothpaste and toothbrushes and shaving needs. Distribution hours are from 12:30-2:30 p.m. on Wednesdays.

Pembroke Food Pantry: Peanut butter and jelly, canned goods, cereal, shampoo and soap. Distribution hours are from 8:30-11:30 a.m. on Wednesdays.

Greater Boston Food Bank: Food bank President and CEO Catherine D'Amato said things like canned goods, peanut butter, tuna fish, pasta and pasta sauce, dried beans and other non-perishable goods are always appreciated at area food pantries. She added when you're thinking about donating food, try to give things that are non-perishable and high in protein. For other donation ideas, log onto the food bank's Web site at www.helpfighthunger.org.

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

MINIMALLY INVASIVE COCHLEAR IMPLANT SURGERY

Cochlear implants are small electronic devices that contain a microphone, a speech processor, a transmitter, a receiver-stimulator, and electrodes. They are very different from hearing instruments, which amplify sound, in that they compensate for damaged or non-working parts of the inner ear. The implant is usually surgically placed under the skin behind the ear. More recently, however, researchers have developed a minimally invasive cochlear implant that avoids the need to create a large scalp earflap. Instead, surgeons make a small "pocket" for the cochlear device. The new minimally invasive surgery leaves a smaller and less noticeable scar. In addition, decreased tissue trauma allows for programming of the implant sooner after surgery.

Keeping pace with the fast-growing technology of today's hearing industry is an important part of our practice at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. In addition to carrying a complete array of hearing instruments, we use specialized equipment to pinpoint and evaluate an individual's hearing impairment. We then match the most appropriate hearing instrument with that particular impairment. And because follow-up support is such an integral part of successfully wearing a hearing instrument, we continue to be here for our clients at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg., in Weymouth, long after hearing aid purchase. PH: 781-337-1144. Visit our website at: www.familyhearing.net.

P.S. While a cochlear implant does not create normal hearing, it can provide a deaf person with a useful auditory awareness of his or her environment and help with the understanding of speech.

A Boston family adventure

By BEN ADELMAN

I'm on my knees trying to squeeze the weekend's supply of perishables into the open slots in the hotel room's minibar when Abe, my 16-month-old son, toddles over, snatches a baby-size bottle of booze and takes off.

My admonition to give it back falls on deaf ears, and I'm forced to chase him around the room for the umpteenth time. It's amazing how hard it is to keep track of a kid in such a confined space. Everything in this two-room suite on the 21st floor of the Hyatt Regency Boston for me falls into two categories: things Abe can reach and things he can't.

The decorative balls on the coffee table were airborne within 30 seconds of check-in. I haven't even figured out how to use the hotel's complimentary loaner iPod, and I'm afraid he's already managed to break it. The king-size bed isn't for sleeping in Abe's world, it's a trampoline. And the pile of pillows a climbing wall.

I feel like I've checked into a nice hotel with a tiny Rolling Stone, and my job is to keep him from trashing the place.

Our father/son adventure started with two words uttered by my wife that should strike fear into the heart of any dad: "me time." This stay-at-home mom wanted a couple of days off. Fair enough, I thought, once my initial panic subsided, but what would I do with the kid for two days? The Hyatt, about 30 miles from our home, seemed like a good solution: Central location in Downtown Crossing, a nice kids' package (aptly titled "Extreme Offspring") that includes milk, cookies, a Frisbee, crayons and tickets to the aquarium or the Children's Museum, and most importantly on my list, an indoor pool.

The reality of what I'd gotten myself into sunk in over dinner the first night. There's a comfortable lounge in the Hyatt where people go to relax and listen to jazz or watch a game on TV. Abe was shouting, throwing food, spitting his drink all over himself and definitely not listening to Dad. I resisted the urge to laugh and put on my sternest face to lay down the law.

This was my first time alone with Abe for more than a few hours, and I was a little nervous. I honestly hadn't realized how much Mom is in charge, and now I felt like the training wheels were off. Of course, the main objective was to bring him home in one piece, but I also wanted this to be a fun experience for the two of us.

There were several other kids in the pool when we went swimming. Abe took a few minutes to get used to the water, but once he did, there was no stopping him. Kickboards are available for hotel guests, and there are plenty of towels to keep little ones warm. The Hyatt's pool is part of a fully equipped gym/spa area, which with Abe in tow I could not explore.

At the Children's Museum, the ceiling-high Clifford with a slide for a tail was great for climbing. Nearby, kids ran giant Styrofoam bones up a conveyor belt into a huge dog bowl. Abe got a kick out of loading the bones -- which were half as big as him -- onto the belt. On another floor there's a whole grocery store with toy food and check-out lines. In the produce section, I had trouble convincing Abe the oranges weren't balls. The museum has floors and floors of interactive, educational exhibits for kids of all ages: real tractors, tunnels to crawl through, golf balls that roll on tracks, an attic full of dress-up stuff.

It's important to supervise your kid at the Children's Museum carefully, though. I made my first mistake when I showed Abe the bubble tables -- troughs of soapy water where kids can blow bubbles using objects of various shapes. I rolled up Abe's sleeves and told him to have at it. He used both hands and with three huge splashes was soaked. He paused a second and blinked through the suds, then began crying and rubbing his irritated eyes. I had to take him into the bathroom to flush out his eyes with fresh water.

By the time we got to the New England Aquarium, it was nap time for Abe (and I could have used one, too). No matter, we were having fun. He got a kick out of watching the harbor seals' water acrobatics, and he grinned and imitated the sound the penguins made during a feeding. The touch tank was a real treat for Abe, and a starfish survived the encounter with all five arms intact. The kid seemed downright mesmerized by the graceful movements of the jellyfish.

The aquarium's layout is ideal for a toddler -- you work your way to the top floor via a series of ramps that surround a giant central tank. I felt comfortable letting Abe walk. When he got to something he wanted to see, he'd stop and reach for me to pick him up.

But the most fun Abe had the entire weekend was playing ball in the halls of the Hyatt. On the 21st floor there's a walkway that looks down onto the 19th floor. Abe chucked his ball (we made sure there were no people below first) through the bars of the railing and had to take the elevator to retrieve it, much to the kid's delight. Elevators as a rule are fun because of the buttons. The experience was repeated several times, much to Abe's delight.

As we drove home after our father/son adventure, I glanced back at my son asleep in his car seat and couldn't help but be a little proud. Father and son had survived, and had a great time, too.

But the most fun Abe had the entire weekend was playing ball in the halls of the Hyatt. On the 21st floor there's a walkway that looks down onto the 19th floor. Abe chucked his ball (we made sure there were no people below first) through the bars of the railing and had to take the elevator to retrieve it, much to the kid's delight. Elevators as a rule are fun because of the buttons. The experience was repeated several times, much to Abe's delight.

As we drove home after our father/son adventure, I glanced back at my son asleep in his car seat and couldn't help but be a little proud. Father and son had survived, and had a great time, too.

What to do with kids in Boston

Small town faces big challenges

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

How will 2005 in Cohasset be remembered? It perhaps can best be described as a transition year with a lot that is "about to happen."

Ground was broken on Cedarmere, a luxury condominium development for the 55-plus set that includes some affordable units – but the future of town-sponsored, senior housing on the Cook Estate remains in limbo. Avalon, a 200-unit apartment complex, is still waiting in the wings pending resolution of wastewater issues. A new commercial subdivision is slated for Rte. 3A and Greenbush train construction is in full swing. The long-awaited revitalization of Cohasset Village should come to fruition in 2006.

Simply stated, Cohasset faces the same challenges as surrounding towns: rapid growth while trying to maintain small-town charm. The town is also not immune to threats of violence and vandalism, which became a common occurrence at the middle-high school in 2005.

On the financial front, the town broke with tradition by not passing an override and also rejected picking up half the tab of the Little Harbor/Atlantic Ave. sewer project. But will voters be back at the ballot box for an override vote this spring? Can the school budget live within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2?

The following Year in Review provides a broad overview of the issues and events that were covered and debated in the pages of the Cohasset Mariner during 2005.

If this past year is a gauge then the Mariner pages in 2006 will continue to be a reflection of life in town whether that be at Town Hall, in the schools, police and fire departments, and business community or through feature stories about residents' interests and accomplishments.

Last February, Tom Pappas of Cape Cod Builders used a jackhammer to loosen the ground in front of the Capt. Cohasset's rocky ledge helps the town weather the worst blizzard in recent memory in terms of snowfall.

Griffin provides new leadership

Town government had a positive year in Cohasset, in large part to the leadership of Town Manager Bill Griffin, who came on board Jan. 31. He was the unanimous selection of the board of selectmen, which gave him high marks during the screening process.

Griffin has put issues to rest in one night that would have previously caused strife for months.

Over the past 11 months, Griffin has helped the town run more efficiently. In fact, this year's Special Town Meeting Warrant was one of the smallest, yet most productive the town has seen in many years.

During selectmen's meetings, Griffin has put issues to rest in one night that would have previously caused strife for months.

Griffin has taken a new approach to budgeting encouraging departments to present figures that live within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2. His ultimate goal is to have the town rely less on reserves. He has held informational fiscal summits to allow everyone involved in the budgeting process to remain fully informed and provides ample time for questions. He also provides financial breakdowns for selectmen on a regular basis.

Selectmen and the public say said Griffin deals with people fairly. Selectmen's meetings are more respectful, not only among members of the board but between the board the public.

Last March, Griffin said one of his goals was to "inspire a sense of teamwork" not only in Town Hall, but in the community. He says he does not have all the answers and "at times I'm going to give an answer people don't want to hear." But in his experience, he said he has found people are willing to accept an answer they don't necessarily want if they feel they have been treated fairly.

Cook Estate made headlines in 2005

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For those who have followed the Cook Estate saga over the past two and a half years, there have been many twists and turns to keep it interesting. However, 2005 was unique in that not one, not two, but three developers took a crack at building the project, and all three ultimately decided it was not in their best interest.

When 2005 began, developers from Northland Residential were still the tentatively designated builders. Northland was slated to partner with the town to build roughly 95 units of mixed-income senior housing on the combined Cook Estate and abutting town property. A simultaneous closing was planned for the town to purchase the property from the Cook trustees for $4.5 million and the developer to then purchase the land from the town for $5.2 million.

The Cook Estate land has had wastewater issues from the start. The soils cannot accommodate a large amount of wastewater and hooking the property up to town sewer was not feasible due to both capacity and political issues. By the time February rolled around, it was clear no progress had been made to resolve the problem. Northland then proposed a hybrid wastewater system, which would dispose of the wastewater from market-rate townhouses on site and for the affordable units via town sewer. Without sewer as an option, Northland said only 65 units could be accommodated with an on-site system.

Selectmen ultimately decided if it wanted to see anything built on the land, it would have to go with a smaller project. However, carrying out a reduced project was a definite change in scope, and Town Counsel advised selectmen to send the entire project back out to bid to satisfy state procurement laws.

At the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting, selectmen report they have successfully negotiated an extension with the heirs of the estate until March 31, 2007.

In May, selectmen began drafting a new Request for Proposals, which dictates what the town would like to see built on the site. Three companies — Northland Residential, Deer Hill Partners, LLC, and Cohasset Associates — bid on the project. Northland bid $5 million and proposed building 65 units of senior housing. Deer Hill bid $4.9 million and proposed building 56 units, and Cohasset Associates bid $5.15 million and proposed building 65 units.

In August, selectmen awarded the bid to Deer Hill Partners. The project did not have a rental component as all 56 units were scheduled to be either affordable or market-rate ownership housing. Some residents were not happy to see a project without rentals and some come forward to ask the selectmen to bring forward an article at the Dec. 5 Town Meeting to build senior housing on the town's land adjacent to the Cook property. With the reduction in the scope of the project, the town took its land out of the equation.

At the same time, Cohasset Associates, the second runner-up, threatened to sue the town if it did not rescind its vote to appoint Deer Hill. The company asserted the town violated the RFP as well as state procurement laws.

The pending lawsuit put a damper on Land Disposition Agreement negotiations. The LDA is an agreement similar to a purchase and sale. The town paid $20,000 to gain a 30-day extension for the project with the Cook trustees. The Cooks tell the town it has until Jan. 15, 2006 to completely finalize and close on the project.

In October, the town sent a letter to Deer Hill Partners asking it for a firm commitment to close on the project by Jan. 15. Deer Hill replies that is not enough time and backs out of the deal. Cohasset Associates, as the second runner-up, is then contacted and it too says it does not have enough time and pulls out of the offer.

At the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting, selectmen report they have successfully negotiated an extension with the heirs of the estate until March 31, 2007. An article, which would have allowed the town to borrow the money necessary to purchase the property directly from the heirs, is pulled from the Warrant. A second article to put a conservation restriction on the town's adjacent parcel of land passes, meaning it is no longer an option for development.

As 2005 comes to a close, the town is looking toward the future and will send out a new RFP for the Cook Project in mid-January. It expects to select another developer by the end of March.

May good health and prosperity be at your doorstep throughout the new year.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

The Old Man and the Kid

The Old Man came awake slowly from his nap in the chair. He shook the sleep from his eyes and glanced at the glass timer on his desk. There was still sand in the upper glass. His tour of duty was almost up. He could hardly wait.

Of course, it was the drip that awakened him, the constant drip and splash of water that had haunted him from the day his watch began. Many times during his reign he thought of the Ancient Mariner's plaint, "Water, water, everywhere, nor any drop to drink."

His watch began with a rush of water from the Indian Ocean that overwhelmed the seacoasts of a dozen countries in Asia and Africa. A tsunami, they called it. It killed some 200,000 people and left upwards of three million homeless, a condition that still prevailed for most of them.

All this before he was out of his swaddling clothes, before the figures "2005" on his sash even had a chance to dry.

Then there were the hurricanes, so many of them that they ran out of names and had to go to the Greek alphabet for new ones, but particularly Katrina, which broke down the levees around New Orleans and turned its people into nomads finding shelter where they could in far parts of the country.

He was wearing more adult clothing when that happened but he still had to stop every now and then to wring the sea water out of his robe for two or three months after the rains stopped.

"Water, water, everywhere . . ." The rhyme kept threading through his mind like some unpleasant memory.

He was still reminiscing to himself when the final grain of sand dropped into the lower glass and, as if by magic, the Kid appeared on the other side of the desk.

His appearance startled the Old Man. He looked so young, so rosy-cheeked. His diapers and his sash with the figures "2006" were so clean they sparkled. That must have been what I looked like a year ago, he thought. Was it only a year?

The Kid drew himself to attention and saluted. "Reporting for duty," he said and, when the Old Man looked at him curiously, he added quickly, "Only kidding. Here I am. You can run along now."

"What's that?" the Old Man asked, nodding at a book the Kid was carrying.

"It's my agenda," said the Kid. "It's what I have to do. It's what you didn't do so I have to do it."

"Can I see it?" asked the Old Man.

"Sure," said the Kid, opening the volume. "The first thing I have to do is get Britney and Ken back together."

"Britney and Ken?"

"Sure. Britney Spears and Ken Federline. You were about to let them break up. I've got to work quickly on that one."

"Huh."

"I've got to find Natalee, too."

"Natalee?"

"Sure. Natalee Holloway. Geez, the way you let the cops down in Aruba blow that case is shameful."

"I thought you might work on finding homes for all these displaced persons," said the Old Man.

"I am," said the Kid. "I want to bring Michael back home."

"Michael?"

"Sure. Michael Jackson. Wasn't he acquitted of all those child molestation charges? Now he's so mad he's moved to Qatar or some place like that. We can't let a talent like that get away from America, can we?"

"I was thinking more of the people who were displaced by the floods and hurricanes."

"Don't worry. That's on my list, too. But I do have priorities, you know."

"But I thought . . ."

"Don't you think it's time for you to go?" said the Kid.

"I guess so," said the Old Man, picking up his scythe and heading for the door.

"Oh, by the way," said the Kid. "I came here by way of the tunnel. You know, the one they call the Big Dig. Has it sprung a leak? It was drip, drip, drip all the way through. I could have gotten wet."

Christmas tree pickup

Cohasset Middle School students are offering residents an alternative to messing up their cars taking dried out Christmas trees to the Dump. Instead, used Christmas trees can be picked up by calling the Teen Garage at 781-383-2492 and leaving a message including name and address. Trees should be placed on front lawns by 8 a.m. on Saturday, Jan. 7 for pick up either Saturday, or Sunday, Jan. 8, with payment of $15 per tree, $10 for seniors, attached in an envelope. Checks should be made payable to Project Safeguard. Proceeds will benefit the Cohasset community and Project Safeguard, a group of parents and teachers committed to improving our adolescents' physical, emotional and social health and well being.

War on Christmas

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Well, it's over for another year, at least. Christmas, I mean.

No, not the Christmas that finds us dashing through the snow to grandma's house or singing a sleighing song or even walking in a winter wonderland.

I mean the one that has us at each other's throats every 12 months over whether or not we should wish each other a "Merry Christmas" or a "Happy Holiday" or simply exhort each other to "have a happy."

Hopefully, next year we can get back to the real purpose of Christmas, which is buying stuff.

It's no accident that the season's most important book, after the latest Harry Potter potboiler, seems to have been one called "The War on Christmas," although as far as I know it never got higher than 21st on the Top 20 lists of best sellers.

And when Tom Menino started calling Boston's official Christmas tree a "holiday tree," the Rev. Jerry Falwell deployed his troops on Route 128 and the farmer in Nova Scotia who supplied the tree threatened to come down and put it through the chipper.

Hopefully, next year we can get back to the real purpose of Christmas, which is buying stuff.

The critical engagement in the just ended war on Christmas in these parts took place in Medway, where the satellite dishes were trained on the Memorial Middle School to catch the annual "holiday" concert.

It must have felt like opening night on Broadway to the kids who performed in the concert.

Of course, the Florida-based Liberty Counsel, the Rev. Jerry's Green Berets, had to land on the beaches and secure the perimeter around Medway when they heard that Christmas trees were referred to as "magical" trees in some lyrics.

And the sixth graders were sent home with their red and green elf hats so that dutiful Medway mothers could replace the red with white, although what green has to do with Merry Christmas or Happy Holiday is outside my ken.

Songs from the Broadway musical "Jesus Christ Superstar" also were pulled from the holiday concert after two parents complained of the Christmas theme of the program. As far as I know, the school didn't name a replacement.

The war on Christmas wasn't confined to Medway.

It went all the way to the White House, where the occupants sent out 1.4 million Christmas cards wishing their friends a "Happy Holiday" which made some of those friends, who voted for said occupants in 2004, a trifle upset.

They failed to rouse Falwell's Marauders, however.

Cookies baked into the shape of Christmas symbols were banned from "holiday" parties at the Heritage Elementary School in Centennial, Colo., and the U.S. Congress found it necessary to pass a "Resolution to Protect Christmas Symbols and Traditions."

The comment that made the most sense came from Tracy Goldrick, mother of an 11-year-old Medway schoolgirl, who told the Boston Herald:

"The solution isn't to take Christmas out of the (school events). The solution is telling people to lighten up."

And then we can get back to buying stuff.

School security becomes a concern

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset Middle High School has never had a year where the police were called to respond as much as in 2005. Between bomb threats, gun threats, and numerous acts of vandalism, students lost out on class time as well as a feeling of security.

Just before 6 a.m., Wednesday, May 11, a member of the school faculty who was opening up the building for the day found a threatening note along with a bullet outside the middle school. Police were called to the scene and an investigation was immediately launched. Students were dismissed early to allow the police to conduct a thorough search of the school and its grounds.

By the time school re-opened in the fall, Police Chief James Hussey said the investigation into the incident was well underway. Detectives had collected physical evidence from the scene and several anonymous tips were pursued. A bullet was also found in a Cohasset neighborhood which was similar to the one found on school grounds, which helped further the investigation.

On Tuesday, June 14, graffiti was discovered on the walkways outside the school and on the athletic department golf cart at the middle-high school. The messages spray-painted around school grounds indicated the likely culprits were members of the Class of 2005.

On Tuesday, June 28, just two weeks later, students arrived on the last day of school to find vandals had struck again. Windows were smashed and several exterior walls were painted with profanity and obscene illustrations. Shrubs were pulled from the ground and strewn about at the entrance by the main office. The golf cart was targeted once again, but this time was turned upside down in front of the school's garage doors.

Hussey said fingerprints and physical evidence were taken from both vandalism scenes and surveillance video was sent off to the lab for enhancement. Witness interviews were also conducted.

On Monday, Sept. 26, the Cohasset Police Department responded to an alarm, which was set off at the middle-high school at roughly 1:30 p.m. Responding officers found a torn screen on the first floor of the middle school section of the building. Further investigation lead officers to find notes inside the building which indicated there was a bomb in the school. A note on the front door had the same message. The Boston Bomb Squad was called to investigate a suspicious package.

On Sunday, Oct. 16, a written note was discovered on school property by a teacher and students meeting to carpool to Boston. The note included the threat to bring a gun to school, and in turn, Principal Joel Antolini decided backpacks, purses, and lunch bags would all be subject to searches. School was delayed for two hours Monday, Oct. 17.

CMHS gets in the news for the wrong reason last May when a Columbine-like note with a bullet taped to it was discovered.

On Tuesday, Oct. 18, the middle-school was closed for the entire day as police discovered a threatening note at roughly 1:30 a.m. on the middle-high school sign at the school's entrance. The note indicated there was a bomb in the school. A 13-year-old student was arrested in connection with the threat, and the Sept. 26 bomb threat.

The police department will continue the investigation into all the incidents into 2006.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Higginson family heads back home

To the Editor:

The following was written to the children of Cohasset:

We are writing to thank you, and your parents, for welcoming us so warmly after we left our home in New Orleans because of Hurricane Katrina. We came here because Chris, Cadie and Stephanie's grandparents live here and they have a home here full of happiness and love.

This week, we return to our old home in New Orleans, carrying with us wonderful memories and the new and lasting friendships you gave us.

Most of all, we leave with a rare lesson you have taught about helping people in difficulty: Shower cheer and generosity (a whole town's worth) and misfortune can turn to adventure. We wish all New Orleans could have squeezed in with us, welcomed by you—like the zoo animals trying wondrously to stay quiet squished together in the zookeeper's bed, in the story "Goodnight Gorilla."

Cadie, Stephanie and Chris have adored being with many of you in second and fourth grades at Osgood and Deer Hill. Last week, you in the fourth grade put smiles on Chris' face with a pizza farewell event, organized by Chris' teacher Mr. Beaudry the day before his child was born. And in Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Collins' magical second grade classrooms, many of you delighted Stephanie and Cadie with festive goodbyes.

What a wonderful elementary school world you have made. Congratulations to you all, and to your teachers and your parents and the townsfolk. We gave no notice that Chris, Cadie and Stephanie would start school with you, but Mrs. Sheehan and Mr. Gawley opened everything to them. Imagine if you arrived at a new school, in a new place, just the day before school began because a hurricane closed your school faraway across the country. You would be nervous. We were. Then imagine finding teachers and classmates you love and every day a fun day for learning and laughter.

Our kids were given that same welcome in your soccer, basketball, and gymnastics programs here in Cohasset. The volunteer grownups, like Wallace St. John, who run these would not accept significant or any payment, plus every parent—and all of you kids—encouraged our three so whoopingly that we weren't surprised on Christmas day when our doorbell rang and the Allard family arrived with a farewell package of Cohasset soccer balls and outfits. We will use and wear them in thanks next week, we hope, on the levee fields that surround New Orleans, Louisiana.

Your library has been a smiling home, especially its children's wing. One Creative Place has been inclusive and a joy; so too the Good Sport, our favorite local business. And many other places you enjoy we now love too.

All of this is a story we do not hear other friends who left New Orleans say has been equaled, though giving has been generous across our country. How nice you treat guests most specially of all, as you do the beauties of your town, like its Common and its beaches. We can only wish that when you travel, or move, you find yourself embraced by as much welcome and beauty as we have been.

We will count the days until you visit us in New Orleans or we return to you next summer.

The Higginson Family,
Steve and Collette, Chris, Cadie and Stephanie

COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER COMPANY'S parentsandkids

If you were czar of Cohasset, what would be your first edict in 2006?

"A sidewalk on every street!"

— Kristin Norton

"Settle the Teachers' contract fairly with strong weight given to the arbitrator's recommendation."

— Joe McElroy

"To direct the School Committee to transform their current School Safety Plan into an updated, detailed, communicated, and practiced Crisis Plan."

— Carolyn Pratt

"Our goal of excellence in education shall be achieved by paying teachers a 25 percent annual bonus for independently measured student performance that is in the top 10 percent of comparable classes in Massachusetts schools. This bonus will attract and retain very high quality teachers. This reward is funded by a 25 percent increase in class size.

"This trade-off is based on a number of research studies that show that excellence is achieved through quality teachers, while only marginal improvements can be expected by reducing class size.

"My edict would spend tax dollars to get the best return on investment in education."

— Louis S. Harvey

"To require the town administration and departments, as well as the school system, be run as 'for-profit' businesses with responsibility and accountability to the 'shareholders' a.k.a. the taxpayers."

— Karen Quigley

"[Speaking as the czar] Be respectful of the well-meaning integrity of the servants you elected and appointed to help me run this burg." Second edict: "Send me all your money."

— R. Murray Campbell

"I would like to see every effort made to keep our coastline, harbors, ponds and marshes clean and free from contaminating run off and failed septic systems. Our shoreline, beaches and inlets are what makes Cohasset a spectacularly beautiful place to live. We are so fortunate."

— Millie Oswald

"Cohasset is doing a good job in most areas. The train is now almost ready to re-connect us to the rest of the world. So I would address another area of transportation (which is also an area of commerce and recreation).

"Our harbor management is what I would choose to make improvements with. We have a small but vital harbor. We need to make it more accessible to more people. We need to allow more people to have moorings and move the mooring assignment process along. We need to make all town docks accessible to all people (the lobstermen seem to rule at some), and we need a more visible, responsive harbormaster. Visiting boats should be welcomed and not discouraged as they now are. Most towns with a central harbor have lots of town-generated activities and news. Our harbor could be a focal point for town residents to gather for more small boat activities, festivals, etc.

"Let's see more excitement and access around the harbor!"

— Heidi Maitland

"My first three official acts as Czar of Cohasset would be: 1) Divert all funds and manpower to the construction of sidewalks. 2) Declare January 20th Too Far From the Nearest Holiday Day, with a parade through town featuring floats from which single-dose packets of Prozac and Saint John's Wort are tossed to the freezing, dispirited crowd. 3) Wire-tap all Cohasset-to-Cohasset phone calls so that I might finally be the first one to hear something around here. And to protect the citizenry."

— John Lengyel

"Increase the maintenance budgets for the library and schools!"

— Sheila S. Evans

"My first edict would be to have senior rental housing as a part of the Cook property RFP.

"My second edict would be to make a one-way around the block downtown: south from Elm to Brook, east on Brook and north on Elm, to South Main Street. This would make the down town a lot more friendlier and give a lot more much needed parking."

— Merle Brown

"I would make it a law that business establishments, restaurants and anyone else who must have a dumpster involved in their property be made to hide it from general view. They are ugly and should not be in view of the general public anywhere in Cohasset."

— Phil Smith

"As Czar of Cohasset:

"1). Promote Common Good over self interest; 2). Cohasset politics will again be nonpartisan — not red or blue.; 3). Expect that every Cohasset citizen spend a day behind a teachers desk; 4). Encourage support of local shops and restaurants."

— Nancy Sandell

"Prohibit the use of airspace over the town by all commercial, and private, aircraft, ban the use of cell phones in public places (including while driving), and require sequential music, visual art, dance and theatre instruction for all children, K-12, in Cohasset public schools, as well as mandatory attendance at all Rusty Skippers concerts (by adults and children alike)."

— Czar Eric Oddleifson

"If I were czarina, everyone 14 and older would have to volunteer six hours a year for the town and registered voters would, like jury duty, have to go to one town meeting every five years. Then I would sell a few Faberge eggs and correctly fund the town's maintenance and facilities budget so our buildings would be clean, sanitary and appropriately repaired."

— Patience Towle

"Hmm — if I were czar, I would move right to the top of my to-do list a communal epiphany that no room in the inn as a seasonal story is really not seasonal at all. Probably if that earlier family had the wherewithal to pay for a room, they would have found one, and their newborn child wouldn't have been subject to a drafty barn. So it is in our community. If we go beyond the letter of the law and open up Cohasset to families who now can't afford it, we shall be ever the richer in spirit and knowledge. We had much to learn from that long ago family. We have much to learn from families who just might become neighbors if the price is right and fair and affordable.

"Yep, room in the inn, housing that's affordable, would go right to the top of my czar agenda. Then again, I would prefer that such policy rise from a communal will that would preclude the edict of a czar who may not always wield such beneficence!"

— Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull
First Parish Unitarian Universalist

"My first edict would be that electric lights be removed from all trees on the Common except those on the Christmas tree planted there for that purpose."

— Mary Hartshorne

"And mine would be that leaf blowers be banned from use."

— John Hartshorne

"To have all roads along our waterways be reserved for cyclist and pedestrians on Sundays (allowing one-way traffic)."

— Rick Swanborg

"My wife and I will be leaving for a church in Philadelphia in a few weeks. One son will remain, another is in college. I am not much for czars but I will leave you with this prayer: that the intensity of a small town be balanced by the compassion of a big God; that the drivenness of success be tempered by the mindfulness of faith; and finally that the fear of scarcity that binds us to have and hold be transformed to a trust in abundance that frees us to give and give thanks."

Love to all,

— Cliff Cutler
Saint Stephen's Church

"If I were czar or czarina, I would proclaim that each citizen must start to think as a member of a community as opposed to just thinking as an individual with assumed 'rights'. That would mean that a person couldn't build a house without stopping to think how that might impact the families who are already in the neighborhood. It would mean that altering the terrain so that it negatively effects the drainage in the neighborhood would not be allowed. It would mean that a citizen couldn't install outside spotlights that will shine into his or her neighbors' windows and keep other people awake at night. It would mean that leaving your dog to bark all day when your neighbors are home would be unacceptable. And it would include a reminder that a friendly greeting makes the day pleasanter for everyone."

— Susan Playfair

"I would find a way to have the train stop in or near the village. A pick up and drop off stop between Smith Place and Sohier Street would make sense. People could actually walk to the train, thereby eliminating the use of the car altogether. A large bike rack would be a great idea too. People could stop and do errands in the village, the Post Office, shops, etc.

"Since the train is coming anyway, why not get some actual benefit to the village out of it?"

— David Bigley

"I'd improve the public schools to the point no one would leave for private schooling; what amazing sports teams we'd have."

— Steve Langham

"If I were the Czar of Cohasset, I would persuade divergent groups to reflect on the needs of each other. Often in past years when there was an agenda for sewage, senior housing, schools, open space, revitalization of downtown or the train, the advocates organize and then declare a mandate. This states the obvious. But what is the motivation?

"The Czar would weigh the noisy against the quiet. No need for nasty e-mails. What a tranquil town! An island of peace in an unsettled country. 'Peace cannot be kept by force. It can only be achieved by understanding'— Albert Einstein."

— Margy Charles

"I would order all of the various groups who have an interest in the Cohasset schools (e.g., the School Committee, Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee, PSO, teachers union, and the Concerned Cohasset Taxpayers) to get together to select an outside consulting firm to assess our schools, with the stipulation that all parties agree to implement whatever the consultant recommends. That way, when the consultant informs us (as it inevitably would) that our schools are underfunded and falling behind in every respect — course offerings, class size, custodial and maintenance, teacher salaries, and extra-curricular activities — there would be no dispute about raising taxes to do what is needed to prevent our schools from sliding into second-rate status."

— Andrew Quigley

"If I were Czar of Cohasset, I would have a thorough audit and cost analysis of all town and school departments, programs and buildings conducted and immediately implement corrections where needed in order to free up monies for priority areas."

— L. C. Jenkins

Wow, that's hard since I have more than one. So, here you go in order of priority: 1). provide complete funding of the school budget; 2). manage further housing growth thoughtfully; 3). finish the sidewalk on Forest Ave.; 4). sewer the entire town; 5). add wings and enlarge the stage at town hall (okay, my own selfish wish)."

— Barbara Baumgarten

"I would ask for volunteers to head up formal community watch groups to revive the 'old Cohasset' feeling to address the issue of child predators, especially given the sighting last week of a Level 3 Sex Offender (who lives in Norwell) near one of our bus school stops."

— Gabriel Gomez

1). Find ways to lower property taxes; 2). Revitalize the Cohasset Village by attracting village appropriate small business, retail shops, pharmacy, etc. (not changing the character of the village).

— Pat Ranney

"First, I do not aspire to dictatorship. Rather, I would prefer making suggestions, listening and negotiating.

"I would hope that in 2006 that there will be a more respectful atmosphere in our discussions: in the Mariner letters and columns, at town committee meetings and at Town Meeting. Even on issues we care deeply about, there is always the possibility that we may be wrong (hard as that might be to accept.) In any case, personal attacks do not belong in our exchange of views. Listen, respond and move on.

"Secondly, when making public statements, we should first check our facts and then re-check them. We all make mistakes, but we should make every effort to avoid using incorrect information. What we say and write is hard to retrieve and correct. A democracy needs informed, participating citizens respecting others' points of view."

— Patricia Facey

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

Citizen nomination form on page 15

Deadline is approaching

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The deadline for nominations for the 2005 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 6.

In keeping with an 13-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored John Coe as Citizen of the Year, a WWII veteran, whose volunteer service at the Senior Center helps make it a warm, friendly place. He was also recognized for his service as the beloved Town Crier at the Village Fair and for his countless other good deeds behind the scenes.

The deadline for nominations for the 2005 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 6. Please see the nomination form on page 15. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Letters of nomination by email to mford@cnc.com are also welcome.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2005 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2006.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the13th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

- 1993: Gerard T. Keating.
- 1994: Joseph D. Buckley.
- 1995: Dr. Robert T. Sceery.
- 1996: The Rev. Gary Ritts.
- 1997: Anna Abbruzzese.
- 1998: Katherine Stanton.
- 1999: Clark Chatterton.
- 2000: Mary Jeanette Murray.
- 2001: Glenn Pratt.
- 2002: Arthur Lehr.
- 2003: Marjorie Murphy.
- 2004: John Coe.

2005 was a memorable year for Leo Clougherty (2) and the CHS boys lacrosse team, hitting their stride late in the season and advancing all the way to the Division 3 state championship game before losing to Medway.

Virginia Spofford and her Skippers softball teammates went on a big run at the end of the season to once again qualify for the state tournament.

Right, Dave McKenna was one of three individual Division 3 state wrestling champions, joining Joe Kehoe and Shane Dorian. As a team, Cohasset also took home the state championship trophy.

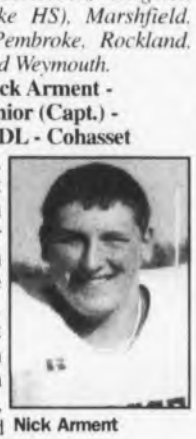
The banner says it all; the Cohasset Little League team was the best in the South Shore this summer, and was one of the last 16 teams in the state to be playing in the Williamsport Little League Tournament.

All-Scholastic football team



Cohasset's Nick Arment and Dan McCarthy have been named to this year's Mariner All-Scholastic football team.

Arment anchored an offensive line that was arguably the best in the South Shore League, while McCarthy was a key contribution on both sides of the ball, playing tight end and middle linebacker. The Skippers' third senior co-captain, Dave McKenna, has been named an Honorable Mention to the team.

Next week, the Mariner announces its All-Scholastic team for girls soccer.

-- These teams were selected by Marinerland Sports Editors Mark Goodman, Julie Ann Nevero and Nick French with the help of area coaches. Only public school athletes were considered from our 13 towns: Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Kingston (Silver Lake HS), Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Nick Arment -
Senior (Capt.) -
OL/DL - Cohasset

Nick Arment

A big, dominant presence in the interior on both sides of the ball... Cohasset likes to run between the tackles, and Arment's play at right guard is the biggest reason why...At 6-foot-3 and 280 pounds, is strong in the trenches, but quick and agile enough to block on the edge as well...Says defeating Hull on Thanksgiving was the team's biggest game of the year...Also points to the 14-14 tie with eventual Super Bowl participant Archbishop Williams in September as a season highlight, saying the team "showed its true colors in that game"...Overcame a serious leg injury last season to have another standout year on the line...Has been actively recruited by a number of Div. 1 and Div. 1A programs, and is in the process of visiting campuses...Currently says he would like to study either business or history...Enjoys watching the History Channel...Also plays basketball for Cohasset High School...Cohasset coach Tony Rolfe: "Nick was our go-to lineman. He's probably the best lineman I've every coached."

Dan McCarthy -
Senior (Capt.) -
LB/TE - Cohasset

Dan McCarthy

Arguably Cohasset's top player on both sides of the ball...Was in a lot of tackles from his middle linebacker position, and was a key blocker in the Skippers running game...Also a reliable target between the hashmarks for the Cohasset passing game...

Says winning the South Shore League in his sophomore year (2003) and going undefeated in the regular season last year are his top high school football memories...Says the Nov. 11 game against Norwell was his best, as he led a strong defensive effort that held the Clippers to just nine points...Has applied to a number of colleges, including Fordham, UMass-Amherst, Univ. of Vermont and George Washington...Plans to play rugby in college, becoming interested in the sport from talking to teammate Rob Murley, who played rugby in his native England...For the past two summers, has traveled to West Virginia as part of the Appalachian Service Project, which helps rebuild homes...President of the student council...Was part of the school's production of "Grease" last year...Cohasset coach Tony Rolfe: "Dan is probably the best linebacker in the South Shore League, in my opinion. He had to play both inside and outside, and did both extremely well."

Tim Wells - Junior
Receiver - Abington

A three-year starter on the Abington team, Wells started the season at quarterback before switching to receiver midway through the year...The results were immeasurable as Wells (eight catches, 123 yards in Bowl) and QB John Creamer connected on several big plays and eventually won the South Shore League title and Div. 3 Super Bowl title...Wells (6'1", 170) scored a late touchdown against Archbishop Williams in the Bowl, starting a comeback effort that would eventually lead to a 21-20 victory and the Green Wave's second title in three seasons...Doubling up as a safety, Wells recorded nine knockdowns and an interception...An SSL and Eastern Mass. All-star, Wells scored 10 touchdowns this past fall...He is also a standout basketball and baseball player at AHS...Just a junior, Wells still has a lot to do on the football field.

Ronny Dunn - Junior
O/D Lineman -
Abington

Saved some of his best football for last as Dunn (6'5", 285) turned in an immense defensive performance in the Green Wave's Div. 3 Super Bowl victory over Archbishop Williams...To put it mildly, this guy was everywhere in Abington's Bowl showdown with Archies, recording a key sack to stop a drive and making eight tackles in the contest...One of the most versatile players on the line, Dunn played every position on the defensive side this season and recorded a trio of sacks each time...The South Shore League and Eastern Mass. All-star was most effective in clearing paths for Abington's running backs, particularly at tackle and guard...Dunn also plays basketball at AHS as a center...Just a junior, Dunn will be the leading returnee on the Green Wave line next season...He has hopes of playing football in college.

Steve Golbranson - Senior
Fullback - Abington

One of those guys who can muscle through defenses for those tough yards, Golbranson rushed for more than 950 and 14 touchdowns this season, sharing the ground duties with teammate Joe Gabriele...A three-year starter on the Green Wave squad, Golbranson (5'10", 210) shined both as a running back and as one of the team's top linebackers, recording 15 tackles in the team's playoff semifinal victory over Hopkinton...A strong, powerful presence on both sides of the ball, key runs by Golbranson helped Abington capture the South Shore League title and Div. 3 Super Bowl crown this past fall...A South Shore League and Eastern Mass. All-star, Golbranson also plays baseball at AHS and helped lead the Green Wave to the Div. 3 South Sectional finals two seasons ago with his solid performance on the mound...He will captain the baseball team this spring and plans to continue his athletic career a the next level.

Tom Huddleston -
Senior (Capt.) -
WR/DB - Braintree

Did a lot of everything for the Wamps, as he was their top receiver, defensive back, and did the placekicking from midseason on...Caught 42 passes for 665 yards, but more importantly, set a new BHS record with 11 touchdown receptions...Scored 91 points total...Came up big against top-notch opponents, as evidenced by his performances against Newton North (two TD receptions) and Walpole (seven catches, 114 yards)...Calls the overtime win over Milton on Thanksgiving the season's "best moment, by far"...In that game, caught five passes for 91 yards and two touchdowns, including the game-winner in OT...Not bad for a kid who didn't even start playing football until the eighth grade. "That was the first year my mom gave in," he says...Plans on attending college, where he considering studying criminal justice or education...Also runs indoor track (4x400 relay, high jump, hurdles) and plays baseball for Braintree High...Braintree coach Bill O'Connell: "Tom was our all-everything. He was our top receiver, he was good on defense, and he was pretty clutch with his kicking."

Addison Lynch - Junior
QB - Braintree

The Wamps are in good hands next season with Lynch returning to the helm...Came onto the scene with 179 yards on 10-of-15 attempts and two touchdowns in the season opener against Walpole, and did not look back...Threw for 1,567 yards on the year, and set a new school record with 18 TD passes...Ran for four more scores...In the Homecoming win over Brookline, went 11-for-18 for 157 yards...Saved his best for last against Milton on Thanksgiving, throwing for three touchdowns (including the game-winner in overtime) and running for the game-tying score with 1:17 left in the game...Says that win and breaking records with teammate Tom Huddleston are among his top highlights from the season...Plans on attending college, where he will likely study business and marketing...Aspires to run his own company, and is inspired by his uncle to do so...Also plays basketball and runs outdoor track (110-hurdles, triple jump, long jump) for Braintree High...Braintree coach Bill O'Connell: "Addison is definitely the top quarterback coming back in the [Bay State] league next year. Just a very gifted athlete."

James Carven -
Senior (Capt.)
Quarterback - Hanover

There isn't much this talented player hasn't done over the course of his four-year HHS career...The three-time All-Scholastic was once again the team's go-to player on offense, both running the ball and going through the air...At the quarterback position this season, Carven accounted for 20 touchdowns and nearly 2,400 yards of offense...At his safety position, Carven (5'11", 185) led all Indians players in tackles...For his efforts, Carven was named Hanover's "Outstanding Offensive Player" at the end of the season, one in which the Indians went 1-9 overall and 1-6 in their own Patriot League...Also a basketball player at HHS, Carven is being heavily recruited to play football by several Div. 2 and Div. 3 colleges. Hanover coach Paul Costello: "Carven is just a tremendous all-around football player. He kept us in a lot of games by himself. I was pleased with what we did offensively this season overall, and he was the main part of that."

Mike Perkins -
Senior (Capt.)
Fullback - Hingham

Cited by coaches in the Patriot League as being one of the most talented players on the field this season, Perkins was another Marinerland every-man...For the last two seasons, Perkins has taken the majority of Hingham's punts, kick-offs, extra-point, kicks, while also serving as a running back, receiver, and linebacker...Perkins (6', 190) is a three-year starter on the Harbormen squad and has missed only one game in those three seasons...He has been one of the team's leading scorers for the last two seasons, amassing 96 points in his senior campaign...At fullback, Perkins rushed for more than 700 yards and scored 14 touchdowns for the 9-2 Harbormen (5-2 Patriot League)...He was a key factor in Hingham's run to the Div. 2A Bowl in 2004...The three-time PL All-star is a three-sport athlete at HHS, also playing hockey and baseball...He plans to attend college in the fall. Hingham coach Paul Killinger: "Mike works hard because he loves to play the game. His stats don't come close to telling what he did for this team. He fit perfectly into a system that doesn't like having superstars."

Kirk Weller - Senior Cornerback - Hingham

If opposing quarterbacks threw in this player's direction, odds are he'd make them pay for it...A talented receiver for the Harbormen, Weller made the most noise at the cornerback position...There, Weller ran back a trio of interceptions for touchdowns, while also taking a kick-off return the length of the field for a score on special teams...Weller (6'2", 190) had a total five interceptions on the year and was second on the team in tackles with 78...He racked up 78 points to be the second leading scorer on Hingham squad, which went 9-2 overall and 5-2 in the loaded Patriot League...Weller is a three-year starter on defense and is making his first appearance on the All-Scholastic squad. Hingham coach Paul Killinger: "No one saw what he was capable of doing offensively until this year. He's a good offensive player, but he's one of the best defensive backs in the league. He did a lot of things for us and was a great all-around player."

Charlie Hovespian -
Senior (Capt.)
Defensive end - Hingham

He may not have been one of the biggest players on the Harbormen's defensive line, but his presence was undeniable...Hovespian's (6'2", 180) blistering quickness off the line made him one of the toughest players to oppose on the line...The senior captain and defensive end was Hingham's leader in tackles with 98 and also harassed opposing quarterbacks, recording 11 sacks...The Patriot League All-star also recovered a pair of fumbles for the Harbormen, who went 9-2 overall and 5-2 in the PL...Doubling as a tight end on the offensive side of the ball, Hovespian hauled in five receiving touchdowns and provided the downfield blocking that led to several others...A three-sport athlete at HHS, Hovespian also plays basketball and lacrosse. Hingham coach Paul Killinger: "Ron St. George (former EB coach) used to call Charlie "the snake" because he just slithers by everyone. You can't block him because he's always on the go. He was able to run down (Silver Lake's) Jeff Smith, who we all know is the fastest kid in the league, and tackle him from behind. That's really something."

Hugo Souza - Senior (Capt.)
Halfback/Defensive back -
Marshfield

His coach is ranking him among the top five players of all-time at Marshfield High, quite a compliment considering the success the program has seen over the years...Every opposing defense knew who he was, yet Souza still found success on the field, both running the ball and catching it...A three-year starter and two-year Old Colony League All-star, Souza teamed with fullback Bill Jennings to produce one of the area's best running games...Sharing the ball with Jennings and senior Dave Mulrey, Souza (6', 190) still amassed more than 800 yards rushing, while also hauling in 15 receptions despite missing a few games with an early season injury...Scored arguably the biggest touchdown of the season on a six-yard run in the Rams' Div. 1 slim playoff loss to Brockton, starting a rally that fell just short...As a defensive back, Souza was a force on the outside, recording several knock-downs and more than 50 tackles...Also a member of the MHS track team, Souza has been offered a football scholarship from the University of New Hampshire. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "It's not a matter of stats with Hugo. He was our go-to guy offensively and defensively. If we needed someone, he's who we went to."

Kurt Leone - Junior Quarterback - Marshfield

Just a first-year starter at quarterback, Leone often looked like a seasoned veteran this past fall...Playing on a team with a trio of powerful running backs, Leone (6'3, 200) still shined and was never afraid to throw the ball, often changing calls at the line and seeing success...Leone passed for more than 1,200 yards this season and connected for a dozen touchdown passes for the Old Colony League Champion Rams (3-0, 6-4-1)...Had some of his best games down the stretch even though they were losses...Threw for 162 yards against Duxbury and another 132 vs. Brockton in the Div. 1 playoffs...Leone is a three-sport athlete at MHS, also playing basketball and baseball...Just a junior, Leone still has another year to lead the Rams offense...He would like to continue his football career at the next level, particularly at the Div. 1A, 1AA college. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "Kurt is on his way to being a real good quarterback. He knows what has to be done and is not afraid to try something different. He doesn't panic and makes good checks at the line."

John Emond - Senior
Split end - Marshfield

It scares us to think about what more this talented receiver could have accomplished had he played more than just one year...In this his first season with the Old Colony League champion Rams (3-0), Emond was the primary target for Leone and he consistently delivered the goods when the ball was thrown his way...A former cross country runner in the fall, Emond had 33-catches for 631 yards and six touchdowns, just one shy of the school record set by MHS grad and NFL pro Sean Morey...His height and speed were among his greatest assets, standing at 6'4", 180, but it was his great hands that set him apart from other high school receivers...Despite a loss to Duxbury on Thanksgiving Day, Emond shined, hauling in six catches for 71 yards and earning the Senior MVP award for his efforts…The OCL All-star is looking into prep schools, with plans to eventually play football at the collegiate level. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "John has a natural ability to catch the ball with his hands. It never touched his body. The way he was able to go after the football as opposed to waiting for it impressed me. He really opened up our offense."

All-Scholastic football team

FROM ALL-SCHOLASTIC, PAGE

Tim Landry - Senior Guard - Marshfield

Wanna know one of the reasons why guys like Hugo Souza and Bill Jennings saw so much success running the ball this season? Because Landry was clearing the path…At 6'2", 230, Landry was the blocker of choice for Rams ball carriers and rightfully so…His quickness off the line helped the Old Colony League champs (3-0) boast one of the most productive ground games in the area, particularly when the Rams (6-4-1) ran on his right side…Touchdowns by Souza and Jennings on right-side runs in Marshfield's tough loss to Brockton in the Div. 1 playoffs were made possible by Landry's solid protection on the outside…An OCL All-star, Landry is a two-year starter on the line and was responsible for making all the calls there…Landry hopes to play football at the next level, garnering interest from Curry, Endicott, and Nichols college. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "He opened up a lot of holes. He was the key figure in our blocking scheme and we were able to run an awful lot of sweeps on the right side because of him."

Christian Comeau - Senior (Capt.) - OL/DL - Norwell

Capped a remarkable career at NHS with a dominant season in the trenches…An impressive athlete for a young man his size; at 6-foot-1, 250 pounds, often looked like the fastest player on the field…Whenever the Clippers ran to the outside, Comeau was pulling for the lead block, and often left multiple defenders in his wake…Also was a force on defense, spending a lot of time in opponents' backfields…A three-time South Shore League All-Star…Says the November wins over Plymouth South and Cohasset were his best, because of the leadership from he and his fellow captains…Is planning on attending college, though he is not sure if he will continue to play football…Is looking at a career in engineering, and is also a history buff…Also plays lacrosse for the Clippers…Norwell coach Jim Sullivan: "Christian is the only four-year starter we've had. He's really one of the best blocking guards I've ever seen."

Dan Pye - Senior
RB - Norwell

Acquitted himself quite well in his only year as Norwell's starting running back…Ran for over 1,400 yards and scored 106 points, placing him fifth in all of EMass Division 3…A fast, shifty back who could run inside or outside the tackles with equal effectiveness…Calls the Plymouth South game on Nov. 4 (a 27-26 victory for Norwell) his best of the year; he scored three touchdowns in that game…Also scored three times on Sept. 16 against Cardinal Spellman, amassing 200 yards in the 28-0 win…Ran for 158 yards on just 10 carries Sept. 23 against Charlestown…Scored his team's only touchdown in Norwell's 9-7 win over Cohasset…16 carries, 105 yards, two TDs during 21-19 Thanksgiving win over Plymouth…Also started in the defensive secondary…Will be attending college in the fall, where he plans to study business management…Plays lacrosse for Norwell High…Norwell coach Jim Sullivan: "Dan did a great job for us this year. He always seemed to come through when we needed yards."

Evan Kraswoski - Junior
RB- Pembroke

One half of the two headed monster in the backfield for Pembroke this season was Krasowski. He rolled up over 900 yards rushing this year while only sharing carries with others limiting his touches to about 15 per game. He found the end zone a team high 14 times this year. Defensively he was all over the field using his exceptional athletic ability to play where he was needed. He saw time as a safety, cornerback, outside linebacker, and middle linebacker and excelled at all the positions. He will be back next season and is primed for a breakthrough season as he will be a more featured back. Head Coach John McIntyre "He was probably out most gifted natural athlete on this team."

Ryan Mann - Senior (Capt.)
RB/LB - Pembroke

The Pembroke football team had a season the remember this year in only it's second year as a program, and Mann was a big reason why. The senior captain had nearly 1200 all-purpose yards, 900 of them coming on the ground as one of the team's trio of tailbacks. He returned two punts for touchdowns and a kickoff, and had seven touchdowns overall. Defensively he led the Titans with nearly 90 tackles and three interceptions from his linebacker position. His play helped lead Pembroke to a five game winning streak to close out the season.

Head Coach John McIntyre on Mann: "He was the heart and soul of our football team"

Dan Bohenek - Senior (Capt.)
Linebacker - Rockland

A two-year Patriot League All-star, Bohenek is about as versatile a player a coach could ask for…A three-year starter for the Bulldogs on both sides of the ball, Bohenek was as effective a linebacker as he was a running back…This season, Bohenek (6', 200) rushed for 825 yards and 12 touchdowns for Rockland (6-4)…He was also a primary target for quarterback Pat Martin…As an outside linebacker, his coach calls him "tailor made" for the position…Not tremendously fast, it's Bohenek's stellar first step that made him so effective defensively, as he was often able to get a jump on opposing offenses…He was among the team leaders in tackles and was the go-to player on offense…A three-sport athlete at RHS, Bohenek also wrestles and plays baseball…Last winter, Bohenek won a state title in his weight class…He is considering continuing his athletic career at a number of Div. 3 colleges, including Colby-Sawyer, St. Anselms, and Bentley. Rockland coach Ken Owen: "Dan's overall ability is impressive. He can run, he can catch. He just keeps coming at you and never lets up. He's very aggressive and mentally tough."

Chris Fucillo - Senior (Capt.)
Offensive tackle - Rockland

A two-time Patriot League All-star, Fucillo is making his second appearance on the Mariner All-Scholastic team…At 6'4", 270, some might have misjudged Fucillo's ability to move on the line, but that's what cost them…Fucillo's quickness came in handy when protecting running backs like Bohenek, while his intelligence on the field made him a great play reader…It wasn't uncommon to see this talented player block for backs downfield as well…He was among the leading tacklers on the Rockland (6-4) team and made the majority of the calls on the Bulldogs' young line…One of those guys who didn't really rack up the stats, but made his presence known on every area of the field…A three-sport athlete at RHS, Fucillo also wrestles and is a thrower on the track team…He is currently looking into attending schools like Holy Cross, Williams, and Amherst next fall. Rockland coach Ken Owen: "He was our leader on the offensive line. He's extremely intelligent. His innate ability to combine his intelligence with skill was one of his greatest assets."

Joe McCarthy - Senior (Capt.) - QB/DB - Scituate

Joe McCarthy

Voted as the team MVP and the Players Award winner, given to the player teammates most look up to on the team… There was very little McCarthy didn't do on the field for the Sailors this year…The consummate team captain, McCarthy was the team's leading passer, second-leading rusher and second-leading receiver, having spent the first half of the season as a wide receiver…Also played safety and essentially served as the quarterback of the defense…Says the Rockland game was his best, as he threw three touchdowns and no interceptions in the 29-26 Scituate loss…Can run the ball as well as he can throw it, as shown by his 151 rushing yards on just 11 carries in a wild 33-28 win over Hanover…Says finally beating East Bridgewater was also a highlight to the year…Video games and snowboarding are among this multi-sport athlete's hobbies…Will play football in college, and is currently leaning toward Westfield State… Looking into criminal justice or business management as majors of study…Plays right wing for the SHS hockey team…Mulling over his spring sporting options; he played tennis last year and track the two seasons before that…Scituate coach Greg Ranieri: "Joe did it all for us, and he was a great team leader every step of the way. He's just a great kid."

Mike Prouty - Senior (Capt.) - FB/LB - Scituate

Mike Prouty

Ask Scituate coaches who the best defensive player of that weekend's game was, and more often than not the answer was "Mike Prouty"…A very physical player who plays bigger than his size and isn't afraid of anyone on the field…Was a stout lead blocker for the Scituate running game, guiding tailbacks Colby Hawkins and Jay Milkiewicz to big gains…Defensively, was always around the ball and continuously filled the stat sheets with tackles…Calls the game against eventual Division 2A Super Bowl champion Duxbury his best, and earned the praise of his coach for his defensive performance in that game…Says playing Div. 1A Taunton and neighboring rival Cohasset were among the highlights of his season…Hopes to play football in college, and is looking at several schools, including Westfield State, Western New England, and Curry College…Plans to study criminal justice; his grandfather was a state trooper…Will play lacrosse in the spring for the first time since playing in the youth ranks…Scituate coach Greg Ranieri: "Mike is Mr. Hardnose. He's a real smashmouth type player. He's a great instinctive linebacker who made his presence known on every play."

Jeff Smith - Senior (Capt.)
QB - Silver Lake

Smith may be the best football player on this team. As a senior he led the Lakers to a 7-4 record and a second place finish in the Patriot League behind champion Duxbury. Smith was the Laker signal caller but could hurt teams with his legs as much as his arm. His running ability was second to none in the area, as evidenced by him also being the state 100 meter champion in track. His game changing speed left Laker fans and opponents on the edge of their seat every time he touched the football. He scored two touchdowns in the Thanksgiving Day game where the Lakers nearly upset powerhouse Bridgewater-Raynham.

Next season Smith will be competing on a much bigger stage as he will take his talents to The Heights as a member of the Boston College football team.

Josh Doherty - Senior (Capt.)
TE - Silver Lake

Doherty was the favorite target this season of Laker quarterback Jeff Smith. The two hooked up more often than any other Laker receiver, and the results were fruitful. Doherty was also a solid blocker on the front lines opening holes for Smith and the rest of the Silver Lake backfield. He helped lead the team to a 7-4 record, and was named a Patriot League all-star for his efforts. He is an honor roll student and also a starter on the basketball team during the winter months.

Tim Noll - Senior
OL/DL - Silver Lake

The Lakers were blessed with an athletic running quarterback in Jeff Smith and PL all-star David Bradshaw in the backfield, but it was the work Noll did up front as an offensive tackle that cleared the way for the success of the Laker running game. Noll was a solid contributor serving as the anchor on one of the best offensive lines in the area. He was also a standout defensive tackle on the other side of the ball causing pressure on the quarterback and stuffing opposing running games. He was a Patriot League all-star this season on the offensive line.

Adam Smith - Senior (Capt.)
LB- Weymouth

Coming off a winless season a year ago the Wildcats were looking for leadership from some players with the introduction of a whole new coaching staff and Smith came through for them. The senior captain led a young Wildcats squad to a season of redemption, and gives hope for the future. Progress was evident each and every week and Smith was right in the thick of things as the Wildcats ended an 18 game losing streak with a win over Brookline and then ripped off two more wins. Weymouth also took Bay State League Herget champion Newton North to overtime, with Smith having a big game keeping the high powered Tiger offense from getting going. On the field he was one of the top linebackers in the Bay State League, and was named a league all-star for his efforts.

Next season Smith will be gone, and the Wildcats will have a difficult time replacing him.

SKIPPERS ROUNDUP

Ice hockey

By Mark Goodman

For 35 minutes, the Cohasset High hockey team played about as well as it could play Wednesday night against Carver.

Unfortunately, there are 45 minutes in a game. The Crusaders scored two late goals and salvaged a 3-3 tie against the Skippers at Pilgrim Ice Arena in Hingham.

Cohasset held a 3-1 lead after two periods on goals by the Smith brothers, senior Brandon and freshman Andrew, and junior defenseman Conor Holway. Holway's goal at the 8:47 mark of the second period was probably the highlight of the night for Cohasset.

Junior TJ Kennedy controlled a faceoff in Cohasset's end, with Holway taking the puck and charging up ice. He wheeled around the right faceoff circle in Carver's end and fired a lefty wrister over the shoulder of Crusaders goalie Sean Osborne to give his team the 3-1 lead.

The deficit probably should have been bigger heading into the second intermission, given Cohasset's 34-6 shot advantage at that point in the game. Osborne came up with a number of big stops to keep his team in the game, and the Skippers misfired on several quality opportunities.

Which leads us to those last 10 minutes. Cohasset head coach Ben Virga said after the game that his team stopped playing within its system in that time, trying to do too much with the puck. After the Skippers dominated play through the first 35 minutes, it was almost the exact opposite at the end of the game.

No doubt that was the message Virga sent to his team loud and clear with 6:33 left in the game, when Carver scored to make it 3-2. The Cohasset coach called timeout and lit into his players, and they nearly responded 12 seconds later when sophomore RK Quebec had a shot in front, but it was stopped by Osborne.

With 2:06 to play, Carver tied it up when forward Steve Bentley - arguably the only consistent threat to the Cohasset defense throughout the game - walked in all alone and put a shot top shelf over Cohasset freshman goalie Jonny Wade.

Cohasset nearly pulled it out with 20 seconds left, but a Holway slapshot from the point went just wide. Minutes after the final buzzer sounded, Virga was clearly frustrated by a game that his team probably should have won.

"For the first 35 minutes, we played out style," said the third-year coach. "That may have been the best 35 minutes of hockey in my three years here. [After that] I think a lot of guys got excited and tried to score some goals and get some points. At that 10-minute mark, we reverted back and played some form of pond hockey, with everyone trying to do too much."

If there were a few positives Virga will take from the game, he said one was the play of his third line: Kennedy, Quebec and junior Corbin Faber. All three, Faber in particular, were smart and aggressive in the offensive zone and "played our system," said Virga.

The coach also came away impressed with the play of defensemen Frank Wheelwright and Ben Masotta. Blue line depth was a concern coming into the season for Cohasset, but if Wheelwright and Masotta continue to play as they did on Wednesday, that situation will improve tremendously.

With that said, Virga says he is looking for his team as a whole to step it up.

"We're waiting for people to own their role on the team," he said. "I think, right now, everyone is looking around and waiting for someone else to [step up] at the end of games."

Cohasset is back in action tonight in the first round of its holiday tournament, as they play East Longmeadow at 8 p.m. at Pilgrim. Tomorrow, the Skippers will either play in the consolation game at 11:50 a.m. or the championship game at 2:10 p.m. The other half of the tournament will see Blue Hills and Westwood square off tonight at 5:50.

The Skippers don't play again until Wednesday, when they travel to Orleans to take on defending South Shore League champion Harwich-Provincetown.

Girls basketball

By Evan Deutsch

Before they put down their Gatorade and sip on some eggnog, let's hope the girls basketball players make a New Year's resolution - to avoid falling apart in the second half of the game. If they succeed at this wish, they will turn their losing ways around.

Take the Dec. 19 showdown against the Nantucket Whalers as one example. The game started off very promising for the Skippers. Guard Chelsea Grossman lit a candle under the otherwise slow Skipper offense.

In the all-important rebounding department, Katie James dominated both the offensive and defensive boards. Mia Lieb-Lappen and Samantha Lehr reinforced Cohasset's image as a defensive team. Despite the tied score at half time, the Skippers seemed to dominate the play.

When the buzzer sounded to open the second half, Cohasset proceeded to slide faster than a luge sled at the Winter Olympics. The Whalers boarded the Cohasset ship and immediately took advantage of the Skipper inexperience. After 16 very painful minutes, the final score read Nantucket 49, Cohasset 37.

So what happened?

"Our inexperience is a problem," admits head coach John Levangie. "Also, Nantucket's shooting skills are at a different level than ours. That's where we lost it."

If the Skippers want success, their tendency to lose composure must end. The coach sounds optimistic that this will happen.

"The girls get more and more experience every game," explains Levangie. "We're continuing to work on shooting and team offense every day. From there, we'll just have to see what happens."

But don't get the wrong idea. The freshmen's inexperience isn't necessarily holding the team back.

"The younger players contribute a lot to the team," said James. "As they get more and more experience, their skills will be even more effective."

The Holiday Tournament should be a good test. Competing with teams from a variety of divisions, there's no absolutely no telling what will happen. Let's hope Cohasset can defend their home court and boost up their record.

Boys basketball

The CHS boys got into the win column last Thursday with a 50-38 victory over a Holbrook team that had defeated the Skippers a week before in the season opener.

Patrick McCarthy stepped up in a big way for Cohasset, leading the team with 19 points. Jeff Brown chipped in with nine.

Head coach Dorian Bryant said his team came into the game a lot better prepared than the first meeting, and it showed. Free throws were also a key, as the Skippers were more aggressive and the got to the line consistently. They made it count, too.

The same could not be said, however, for Wednesday night's first round of the annual Cohasset Holiday Tournament, where the Skippers dropped a 50-39 decision to Sacred Heart. Missed free throws down the stretch were a problem, as were turnovers.

The visitors stepped up with some timely three-pointers to put away Cohasset, who were led by eight points apiece from Justin Alexander and John McCarthy.

The Skippers were scheduled to take on West Bridgewater yesterday in the consolation game of the tournament.

Snowballs can be dangerous

Complaints about youths throwing snowballs at cars have been cropping up in the police log over the past several weeks.

"Children need to be aware that throwing snowballs at a moving vehicle puts people in danger," Police Chief James Hussey said. "It can cause injury and property damage if the person drives off the road."

Hussey said children, who want to throw snowballs need to do so in a safe place.

"If they want to practice their marksmanship, they need to do so in a field away from where people gather," he said.

On at least one occasion, police have been able to identify the kids throwing snowballs at vehicles and have talked to their parents.

"Hitting a moving vehicle can shock the driver and cause him to lose control," Hussey said.

What's new for kids and teens

Picture books

Allen Say's, "Kamishibai Man," is the story of a retired Japanese street performer, who after many years of retirement decides to make his rounds once more even though such entertainment declined after the advent of the television.

In Sarah McMeneemy's, "Jack's New Boat," Jack vacations with his uncle, makes a toy boat and finds it difficult to wait out stormy weather before sailing his new toy.

Trish Cooke's, "Full, Full, Full of Love," is a tender tribute to the joys of family and food.

Sarah Sullivan's, "Dear Baby Letters from Your Big Brother," starts before his new sister is born. Great scrapbook style. Would be very useful to help prepare siblings for a new arrival.

Juvenile fiction

James Proimos, "When Guinea Pigs Fly!" is a humorous story of three guinea pigs lost in the big city. Great illustrations. Grades two through four.

Shelley Pearsall's, "Crooked River," is a starred review in School Library Journal. The year is 1812. The place is the Ohio frontier. The heroine is 13-year-old Rebecca Carver. Grades five through eight.

Margaret Peterson Haddix's "Double Identity," is suspenseful science fiction. What is going on in 12-year-old Bethany's life?

Len Bailey's, "Clabbernappers," has cowboys, pirates, kings and queens, chess, and non-stop adventure. Grades four through six.

Young adult

Darren Shan, author of the "Cirque du Freak" series has written a new series called "Demonata." Book 1 is "Lord Loss." Chilling! Grades seven and up.

"Sports Shorts" is a collection of eight semi-autobiographical stories about the author's experiences with sports while growing up. Grades five through nine.

Kathleen Benner Duble's, "The Sacrifice," takes place in Andover, in the year 1692. Two sisters are accused of witchcraft and await trial in a miserable prison while their mother searches for ways to free them. Starred Review in Booklist. Grades six through nine.

Matt de la Pena's first novel, "Ball Don't Lie," has a unique narrative voice that mixes street lingo, basketball jargon, and trash talk to tell Sticky's sorry story from a variety of viewpoints. Starred Review in School Library Journal. Grades nine and up.

Margaret Bechard's, "Spacer and Rat," is great science fiction. Jack has spent his whole life in space. Kit is an "Earthie." Add to that a robot and you get a great adventure. Grades seven and up.

Integrating family values with planning

At 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 8, Thomas C. Rogerson will speak at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave. on: "Integrating Family Values with Estate Planning for a Lasting Legacy."

Studies have shown the importance of paying as much attention to values and vision as to money and taxes in estate planning. The following important questions will be addressed:

- Will your children and grandchildren embrace the values most important to you?
- Will your savings foster independence or dependence?
- What will your children do with your inheritance?
- What will your inheritance do to them?
- Are you taking charge of your legacy or will the government make those decisions for you?

Using examples from his extensive experience with individuals and charities across the country and internationally, Rogerson will demonstrate how to join family goals and charitable desires with tax-wise planning and investing to create a unique wealth management plan for one's family.

Rogerson speaks to individuals, business owners, and board members of universities, hospitals and charitable organizations both in the U.S. and outside the country. His audiences include: Lincoln Center, The Museum of Modern Art, the New York Botanical Gardens, Yale University, Harvard University, The Nature Conservancy, the Young Presidents Organization and the World Presidents Organization, as well as many church and other charitable groups. His unique style combines humor and real-life examples, and emphasizes values, virtues and motivation as much as financial considerations.

Rogerson is a Senior Director with Mellon Bank's Private Wealth Management group. Before joining Mellon, Tom spent 23 years in the financial services industry, most recently with State Street Global Advisors.

For additional info, call The Very Rev. Cliff Cutler at St. Stephen's Church (781-383-1083), Sam Pease (781-383-1406), or Gordon Stevenson (781-383-1777).

DESTINATIONS

Upscale Orlando

It's no metropolis, but this city's dining, shopping and night life measure up

By PAUL RESTUCCIA

ORLANDO -- This was the challenge: Experience high-end Orlando and see how it compares to the offerings of other big cities.

It actually did a lot better than expected. Does it rival New York, London or Paris? Or even Boston? Let's get real.

But if you think all there is to Orlando is Walt Disney World and Universal Orlando -- well that's not necessarily true.

The Greater Orlando area is, of course, best known for its theme parks. You could spend an entire vacation there and never even know there's a downtown Orlando.

The city and its environs are spread out. And so are the high-end attractions. So if you want to go exploring, you'll need a car. For the ultimate ride, Luxury Rental Cars of Orlando (407-809-0800) has SUVs and Hummers and convertibles including Corvettes, Mini Coopers and Mercedes-Benz CLK 430s. Or if you intend to party hearty, hire a limo and a friendly driver who knows the place.

Orlando is no stranger to luxury accommodations. At Disney World, for instance, there's the Grand Floridian Resort and Spa and off-property you'll find names such as Ritz-Carlton and more.

Anyone who's gone to Disney World probably has seen the upscale, 18-story Hyatt Regency Grand Cypress resort (888-591-1234; www.hyatt.com), which is visible just off Route 4 as you enter the park. This Hyatt is more than a hotel -- it's a 1,500-acre resort that includes everything from a free-form pool with 12 waterfalls to a 21-acre lake. And that's not to mention a racquet club, an equestrian center (the only such facility in the United States sanctioned by the British Horse Society) and the Grand Cypress Golf Club, a PGA-level, 45-hole Jack Nicklaus-designed complex where local resident Tiger Woods practices. (If you're not quite a Tiger, lessons are available at the highly rated Grand Cypress Academy of Golf.)

My room at the Hyatt Regency Grand Cypress was in the private Regency Club floor where for up to $600 a night, you're treated to not only accommodations but gourmet breakfasts and drinks and hors d'oeuvres in a private lounge with views -- not as impressive as, say, New York, but you do get to see Disney World and the outline of the distant Orlando skyline.

A full day of my luxury quest was spent at, yes, a theme park. But not just any theme park. Admission to Discovery Cove (www.discoverycove.com) is limited to 1,000 people a day. The coup de grace is a chance to interact with a dolphin. You'll have to pay $279 per day ($179 without the dolphin swim), but if you go for the whole nine yards you get to don a full-body wet suit and ride along the back of a dolphin, feed it smelts, watch it jump and be amazed at its social skills.

And the rest of the day you can swim in Discovery Cove's heated pools, enjoy a gourmet lunch (included in the admission price), snorkel in a salt-water pond and observe sharks and barracudas swimming below (they're separated from you by glass). There's also an aviary, where you can take a container of bird feed and let the tropical birds descend on your arms or head to eat.

Orlando has a couple of major names Boston does not -- Wolfgang and Emeril.

After a day of activity, a luxurious dinner and show was in order. So my companions and I were off to Wolfgang Puck's and the Cirque du Soleil. OK, they're in Downtown Disney, but Mickey was nowhere in sight. And it was a night out similar to what you might have in any big city. At Puck's, try the seared foie gras with fig spring roll and pale ale ice cream as the appetizer. Fantastic.

The Cirque du Soleil theater is right next door, presenting its production of "La Nouba" exclusively in Orlando. If you've never been to Cirque, be prepared. Not just for the new age music, great costumes and stage production but for the performers -- amazing trampoline acrobats who bounce and climb, rope artists who climb, swing and unfurl themselves on silk, young Chinese girls who hurl and catch spinning wheels on strings. And one thing you will never forget if you witness it is watching a high-wire artist do a backward flip onto a 2-inch steel wire from 75 feet in the air, with no net. Wow.

There's plenty of opportunity for dancing and partying in greater Orlando (Orlando/Orange County Convention & Visitors Bureau).

In your quest for luxury you might want to get a hot stone or Swedish massage or a facial at the big Grande Lakes Orlando (800-241-3333; www.ritzcarlton.com) after an afternoon shopping at the new high-end Mall at Millenia, which is like Copley Place and the Chestnut Hill Mall rolled into one -- there's a Neiman Marcus and a Bloomingdale's, Dior, Gucci, Louis Vuitton and so much more.

Don't miss a chance to check out Emeril's offerings at Universal's CityWalk, Orlando's best faux downtown. Tchoup Chop is Emeril's take on Polynesian food, with aggressive and amazing spicing. The ribs are especially tasty. Or take a boat across to Emeril's Orlando (reserve months ahead) and order Gumbo appetizer and for an entree the pecan-encrusted redfish. You'll quickly understand why the garrulous chef from Fall River has gained his reputation. For dessert, the banana cream pie is sublime. To work it off, spend a night at CityWalk's nightclubs, with music ranging from reggae, Irish, jazz, dance or rock.

If you're a real city person, you'll want to know what the real downtown Orlando has to offer. It's about 10 miles from Disney World, and we checked it out on a busy Friday night. Downtown Orlando has office towers and condo complexes and street lights -- and streets that cross one another and that you can actually walk on (which much of the Orlando area lacks).

A luxurious night downtown might begin with dinner at Manuel's on the 28th floor on the roof of the city's Bank of America Tower. The restaurant has floor-to-ceiling glass windows with great big city views, and is the place to take your mate for a special celebration. Meat lovers should try the five-peppercorn Angus filet. The chocolate lava cake makes an excellent dessert.

Now you're ready for downtown's night life. There are dozens of clubs that cater to the 20-somethings who work in the city, and visitors, too. It's quite a scene -- and everyone is friendly and approachable (maybe it's a Southern thing, but Orlando beats Boston and New York on that score). There's upscale, downscale, martini bars, dance clubs, gay spots, punk venues -- even a Paris Hilton nightclub, Club Paris Nightclub, all decorated in pink.

On the upscale end, New York-style Rhythm & Flow Ultralounge serves up tasty drinks and DJ spinning.

When the clubs close, downtown Orlando is Kenmore Square insane, with everyone from 20-somethings and yuppies to punkers filling the streets.

The Verdict: We'll always have Paris (the city, not the celeb). But that doesn't mean there's not a lot of high-end fun to be had in this resort city.

How to Find Real Estate for 30% to 50% Below Market Value in 2006

DISCOVER THE HUGE SOURCE OF PROFITS MOST REAL ESTATE INVESTORS OVERLOOK

"I can show you from firsthand experience, it can take just a couple hours of your time to position yourself to make tens of thousands of dollars in real estate." J.G. Banks, legendary probate investor

You can buy choice real estate for 30 percent to 50 percent of its market value, sell it quickly for its full price, and make tens of thousands of dollars on just about every investment.

You can do this with single-family houses. Duplexes. Condominiums. Apartment buildings. Strip malls. Office buildings. Ranchland. Farms. All types of real estate.

The reason these bargain properties exist is that they are part of an estate that's in probate. Don't let the word "probate" scare you. There is no legal mumbo jumbo involved. When you acquire real estate that's part of someone's estate, you're simply helping beneficiaries settle the estate by purchasing its assets.

In just a few hours each week — less time than most folks spend watching TV during a single evening — you can learn to cash in with estates by following my easy-to-follow "estate mining system."

A single mom with three teenagers used my system to purchase the home she never thought she could afford. But when you get the property for half price, that's what can make the difference.

In every neighborhood, it's possible that one or two properties, and maybe more, are in probate. You can find profit-making opportunities close to home. Even areas of town you only dreamed of moving to can suddenly become affordable when the price of real estate drops in half.

To Make Big Money: BUY LOW and SELL HIGH

Rest assured, I'm not talking about rundown foreclosures, bankruptcies, or condemned properties like the slew of so-called "real estate gurus." Properties in probate can be beautiful homes with no mortgage or debt attached, making them some of the cleanest and easiest of all real estate to buy low and sell high quickly.

There is no "For Sale" sign out front, and few people know where to find these properties. But for those who do, it can be a land of riches and the fastest route I know to making big money in real estate.

Why Such Incredible Bargains Everywhere?

Not every beneficiary wants to keep the property they inherited. Perhaps the estate involves people who live out of state and they don't want to change their lives. If a house is willed to more than one person, it's likely the property must be sold to ensure everybody gets their share.

Plus, most beneficiaries want their money quickly. Fifty dollars today is a lot better than the promise of $100 sometime off in the future. Especially when attorney fees are eating away at that $100 value. So you have highly motivated sellers who appreciate you're helping them get on with their lives.

Believe It or Not, a 300% Gain Can Be "All in a Day's Work"

The potential to make significant money is huge. For example, if you purchased just one property at a 30 percent discount, and then resold the property for 100 percent of its market value, you'd make about $45,000 on a property worth $150,000. And with my system, it may not even take a full week's effort to do this.

But here's how you leverage your money to make gigantic profits... assuming you put down 10 or 15 percent to purchase the property, when you quickly sell for full market value, the gain on your initial down payment could easily be more than 300 percent.

Real estate has long been a proven path to making millions of dollars. Almost anyone can walk along this path, and I believe that no route has more moneymaking potential than the one you'll discover in my FREE workshop.

How to Get the Cash to Buy Properties

In addition to learning why it's possible to regularly purchase real estate for as little as 50 cents on the dollar, you'll also discover it's possible to get the cash to fund your offers to buy properties. That means, you do not have to have money in the bank.

My system is so comprehensive that the state of California accredited it. But like just about everything in life, it works best if you work at it.

A gentleman from Dallas purchased 18 probate properties his first year.

Another student bought a vacant lot for $40,000 less than comparable lots on the same street.

You won't find a book on "How to Make Money in Estates" at bookstores. My FREE workshop is the only way to start learning the secrets of "estate investing."

More than $3 trillion worth of assets are in probate. It's a buyer's paradise. Yet there are very few real estate investors who know about it.

I guarantee that if you attend my FREE workshop and put yourself "in the know," you'll be positioned to be "in the money" as never before.

TOP FIVE REASONS TO ACQUIRE PROBATE PROPERTIES

1. BARGAIN-BASEMENT PRICES: The probate market is full of fabulous properties you can snap up for 30% to 50% below market value. Get the home of your dreams for your family, or resell quickly and be positioned to capture a lifetime of gains within days. It's the ultimate "Buy Low/Sell High" scenario.
2. HUGE INVENTORY: There are almost six million estates in probate, with assets worth trillions of dollars. Every type of real estate — from houses to beachside motels — are in probate. According to the Los Angeles Times, there are nearly 44 times more probate properties than properties in foreclosure.
3. BUYER'S MARKET: Purchasing property out of an estate assures you of a highly motivated seller. Most beneficiaries are anxious to sell the house (and other unwanted assets) so that they can pay off debts attached to the estate that must all be settled before the estate can be distributed.
4. ALL KINDS OF TREASURES: Historic architecture, classic cars, fine jewelry, antiques, art, toys, collectibles, and much more enter into probate every day. Millions of items. And they can sit there for years unless you rescue them.
5. IT'S A SECRET: Few people know how to find and purchase property from an estate. Even the beneficiaries don't know how to sell. That means, as a "first in" estate investor, you have little or no competition from other buyers — plus you're helping anxious sellers.

How to Buy Almost Anything for 30% to 50% Off

BUSINESSES. CLASSIC CARS. ANTIQUES. ART. COLLECTIBLES. TREASURES OF ALL KINDS.

There's a whole world of assets beyond houses. To start, there can be commercial real estate including industrial parks and offices. Plus all kinds of personal property — even businesses.

An enterprising young man turned his love for cars, and the knowledge he gained from the J.G. Banks workshop, into a career. The man purchased an auto shop that the beneficiaries had no interest in. He and his brother own and run the business, creating for themselves a potential lifetime of profits from one estate purchase. The flow of wealth didn't stop there. Our student also netted over $22,000 in profit on four cars. All four vehicles were acquired using the J.G. Banks system.

An estate can be your quickest way to acquire a prime business for pennies on the dollar. You can run it, or sell it quickly for market value and position yourself for substantial gains.

Estate hunting is also a great way to start an e-business, auction off your findings, and cash in on the new, thriving e-based economy.

One of our students made profits of 1,000 percent to 3,000 percent on the possessions he found in estates and then quickly sold. There is a potential windfall in every estate you search.

You can use probate to build a tidy business around just about any item or collectible that interests you. Millions of items, and real estate, end up as "buried treasure" hidden in probate.

Local actor shines in holiday classic

Todd Lattimore

Most young performers — especially those who have tasted Broadway success — would probably have to choose a life in the theater over life on the Cape. Lucky ones, however, like Todd Lattimore manage to find a way to have both.

Lattimore, who made his Broadway debut in the 2001 Tony Award-winning revival of "42nd Street," finished a three-year run with the musical and promptly relocated full-time to Falmouth in May 2004. Lattimore soon opened The Lili Pad, a home accessories store at Mashpee Commons and is currently working with partner, Brian Merrill, on the renovation of an old Masonic Temple in Easton. That site will likely serve as headquarters for the pair's burgeoning business. This month, Lattimore is proving you can have the best of both worlds with his role in the ensemble of "Irving Berlin's White Christmas" at Boston's Wang Theatre

"This is my first performing project since I started the business," explained the 29-year-old Lattimore recently by telephone during a rehearsal break. "I'm working all day at the store on the Cape and I'm on stage every night in Boston."

The mere thought of a daily 90-minute drive each way — after working a day job— might put some people off, but Lattimore says the performer in him just couldn't pass up this particular opportunity. "The show is great. It's better than the movie, which is quite a lot to say, but still true. It has everything from a story about love between various people to music by Irving Berlin which is nothing short of genius including songs like "Let Yourself Go," "Blue Skies," "I Love A Piano," and, of course, the title song."

Set in a picturesque Vermont Inn, the production — based on the 1954 movie musical of the same name which starred Bing Crosby, Danny Kaye and Rosemary Clooney — is being directed by Tony Award winner Walter Bobbie ("Chicago"). It also reunites Lattimore with Randy Skinner who choreographed the "42nd Street" revival.

"As a performer, I'm often a pretty tough critic. This show, however, is just overwhelmingly, amazingly well-cast, well-directed and well-choreographed. Randy Skinner's work in particular just oozes this time period. We have a 35-member company and a 26-piece live orchestra. It snows on stage and it snows in the audience. It's just dreamy."

With his new business open seven days a week, Lattimore has found it less difficult than some might imagine to leave behind the bright lights of Broadway. "I stayed in New York for three years and achieved my dream to be on Broadway, to go to the Tony Awards and see the show I was in win Tony Awards, to be on a cast album and to dance on the television broadcast of the Macy's Thanksgiving Day parade. I did everything but create a role in a new show. Otherwise, '42nd Street' was a dream job from start to finish. I always trust my instincts and go with them, however, and so I have no regrets at all about leaving New York. I couldn't have asked for a better place to settle than the Cape. I didn't really know what to expect at first, but I love it. Now, I never want to go over the bridge. I just want to stay on the Cape."

"Irving Berlin's White Christmas" will be on-stage at the Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont Street, Boston, through December 31. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit www.wangcenter.org

LISTEN To Life

GETTING DIRECTION

Hearing instruments with directional microphones help listeners better understand conversation by selectively amplifying sounds coming from the front and amplifying sounds coming from the sides or rear less so. In a noisy situation, if the user looks at the person he or she wants to hear, the directional microphone can help him or her pick out the desired voice from the background noise. Directional microphones are available in both behind-the-ear and in-the-ear hearing aids, but they are not available (and could not work) in completely-in-the-canal hearing aids. With some models of hearing aid, it is possible to select between a directional microphone and a conventional "omni-directional microphone" by using a button or switch on the aid or a remote control.

Although more sophisticated and technologically advanced than ever before, today's hearing instruments keep one simple goal in mind—helping the hearing impaired hear better! Hearing instruments of today are getting smaller and smaller, but their benefits are getting bigger and broader. Come hear what's new at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. You may just hear some things you haven't heard in a long time. PH: 781-337-1144. Our website is www.familyhearing.net. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits and Mass Health.

P.S. The ommi-directional mode may be useful in some situations such as when listening to music.
